CLEARS WAY FOR WAR ACT

WILSON GOES DEFENSE LIMIT; UP TO CONGRESS

Makes All Possible Moves Under Laws—To Ask More Authority.

Washington, D. C., March 24.—Having taken virtually every defense measure possible before the assembling of congress, President Wilson and his advisers in the executive branch of the government are concentrating their efforts to prepare for the more sweeping steps for which congressional authority will be sought.

The final step in the defense plans taken by the president was his reported decision to call out the national guard from some of the eastern states. This may be done tomorrow. Other units may be called out later.

The details of the steps to be recommended to congress are held in closest confidence, but officials let it be known today that among the rest a general military budget, coördinating many items of expense deemed imperative, will be laid before the house and senate when the extra session begins a week from Monday.

BUSY DAY PUT IN.

During the day the Council of National Defense held a long conference with its advisory committee of seven industrial leaders who mapped out mobilization plans for the country's economic resources; the navy department awarded contracts for twenty-four destroyers, and called a conference of steel and other material companies for next week to consider means of speeding naval construction, and the war department announced that failure of the army appropriation bill at the last session of congress would not be permitted to handicap the army's preparations.

Regulations were promulgated to guide the country's newspapers in a voluntary censorship preventing publication of details which might embarrass the government.

DEPARTMENT IN ORDER.

With these developments President Wilson kept in close personal touch. Late in the afternoon, after a walk, he went to the state, navy, and war building, and visited Secretary Baker and Secretary Daniels at their offices. The talk with the war secretary lasted nearly an hour.

Regarding the activities of the war department, Secretary Baker made this statement to the newspaper men:

"Of course, everybody knows that the international situation is tense. The war department, like every other department of the government, is busy with a state of preparation, but without attempt on the part of the department or anybody else to determine what that preparation is for, except to put our national strength in a state of efficiency.

"Everybody realizes this is a sort of unnatural situation. We are making preparations and buying supplies and all that sort of thing, and yet the policy of the country is still to be determined by the legislative body, and just what will happen is to be determined by the president and congress.

"All that you can say of the war department is that it is pressing ahead all purchases of everything that will be needed to keep an army, if the army is to be called upon."

SUPPLIES ORDERS PLACED.

Contracts for quartermaster's supplies, such as clothing, shoes, tentage, etc., have been placed up to the limit of available funds, with a provision for the automatic extension of the orders on a large scale as soon as additional funds are available.

In this connection it was stated officially that the country was in a better position to get quickly an adequate supply of army rifles than ever before in its history.

The general military budget to be laid before congress is expected to include many army measures which failed at the last session, and which now are being restudied and coördinated. The nature of any recommendations has not been disclosed.

Returning congressional leaders have begun to lay their plans for whatever the president may recommend at the extra session, and today Chairman Kitchin called the house ways and means committee to meet next Wednesday.

On Monday Representatives Flood of Virginia, Ragsdale of South Carolina, and Harrison of Mississippi, members of the foreign affairs committee, will confer with Secretary Lansing. The specific questions to be discussed have not been revealed.

DEATHS BLAMED ON LOAN SHARKS

Hounded Mother Believed to Have Poisoned Girl and Then Herself.

Once again, seemingly, the loan shark has scored a death. But this time it is two deaths. The authorities are working in the belief that Mrs. Katherine Keyes killed her daughter, Genevieve, 22 years old, and ended her own life because she was in the toils of the loan agencies and her financial troubles were more than she could bear.

Dr. E. H. Flinn, for whom she kept house at 1865 South Sawyer street, told the coroner of the tragedy yesterday. He said that a few days ago Mrs. Keyes unfolded her story to him. Her wages, she said, had been threatened with garnishment by a firm of loan agents.

Said She Owed $17.

Mrs. Keyes was working for the American Chicle company, 1328 West Monroe street. She owed $17, she said, and she must pay at once, else the action would be taken and she would lose her place. She was fearful lest she be out of employment. The doctor loaned her the $17.

By odd coincidence, a member of the employing firm told the coroner that Mrs. Keyes died leaving due her $17 in money, a week's pay, and $2 overtime.

Dr. Flinn said that besides the woman's seeming dread of the loan agents, he had knowledge that she owed still another debt for furniture.

On top of this the physician had recently decided to close his apartment and that would compel her to find another home. This seemed to depress her, too. He said she had appeared quite despondent.

Dr. Flinn testified that he missed a quantity of strychnine from the medicine chest in his home. He said Mrs. Keyes had access to this if she chose, as she had the freedom of the house.

Genevieve, who was to have been married soon, told those who were trying to save her life just before she died that her mother gave her a glass of epsom salts. It is the theory of the police that strychnine was mixed with the salts.

Then, when the mother had satisfied herself that the girl would die, it is believed, Mrs. Keyes drank a like potion.

THE GERMAN CRISIS

Brand Whitlock, American minister to Belgium, ordered to withdraw from Brussels to Havre, France. German violation of "solemn engagements" given by Washington as reason for order.

Press associations agree to government censorship and will not distribute news tending to disclose military and naval policies of the government.

Berlin paper says war will be declared if American ship fires on submarine.

Navy department awards contracts for twenty-four destroyers. Calls conference of builders in effort to help them rush work.

Administration makes all possible defense moves prior to opening of congress, giving it clear way for war action and adding to Wilson's authority.

SUMMARY OF THE WAR

Petrograd admits withdrawal from part of positions on Roumanian front.

MUST DRAFT MEN, UNDERWOOD SAYS

Mobile, Ala., March 24.—[Special.]—United States Senator Oscar Underwood today expressed the opinion that the American government through congress would be forced to call for 1,000,000 men and that resort would have to be made to conscription in a modified form to raise this army, not because the government favored or wanted conscription but because there would be no other way to raise such an army.

Here's What T. R. Will Do if Government Permits

Jacksonville, Fla., March 23.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt in an address here today said he would have a division of American soldiers in the trenches of France within four or five months if given permission by the government.

FOUND—DEAD

French Cavalry Patrol Discovers Body of James R. McConnell, Chicago Aviator, Killed During Flight Over German Lines on March 19.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

COMPIEGNE, via Paris, March 24.—The body of Sergt. James R. McConnell of Chicago, who was lost in aerial battle in Somme sector on March 19, has been found in a small wood near the village of Jussy, on the Crozet canal, at a point where the fighting was the heaviest a few days ago.

Thursday afternoon a French cavalry patrol skirmishing cautiously through the wood came on a wrecked aeroplane and beneath it the body of an aviator in a sergeant's uniform. The dead man's features were unrecognizable and his identification papers, evidently stolen by the retreating Germans, were missing.

Inquiry revealed the fact, however, that the biplane, which had fallen from a great height, bore the number of McConnell's machine and was of the same type.

The body was pierced by several machine gun bullets, indicating McConnell had been killed in the air.

Members of the Lafayette escadrille raced to the front to see whether it were possible to recover the body and bring it back for burial behind the lines at escadrille headquarters.

Whether their mission was successful has not been learned, but the probability is that McConnell already is buried where he fell, in which case the body cannot be removed until after the war.

SISTER ILL IN CHICAGO.

Mitchell D. Follansbee of 65 Bellevue place, brother-in-law of McConnell, said last night when informed of his fate, that Mrs. Follansbee was ill and he feared the news of her brother's death would react seriously. He was unable to say as yet what the relatives would do about bringing the body to Chicago for burial.

20,000 AID PLOT TO TAKE BUFFALO

Planned to Seize City and Burn Munition Plants if War Comes.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 24.—[Special.]—Officials of the Buffalo chamber of commerce today appealed to Gov. Whitman for a militia guard over the industrial plants at Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and Tonawanda. Pending the arrival of the troops, a heavy armed guard was placed about the plants.

This action was taken after the chamber of commerce had received information, reported to have been given to the directors by federal secret service operatives, that a giant conspiracy had been entered into for the destruction of the Buffalo water works and the big industrial concerns in the three cities, especially those engaged in the manufacture of munitions, in case war is declared between the United States and Germany.

Organization of 20,000.

The secret service men are said to have informed the officials of the chamber that there is in Buffalo a well organized anti-American party, having 20,000 members. In its operation the organization is said to have arranged to get possession of all the arms and ammunition in the city. They are said to have listed the rifles and small arms in sporting goods stores.

The ramifications of the plot are widespread. It was arranged to move at once upon the plants picked for destruction in the event of war being declared and destroy them. The destruction of the waterworks was the next step, and then the armories of the Seventy-fourth New York infantry and the Third artillery were to be seized.

Lacks Police to Guard City.

Chief of Police Martin, called into conference with the secret service men and the chamber of commerce directors, told them he did not have enough men to guard this city.

A house in South Division street in which the secret service men say the plot was hatched, has been watched for months.

CALL CITIZENS TO WAR RALLY ON MARCH 31

Leaders Demand Nation Be Made Ready for Fight to Finish.

Chicago's patriotic appeal to the nation, coupled with a demand for universal training and the placing of the whole country on a war basis at once, will be issued from the Auditorium theater next Saturday night.

In thirty minutes yesterday the general committee in charge of the preliminary arrangements whipped the plans into shape and laid the groundwork for what promises to be, as President Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago said, the greatest massmeeting in the country's history.

MANY OVERFLOW MEETINGS.

Simultaneously with the main gathering at the Auditorium many overflow and neighborhood assemblies are to be provided, with the idea of voicing a single note of ringing patriotism in every section of the city.

That the message to be given the country at this time may be carefully considered and framed as a historical document, the committee named a committee on resolutions, with President Judson as chairman. Other members of this committee are Joseph H. Defrees, Bishop Samuel Fallows, John C. Shaffer, and Maj. Robert R. McCormick.

This committee will receive drafts of resolutions and suggestions up to 9 o'clock next Thursday morning, and from these will assemble the pronouncement that is to be submitted to the central meeting at the Auditorium.

WANT ENFORCED DRILL.

One of the strong paragraphs in the declaration of principles will be a demand that congress at the outset take steps to inaugurate universal training, not only that all may share in the common defense, but as a vitally important step in providing a defense to withstand the great shock of the conflict if war actually is declared and the nation is plunged into the world conflict.

Maj. McCormick submitted the draft of such a declaration at the conference as indicative of what he thinks the nation should do as one of the first moves in preparing for real war. He said he has no patience with those who look upon a possible declaration of war as of little importance.

REAL WAR IF IT COMES.

He was certain that if war comes it will be real war and that the nation will have to go into it whole heartedly and with a vengeance. For one, he said, he would not be a party merely to a meeting that was going to regale itself with a talk. As one who, he added, would participate in the war if it came, he wanted the Auditorium meeting to set forth a clear cut declaration of principles and point out what the nation has got to do to be saved.

This view was accepted as the attitude of the committee and it was understood that when the resolutions are drawn it will be set forth at some length.

QUIBBLE OVER WORDS.

Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, who presided, submitted a draft of the call for the massmeeting. It stated that the nation now is in a state of actual war.

Some objections were raised to this. William Rothmann and Lessing Rosenthal contended that "on the verge of war" would be better.

"I take it that no one here wants war," said Mr. Rothmann.

George L. Lee, a Spanish war veteran, jumped to his feet and shouted:

"I do. I am for war. Our people have been murdered. Our property has been destroyed. Our honor has been insulted. I am for war against any and all nations guilty of these things. I want to participate in it, and the first thing I want to see is a part of Mexico made a drill ground for at least 500,000 American soldiers."

Mr. Dickinson, as the discussion became more vigorous, said he believed a state of war actually does exist, but that he was so intent on getting action and sending out from Chicago a clarion

REPORT WILSON PLANS SHAKEUP IN HIS CABINET

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special.]—A shakeup in the present Wilson cabinet and the creation by congress of two new portfolios, a secretary of munitions and a secretary of transportation, is predicted by well informed persons with access to official information.

The changes are contemplated because of the war situation and are likely to be announced soon after the new congress makes its expected declaration of war against Germany. The secretary of transportation is likely to be Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

Franklin K. Lane has been mentioned as an excellent choice for secretary of the navy to succeed Daniels.

As for Mr. Baker, few "insiders" will be surprised if it is announced that Attorney General Gregory will resign and that Mr. Baker will be shifted to his place.

FRENCH TO CITE GERMAN ABUSES

PARIS, March 24.—The French government gave notice tonight of its intention to address neutral countries in protest against "acts of barbarism and devastation on the part of the Germans in the French territory which they are evacuating."

The official note announcing this says: "Entire villages have been pillaged, burned, and destroyed. The acts of the Germans are not destined to check the operations of the French armies, but have as their object the ruining for many years of one of the most fertile regions in France."

RAISE ARMY TO SEIZE MEXICO?

Galveston, Tex., March 24.—That an army of between 150,000 and 200,000 men, organized for the purpose of seizing the reins of the Mexican government and subsequently confiscating American and British property, is in the process of formation was the information brought here today from Mexico. The story was also verified by Germans here who were approached and asked to enlist.

POLICE SEARCH CABARETS FOR M'GOORTY GIRL

Friends of Jurist Also Believe the Movies May Have Lured Her.

Chicago was turned topsy-turvy last night in the search for Miss Mary Frances McGoorty, daughter of Judge John P. McGoorty, who left her home, 929 East Forty-fifth street, last Monday, and who apparently has been "swallowed up." Police of numerous other cities have been asked to join in the search, and every clew that might lead to the return of the girl has been followed with zeal.

Police of all stations made inquiry, detectives were assigned on special details, personal friends of Judge McGoorty constituted themselves into scouting parties, and yet the 16 year old girl, who is not known to have made her way in the world alone save on her brief trips to and from school, thus far has successfully evaded all inquiry.

TWO LINES OF INQUIRY.

Two general lines of investigation have been followed. One of these has been based on the belief that the girl left home in the hope of achieving an ambition as a singer. The other is that she has endeavored to find employment as a motion picture actress. So far there has been no result in following these clews.

Judge McGoorty and Mrs. McGoorty have given the fullest information to those who are making the search. The judge said his daughter has been eagerly pursuing the hope that some day she might become successful either upon the stage or in pictures. He said she has not been discouraged in these hopes, but only asked to defer such plans until she should finish school.

WATCH ALL CABARETS.

In the belief that the girl would apply for a place in one of the numerous cabarets of Chicago, persistent search was made through the last twenty-four hours in all places of entertainment. This resulted in many identifications being made of the girl, but in the end all the "discoveries" came to naught.

At the Green Mill garden a young woman was found who seemed to answer every detail of the description of Mary Frances, but a relative of Judge McGoorty set this hope at rest with a glance. This same mistake was made in a number of the foremost cafes, but still the search kept on.

COLLEGE INN CREW.

It was found at the College Inn that early in the week a girl, who is believed to have been Mary Frances, called.

"I am sure it was the girl," said the manager of the cabaret. "She was young and her general appearance gave me the idea she was entirely out of place. She told me she was a dancer and wanted an opportunity to demonstrate her ability. But it is not unusual for stage struck girls to come here asking for a chance, and I knew she was not the sort, so I sent her away. She told me she had studied Mrs. Castles' dancing and felt she would be a success."

The history of the case has not been traceable since Tuesday afternoon around 4:30 o'clock. At that time Miss McGoorty was seen on a Kenwood elevated train going south. She was seen by and was in conversation with Maxwell Smith, a boy acquaintance.

Young Smith could not be sure of the day, but he told the police that he believed it was on Monday, but in view of other facts developed with reference to her activities on Monday it is believed Smith must have been mistaken and that it was on Tuesday he saw her. He said he left the elevated train near the end of the line and the young woman still remained.

MOTHER IS PROSTRATED.

Mrs. McGoorty is prostrated by the absence of her daughter. Since midnight last Monday the mother has sat in the front window of the McGoorty home looking down into the street hoping for the return of Mary Frances. She was her mother's favorite and always had been under the especial care of Mrs. McGoorty. It is the first time the girl has been away from home unless under very carefully chosen chaperonage. Mrs. McGoorty has not tasted food since Monday and her health is said to be endangered.

Like her mother, Elizabeth McGoorty, the little "pal" sister, too, is grieving for the loss of Mary Frances. Elizabeth has been ill in her bed for the last few days. Her constant cry has been for Mary Frances as the mother sits gazing tearfully into the street.

It was at 2:15 o'clock on Monday that Mary Frances left home. There was to be a party by a small coterie of her friends in St. Xavier's academy and Mary Frances set about as if to go there. St. Xavier's is only a short distance from the McGoorty home. Her mother was ill in bed and Mary went to her room to bid her good-by.

The girl kissed her mother and went to another room, where she took up a suitcase and then came out to where her sister Elizabeth, 12 years old, was playing. Mary halted and seemed undecided for a moment.

"Do you think I ought to go?" she asked.

Elizabeth thought she was referring to the party at St. Xavier's.

"Why, of course you ought to go," she replied. "Go and have a good time."

Starts for the Door.

This seemed to decide Mary and again she took up the suitcase and started for the door. Elizabeth asked her what she was going to do with the suitcase.

"Mary would never carry a parcel through the streets," said Mrs. McGoorty. "She had a great personal pride and I can't understand how she could bring herself to carry a bag through the streets."

This same thought seems to have entered the mind of the sister.

"I am taking a dress to the cleaner's," Mary replied. "I want to have it back in time for Sunday."

Goes to Loop Store.

The next step in her movements was discovered in the hat department at Marshall Field's. The girl entered here in the middle of the afternoon and inquired for Mrs. Josephine Hamilton, the head of the department and a woman who has known the girl since childhood. Mrs. Hamilton was not in, so the girl proceeded with the purchase of a hat.

She selected a golden straw hat with a Roman ribbon, a vari-colored cloth that at once became extremely conspicuous. She again asked for Mrs. Hamilton with the request that she wanted the hat charged to Judge McGoorty, who, she explained, was her father.

The clerk demurred at this and asked her to wait until Mrs. Hamilton returned, when the matter of the charge could be arranged.

"No, never mind," replied the girl, "I'll pay cash for it."

Takes Money from Bank.

This she did. Later it was found in her room at home that she had taken $15 from her small bank that stood on her dresser. This, then, made it apparent that with the purchase of the hat she still had remaining $10.25.

After purchasing the hat she went to the cloak department and purchased a blue silk coat with an opera cape. This she purchased on her father's credit.

It seems now that she went from the store directly to the Chicago Athletic club and applied to the doorman, asking him to cash her personal check for $5. She was recognized as the daughter of Judge McGoorty, and the doorman took the check inside to the office and returned with the cash.

"She started west in Madison street," said the doorman, "but I didn't watch her. She was swallowed up in the crowds as soon as she neared State street."

In the same half hour another young woman left the athletic club in a taxicab and drove south in Michigan avenue and later in Prairie avenue to Fiftieth street. At that point detectives discovered they had been following another girl so identically attired that at a half block she would be easily mistaken for Miss McGoorty.

Tells Her Ambitions.

Mrs. McGoorty last night gave an outline of the earlier years of her daughter and from this it seemed possible that ambition for a career caused the girl to desert her home.

"Mary Frances always was a studious, affectionate girl," she said. "She was always home loving and of a happy temperament. She was fun loving and we always tried to lend her encouragement in good wholesome fun. She was exceptionally fond of dancing and we never denied her this pleasure except that we wanted to be sure she was in good hands.

"She was fond of having her young friends come to the house and they were in frequently. Most always they would take up the rugs and dance. She was a good dancer and Mrs. Vernon Castle was one of her idols. She often talked of her and probably she had an ambition to become as celebrated as a dancer.

Sister Visits McGoortys.

"Shortly after the holidays Sister Theresa of St. Mary's of the Woods came to visit us and she said she thought Mary ought to return with her and complete her education in the convent. We suggested this to Mary and our suggestion met immediately with a violent opposition. She said she would not go there.

"We were surprised a few days later when she came to us and said she had made up her mind to go to St. Mary's. A few days later she went there and remained for a time, but she was not satisfied. She called me and her father on the long distance telephone several times and said she could not stand it any longer. Then, a few days later still, Sister Theresa called me up and suggested we had better have Mary come home, for she was altogether unsatisfied. We brought her home and she seemed happy again.

Takes Institute Course.

"She said she had rather take a course in the Kenwood institute and we humored her in this. She was attending the institute up to the time she left.

"At home Mary took instruction in piano and singing. She had a pretty voice and took a great deal of pride in it. Also she became proficient on the piano and was fond of playing for guests. We were always extremely guarded about her habits, and her reading. We never permitted her to go anywhere without a chaperon, and it probably is an index to her feelings that one day she said to me:

"'Mother, I think you must have lived in the stone age; you keep such a strong watch over me.'

"But I did what I thought was best. This is a big city. I kept a watch over her reading also and chose the best of the current magazines for her.

Longed for Stage Career.

"A year ago I knew she was nourishing an ambition to go on the stage, and I had a long talk with her about the matter. I told her if she would be diligent and finish her education I would see that she received a good education in whatever work she chose.

"This pleased her, and she accepted my offer and even pinned me down to an absolute agreement. In the week previous to her departure she was never more pleased and happy. She was always singing and dancing about the house, and I felt that she had forgotten all her ideas about a 'career.'

"In the last few weeks she had become more interested in motion pictures than ever before and always was wanting to attend a movie show. I noticed that when we left the selection of an evening's entertainment to her she would choose to go to a movie show.

Youth Gives Her Tickets.

"In the last week—I think it was on Saturday—she told me that a boy she knows—his name is Goldstein, I think—gave her a pair of tickets for a Mary Pickford performance. She asked me to go, but I didn't feel I ought to attend a theater in Lent, so I declined. She took her sister, Elizabeth. Elizabeth is her favorite sister, and she always has displayed a wealth of affection for her. This little girl is sobbing her heart out now for Mary."

And the mother, too, Mrs. McGoorty, ill when her daughter left home, rose from her bed of sickness to sit by the window.

West Side Searched.

Under the direction of Sergt. John Donohue, chief of the probation officers, detectives made a search of the cabarets in the west side, but this was without result. In some cafés a number of persons were found who said they recognized the photograph of the girl. But later another girl was discovered who answered in some respects the description of Mary Frances.

Inquiry was made in all of the railway stations and Pullman offices. Harry Malone, a Pullman porter on the New York Central lines, said he was sure he saw the girl on his car from Chicago to Toledo. He said his run ends in the Ohio town and he was quite certain the girl went no further. However, he was not exact in his description of the young woman he saw.

CHILDREN JOIN SEARCH FOR BOY LOST NINE DAYS

The children of St. Vincent's school, Osgood street and Webster avenue, and the boy scouts have organized parties to search for Hugh Gibbons, who disappeared from his home at 2129 North Racine avenue on March 16. Already they have scoured many parts of the north side.

The missing boy had been much interested in stories of country life told by Bernard Healy, a friend, and it is thought he may have left to become a farmer. Healy has not been seen since the disappearance of Gibbons.

Hugh is 13 years old but is said to appear 16. He is 5 feet 6 inches tall and has brown hair, blue eyes, and a dark complexion. At the time of his disappearance he wore a dark stocking cap, a gray checked overcoat, a blue serge waist, and green knee pants.

Robbers Get Silk Worth $4,000; Escape in an Auto

Robbers broke into the W. H. Rogers company, petticoat makers, on West Monroe street, yesterday, and stole silk goods worth $3,500 to $4,000. The men pried open a steel door and are believed to have used an automobile in hauling away their booty.

U. S. TURNING TO UNIVERSAL ARMY SERVICE

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special.]—With the United States, in the opinion of the administration, "virtually in a state of war" with Germany, there has been a tremendous development of sentiment in the new congress in favor of the establishment of universal military training.

Whether the administration does or does not indorse the army general staff's plan for training 500,000 American youths a year for the defense of their country, the proposed legislation is bound to receive serious consideration at the forthcoming session of congress. It is a question that will not down.

Converts to the plan by the score have been gained in congress by the failure of the administration's plan for providing an army as embodied in the Hay act and by the demonstration that only by this means can an army adequate to the defense of the nation be provided, not only for war, but for insurance against war. Moreover, it has been demonstrated by the border mobilization of the national guard that universal military training affords the only fair and democratic basis of national defense.

"Tribune" Asks Stand.

The gowth of sentiment in congress in favor of universal military training has been disclosed by THE TRIBUNE poll. A letter was addressed to every senator and representative in the new congress, propounding this question:

Do you favor the establishment of universal military training, under which a body of the youth of the country, estimated at 500,000 a year, would be prepared for the defense of the republic?

"SERVICE BY ALL" WILL BE DEMAND FROM ILLINOIS

Unanimous Vote Expected to Be Given by Legislature.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., March 24.—[Special.]—Illinois is ready to give unwavering support to universal military service as the first essential of the moment. The joint resolution to be offered in the legislature Tuesday probably will have the unanimous support of the senators and representatives.

The resolution will be a simple declaration that Illinois believes universal service is the first necessity in the making of an army, and it will urge that the president and congress make it the foundation stone in the legislation in the special session of congress.

Demands Full Support.

The resolution will inform the senators and representatives from Illinois that the state expects them to stand unanimously for universal service.

The downstate newspapers almost unanimously and without respect to party or faction support this action.

Gov. Lowden has issued no official statement, but it is believed that he will declare emphatically for universal service and assume the leadership in support of the resolution.

Guard Being Made Ready.

The last of the requisitions for supplies for the Illinos National Guard to equip the troops at full war strength went forward to Washington today from the office of Adj. Gen. Dickson. The adjutant general's staff now is making ready for mobilization the moment the order comes.

The adjutant general is making no provision for volunteer regiments in excess of the full war strength of 19,822 men already authorized for Illinois in the latest orders from the war department.

Gen. Dickson directed particular attention to the section in the war department order that said that no national guardsmen will be accepted for the federal service unless he shall have taken the federal oath. Less than 25 per cent of the troops, it is reported, have taken the oath.

CITY SHOULD BUY COAL DIRECT, BENNETT SAYS

The city should buy its coal direct from the mines, Frank I. Bennett, commissioner of public works, believes.

"That would be the real business way to handle the situation," he said. "It would save the city thousands of dollars every year. We could contract to have the coal delivered direct to the pumping stations."

Mr. Bennett has informed the finance committee that the failure to make contracts last fall will cost the city $175,000 this year, because of the increased price of fuel.

Chicago Civil War Officers to Train Recruits, Is Possible Plan.

Men who wore the blue during the civil war may be called upon to give further service to their countrty by assisting in training recruits in case large contingents of volunteers are called. In Chicago there are eight retired army officers and four retired naval officers who may see duty.

Some of the retired Chicago officers not only saw service in the civil war, but in the Spanish-American war. One of these is Col. Henry R. Brinkerhoff, who now at the age of 80 and despite infirmities, is willing again to serve.

Retired Officers Here.

Maj. Edmund Luff, 520 North Park avenue, said:

"I think it possible the war department may ask the retired officers to help. I cannot discuss it now, as you known an army officer is not permitted to speak."

Other army officers here include Col. Harvey C. Carbaugh, civil war veteran; Lieut. Eugene C. Ecker, retired several years ago on account of ill health; Capt. William M. Goodale, 5247 Broadway; Maj. Josiah H. Kellogg, [illegible] Prairie avenue; Capt. Youir [illegible] Marks, Michigan avenue; and Lieut. William R. Van Sant, attached to the signal corps.

About 100 aviators and thirty aeroplanes will be furnished the government by Chicago, according to members of the Illinois Aero club, which now has about twenty-five trained aviators instructing seventy-five Chicago youths at Memphis, Tenn.

The flying school will remove to Chicago on May 1 when several score more of Chicago youths are expected to offer to take the aviation course.

Four Chicago civilians who last week were enlisted in the signal enlisted reserve corps of the army by Capt. F. R. Kenney have been ordered by the war department to proceed to the Curtiss aviation school at Newport News, Va., for instruction as aviators.

They are Herbert F. Gates, 823 West Jackson boulevard; Earle H. Tonkin, formerly a clerk at the Morrison hotel; Arthur T. Wiederhold, 1539 East Sixty-first street, and Henry V. Lucas, 316 North Mayfield avenue. They will be assigned as sergeants in the aviation corps.

NEW GERMAN LINE PLACED IN PERIL BY ALLIED GAINS

French Capture Part of Stronghold of La Fere —British Advance.

BY ARTHUR DRAPER.

LONDON, March 24.—The French drove forward today in the Oise river sector of France and, after violent fighting with German forces, occupied the west bank of the Oise river on a front of four miles, and captured two of the forts in the defensive system of La Fere.

Gen. Nivelle's troops stand tonight on the outskirts of La Fere, which guards the Hindenburg line near its southern tip.

While the French cannot be said to have penetrated the new German defensive line, they have established themselves in positions that threaten the enemy's positions.

On the east bank of the Aillette river the French swept ahead a considerable distance, occupying several villages.

Roisel Falls to British.

The important village of Roisel, seven miles east of Peronne, fell to the British during the day, and Gen. Haig's troops forged ahead slowly on a front of a mile and a half southeast of Croiselles. Along the whole British front, there was spirited fighting, the Germans counter attacking at many points.

Apparently, the Germans have given up hope of retaining the important position of La Fere. Yesterday they opened the sluice gates and flooded the town and the entire region about it. The French now look down on the position from the heights on the west bank of the Oise, and, as their artillery is being brought up, the enemy's lines soon will be exposed to an enfilading fire.

The presure on the German line at this point, as well as before St. Gobain and the lower Coucy forest, is becoming so powerful as to endanger the main German defenses.

STAKE ALL ON BATTLE.

BY LINCOLN EYRE.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

PARIS, March 24.—The German empire is preparing to stake its existence as a military power on a titanic pitched battle between Arras and Champagne. Gen. von Hindenburg's withdrawal may already have come to an end. Its terminus is a battle field, carefully prepared months beforehand, upon which Germany's real fighting forces will turn against the entente armies in a formidable attempt to efface the disastrous results of the Marne and Verdun.

The Germans will fall back to strategic positions, from which they will seek to sweep forward across the open fields upon the French and British hosts. There will be no lingering in underground bombproofs while the artillery paves a road to the enemy's parapets. The action will be begun by encounters of cavalry patrols, and infantry will clash in charges and counter charges, as they did at Gettysburg and Waterloo.

Simultaneously there will be German diversions at Verdun and elsewhere and possibly a strong offensive by the trench warfare method on the lines in the Ypres salient.

Arms Are Twofold.

The German aims may be said to be twofold. They hope to administer a defeat to the allies and at the same time or shortly afterward, win through to the coast of the English channel, whence they can, of course, strike at Great Britain with renewed vigor.

If their plans fail they will retire all along their front from Flanders to the Woevre plain, and establish themselves in prepared trench fortifications on the line of the Meuse in France, and on the line of Ostend, Bruges, Ghent, Brussels, and Charleroi in Belgium.

From all I can learn, both Hindenburg's scheme for victory and his alternative of a further retreat to the Meuse, are doomed to fail. The success of the first implies that the German troops outnumber and can outfight the allied soldiers, and the second cannot be accomplished unless the pursuit by the French and British forces is amazingly ineffectual.

Point to Rival Claims.

Gen. Ludendorff, who is credited in military circles here with being the real author of the new strategy, is supposed to believe that German armies will triumph over the entente troops in a campaign in the open because large portions of them have had experience with that kind of warfare, whereas the bulk of the French and British effectives have not known any tactics except those of trench fighting.

Divisions fresh from Roumania are being held in readiness to show the allies what the gray green warriors can do in a war of movement, and most of the other units which will be engaged will doubtless have seen similar fighting in Poland or Serbia.

In reply to this claim Gen. Nivelle's experts say they need simply to point to the supremacy attained by the French cavalry and "flying detachments" of infantry and artillery in the numerous conflicts that have already occurred.

MORE MARINES AND OFFICERS' RESERVE URGED

Suburb Stations to Aid in Vigorous Navy Recruiting.

The immediate creation of an officers' reserve in the United States marine corps has been authorized by the navy department, and plans are afoot to recruit the marine corps proper up to a probable war strength of 100,000 men.

Capt. William Brackett, chief recruiting officer of the marines, 628 South State street, yesterday issued a blanket appeal for both volunteers for the officers' reserve and for unlimited numbers of enlisted men.

The peace strength of the marines is 21,000. The corps, however, is about 6,000 men short. Several thousand are expected to enroll in the officers' reserve, providing an adequate force of officers for approximately 80,000 additional enlisted men.

All members of the officers' reserve, said Capt. Brackett, must have had not less than two years' experience as officers in a military organization, a military school, or college. Large numbers of Spanish-American war veterans, he said, are expected to enroll.

Active for Navy Recruits.

Lieut. L. M. Stevens, navy recruiting officer at 130 North Fifth avenue, announced that beginning tomorrow morning he would make a more vigorous campaign for recruits than ever. During the day he received an appeal from the navy department to speed up recruiting to the extreme limit. Several recruiting stations will be opened at once in the suburbs.

Sylvester Sparling, president of the Currying Products company, has been appointed ensign in the naval reserve following the enrollment of his seventy-five foot power boat, Koyote, in the reserve fleet being organized. The Koyote is the first submarine chaser to get into active service. It will be used for training purposes at the Great Lakes training station at present.

Capt. W. A. Moffett has announced that the gunboat Juan de Austria, one of the fastest on the great lakes, will be rushed here from Detroit. It will be used in a campaign at Lake Michigan ports to enroll yacht owners and boats in the naval reserve fleet.

More Power Boats Offered.

More Chicagoans have proffered their power boats to the government. Among those offered yesterday were the United States, owned by William Cochrane; the Bimbo, owned by Charles Bimbo; Eleanore II., owned by Charles Thomas, and the Winnetka II., owned by Avre Boal.

The Evanston Yacht club announces plans to train twenty boys for service in the fleet reserve.

The first contingent of 2,500 bluejacket recruits at Great Lakes station, numbering 200, left yesterday morning on rush orders for "somewhere east."

Two companies of naval reserves are ready for call at the University of Michigan, Dr. R. B. Canfield, dean of the college of medicine, who is at the Blackstone hotel, announces.

PRESIDENT GIVEN PLEDGE OF HELP BY SUFFRAGISTS

Washington, D. C., March 24.—Officials of the National American Woman Suffrage association announced tonight that although they would not lay aside their "constructive, forward work to secure the vote for women," they were prepared to stand behind the president and aid him as far as possible in every national policy he may decide upon in the present crisis. In a statement issued at the organization's headquarters, the "specific undertakings of the national association, some of them already under way," are outlined as follows:

"1. The establishment of employment bureaus for women, with the promise to protect those women against exploitation.

"2. The increase of the food supply by the training of women for agricultural work and the elimination of waste.

"3. Americanization—i. e., by means of classes in school centers, to teach to immigrants national loyalty and international tolerance."

PEACE MEETING TAKES TIME OUT TO PUNCH HEADS

Hecklers Roil Pacifists and Gotham Session Turns Into Riot.

New York, March 24.—A small riot, with open fighting, featured objections of several belligerent and militant spectators to tonight's massmeeting of the Emergency Peace federation.

Three or four persons in the audience, directly adjacent to the speakers' stand, started heckling Chairman John G. Milholland. In a moment several hundred people charged the disturbers, and a free-for-all fist fight ensued.

The hecklers were ejected after twenty minutes of fast and furious fisticuffs. The pro-war advocates were vastly outnumbered by the pacifists, but they put up a hot little fight, in which the pacifists showed they knew how to use their fists.

Madison Square garden was in an uproar during the disturbance. At least 6,000 persons were massed there. A number of women left, frightened at the fighting. No one appeared to be much the worse for the scrapping.

Says Pacifists Are Patriotic.

Mr. Milholland strenuously defended the patriotism of those opposing war.

"We are loyal to the constitution," he said. "We resent to the umtost that these grave questions cannot be settled without going to war."

He then referred to recent events in Russia.

"Are you an American?" shouted a man from the rear of the hall.

"Throw him out," this from the rear.

"No," retorted Milholland, "you won't throw any one out."

Directing his remarks to the man in the rear, Milholland continued, declaring:

"We are not going to inaugurate any dictator in Washington or anywhere else. We want time to consider this question thoroughly and shall refuse to be stampeded."

As Milholland concluded, an officer marched out of the hall, taking the man from the rear charged with disturbing the peace. Then the fight started, after some more heckling.

Wilson Hissed and Cheered.

Mention of President Wilson by Dr. Judah Magnus started a storm of hisses, followed by a wave of applause of appreciably lesser volume.

"I wish to say that I have all honor and respect for our president," he said when the noise had died down. "As we leave here tonight let us not forget that the president has kept us out of war."

Bryan's name was cheered, while mention of Elihu Root was booed for a full minute.

Call War Not Justified.

Resolutions declaring that "overt acts, however brutal, do not afford adequate cause for war to a republic whose essential relation to international affairs is summed up in the words 'conciliation, arbitration, and democracy'" were adopted.

"This massmeeting," the resolutions continue, "protests against the proclamation by the press that a state of war exists between the United States and Germany.

"We oppose as undemocratic and inimical to moral and political liberty every form of conscription or compulsory military training. In such training we see the effective tool of the militarism now devastating the earth.

"We respectfully urge that instead of entering upon the misery, distress, and desperation of international warfare, the United States appoint a joint high commission to meet deputies of the German government and by joint agreement to settle the issues involved.

"Finally, we demand that congress should in no case issue a declaration of war nor declare the existence of a state of war without first considering the result of a previous advisory referendum."

'GET PREPARED FOR QUICK MOVE,' DICKSON' ORDER

Battery E to Assemble Today—Men Ready for Action.

"Be prepared as quickly as possible for any eventuality which may arise."

Such was the order received by officers of the batteries of the Illinois national guard from Adj. Gen. Dickson in Springfield yesterday. It put the artillerymen on the alert.

While the order was not officially made public, the fact that it reached Chicago was disclosed to THE TRIBUNE last night. As a result of receiving it at least one organization, Battery E, will assemble its men in the stock yards armory this morning to pack up all surplus equipment.

"We were told to pack up and be ready to move in ten days," said a member of Battery E.

Similar activities will occupy the men of Batteries A, B, C, D, and F within the next few days, it is believed.

It was also reported to THE TRIBUNE that the men of the First infantry have been ordered by their company commanders to "get their uniforms back from the cleaners as speedily as possible." Col. J. B. Sanborn, commanding that regiment, could not be reached last night for verification of the report.

Men Ready to Go.

News that two regiments of the Massachusetts militia are to be called out caused Illinois guardsmen to flock to their armories, eager to receive the first indication of mobilization orders in this state.

"We're anxious to get our orders to move," said Col. Foreman of the First cavalry.

"Our men are practically sleeping on their guns," commented Col. Sanborn of the First infantry.

"I spent all afternoon at the armory waiting for orders," stated Col. Daniel Moriarty of the Seventh infantry.

"We're ready to go anywhere at any time," was the observation of Col. John J. Garrity of the Second infantry.

Furloughs Canceled.

Officers of the national guard have been notified by Gen. Dickson that all officers' furloughs have been canceled. The guard continues its preparations to get ready for mobilization, which officers predict will occur just as soon as a state of war comes. The requisitioning of supplies for the guard is going ahead full swing.

Capt. F. R. Kenney of the United States army recruiting service at 526 South State street says recruiting is breaking all records for peace times.

"No less than 400 men will be enlisted during the month if the present record keeps up," said Capt. Kenney.

25 Chicagoans for Radio Work.

The enrollment of one full company of radio operators for the intelligence department of the United States army and the start of a second company were the accomplishments yesterday of Capt. John C. Dillon, radio inspector.

Twenty-five Chicagoans who have amateur wireless plants here, responded during the day to Capt. Dillon's call. They were enrolled in the first company, along with twelve Cleveland operators, twelve from Valparaiso, Ind., and thirty employés of the Marconi Wireless company of the great lakes division.

A call for volunteers for the second company will be sent by Capt. Dillon to amateur wireless men living in Chicago suburbs and cities within a radius of 100 miles of the city.

Vardaman Fears Universal Army.

Biloxi, Miss., March 24.—Universal military training involves a great menace to the south, according to Senator Vardaman of Mississippi. "It means arming of millions of Negroes, which will be the greatest menace the south has known," he said today.

ISSUE REPORTS GIVING DETAILS OF ALL FIGHTING

Capitals of the Nations at War Tell Results of Various Battles.

FRENCH FRONT

FRENCH.

PARIS, March 24.—North of the Somme we have forced back the enemy to the outskirts of Savy, where he had established himself in a line of trenches prepared in advance from the Somme to the Oise.

Our troops, continuing their success, gave battle to the enemy, who defended himself foot by foot, and pushed him about 1,000 yards north of Grand Seraucourt and Gibercourt, occupying the west bank of the Oise from the outskirts of La Fere as far north as Vendeuil. Two advance forts of the defensive system of La Fere fell into our hands.

South of the Oise, in spite of the inundations effected by the enemy, we made important progress on the east bank of the Ailette, regaining several villages and compelling the German rear guards to retire.

In the lower section of the forest of Coucy, north of Soissons, there is little change. We found numerous German dead in the trenches taken by us yesterday north of Margival.

A German long range gun about 12 o'clock today fired a number of shells of heavy caliber on the town of Soissons.

Artillery fighting has been quite marked in the regions of Berry-au-Bac and Reims, as well as in Alsace in the direction of Violu-Py, south of Col de Sainte Marie.

AVIATION.

On March 23 Adjt. Ortoly brought down his fifth German airplane. Today our special guns brought down a German machine, which fell in our lines near Le Veuve (Marne). This afternoon a German hydro-airplane, proceeding in the direction of Etretat (north-northeast of Havre) was captured at sea. The two aviators were taken prisoner.

On March 23 one of our airplanes from a low altitude bombarded an aviation ground at Marimbois, north of Thiaucourt. A violent fire started in the hangars.

On Thursday and Friday nights our air squadrons dropped 1,160 kilograms of projectiles on factories at Thionville and the Briey basin, as well as on the railway station at Conflans.

DAY STATEMENT.

East of the St. Quentin canal we enlarged our positions appreciably during the night. At some points our troops reached the west bank of the Oise, north of La Fere. We also made progress on the east bank of the Aillette.

Enemy attempts against our small posts near Berry-au-Bac, east of Reims and near Dead Man hill, were broken up by our fire. We took prisoners.

BRITISH.

LONDON, March 24.—Our troops have occupied Roisel, seven miles east of Peronne.

This morning strong hostile detachments again attaked our positions in Beamuetz-Lez-Cambrai and obtained a temporary footing in the village. They were immediately counter attacked and driven out, leaving a few prisoners in our hands.

We have made progress during the day on a front of one and a half miles to the southwest and west of Ecoust-St. Mein (southeast of Croiselles). Enemy attacks on our posts in this neighborhood and north of Boiry-Becquerelle were repulsed.

We carried out another successful raid early this morning east of Arras. The enemy's second line was reached and casualties were inflicted. We also entered the enemy's trenches east of Neuville-St. Vaast. A number of Germans were killed and occupied dugouts were bombed.

The enemy attempted to reach our lines this morning in the neighborhood of Richebourg-L'Avoue (south of Neuve Chapelle), but were dispersed by our fire. Another hostile raiding party succeeded in reaching our trenches west of Messines.

The artillery was active on both sides today in the neighborhood of Ypres. Our fire caused three explosions in the enemy's positions.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, March 24.—Western front: On both sides of the Somme and the Oise daily engagements are occurring between our protecting troops and enemy vanguards. After these frequent engagements, in which they suffer heavy losses, the enemy forces simply grope ahead in a hesitating manner and frequently throw up trenches, being severely hampered in their freedom of movement by our measures.

Yesterday the French attacked our outposts west of La Fere and along the lowlands of the Aillette, also near Neuville and Margival. They were everywhere repulsed.

In the Champagne our reconnoitering detachments at several places on the front succeeded in bringing prisoners from the French lines.

BELGIAN.

PARIS, March 24.—The Belgian batteries counter shelled the German artillery, which bombarded the regions of Dixmude and Steenstraete. There was grenade fighting north of Dixmude.

TURKISH FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, March 24.—In the direction of Hamadan our troops on March 17 occupied the town of Kerind, which had been set on fire and destroyed by the Turks. The enemy withdrew to positions in the vicinity of the village of Khair. The pursuit continues.

On the remainder of the front exchanges of fire are under way.

RUSSIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, March 24.—Front of Prince Leopold: Russian reconnoitering detachments advancing after artillery preparation near Smorgon and Baranovichi and on the Stokhod were driven away.

Southwest of Dvinsk hostile airplanes were shot down by our airmen, as was a captive baloon at Lake Drisviaty.

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, March 24.—Scouting reconnaissances and rifle firing occurred. Southwest of Dvinsk one of our airplanes engaged a German machine. After reciprocal machine gun firing for some time both machines descended rapidly to the enemy's lines east of Novo Alexandrovsk.

ROUMANIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, March 24.—Front of Archduke Joseph: An efficient fire by our artillery and mine throwers preceded attacks in which our troops south of the Trotus valley took by storm and in hand to hand fighting Russian positions on the frontier ridge between the Solyomtar and Czobanos valleys, and brought in 500 prisoners. A Russian advance north of Magyaros that followed soon after failed.

Army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen: There is nothing new to report.

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, March 24.—The enemy yesterday attacked our positions between the rivers Silcha and Chvanich, thirteen and one-third miles west of Moineschi. Under enemy pressure our troops withdrew to the next line of defense, about two-thirds of a mile to the eastward.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, March 24.—Macedonian front: The situation is unchanged. The engagements between Lakes Ochrida and Presba and near Monastir seem to be over for the time being. From March 12 until March 21 the French made attacks every day. They launched in these attacks considerable portions of their Seventy-sixth, One Hundred and Fifty-sixth, and Fifty-seventh divisions, as well as several colonial regiments.

The ground gained on March 15 and 18 by the enemy was compensated for by our counter attacks on March 20 and 21. The dominating heights in the mountainous district west and north of Monastir basin, which had been the objective of the French, are firmly in our hands. The allied troops in tenacious perseverance under heavy fire and in an energetic attack gave proof of their excellent qualities. The coöperation of the infantry, artillery, and auxiliary arms was exemplary, inspired by the clear intentions of a firm leadership. The enemy suffered heavy losses, which seems to be the cause of the present quiet. The troops anticipate further fighting with full confidence in their own abilities.

FRENCH.

PARIS, March 24.—Eastern theater: No event of importance has occurred.

On March 23 a violent bombardment on both sides took place. The enemy directed numerous incendiary shells against Monastir. British hydro-airplanes bombarded Pradesta, Kenalia and Orfano.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, March 24.—On the Trentino there were the usual artillery duels. Our batteries destroyed some trenches in the vicinity of Sacco, west of Rovereto, where movements of troops and materials were observed.

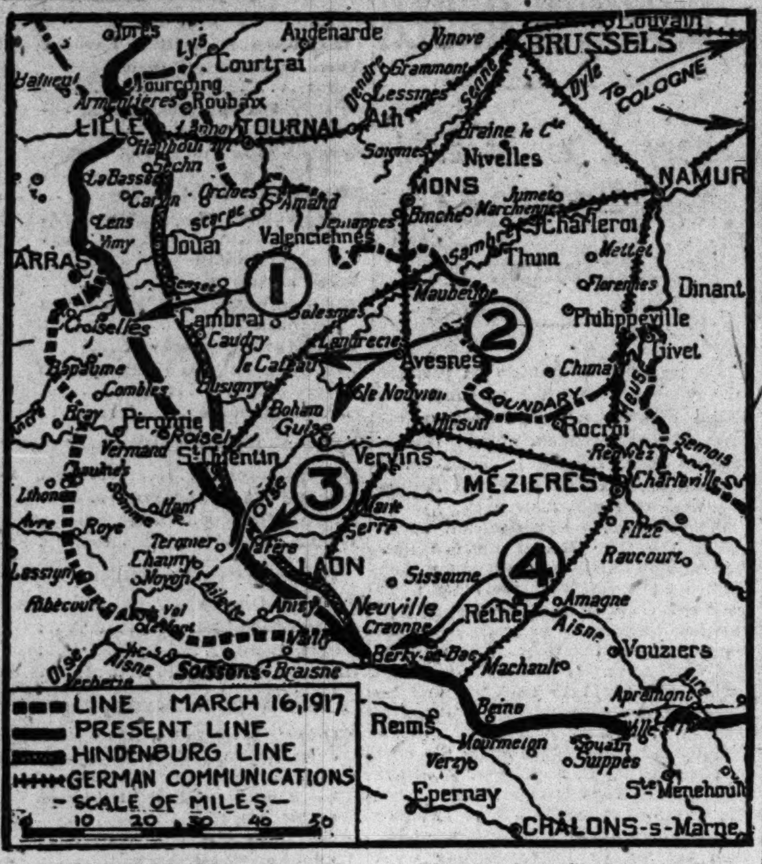
In the Sugana valley, after violent artillery preparation, the enemy yesterday again attacked our positions at the head of the small valley of Coalba. He was driven back and dispersed by our fire.

On the Julian front the enemy artillery yesterday showed increased activity in the area east of Goritz. One of our field hospitals in the town was hit. There were no casualties.

On the Carso last night we repulsed an attack south of Castagnavizza. A few prisoners were taken.

THE SITUATION ON THE FRANCO-GERMAN FRONT

Where the Von Hindenburg Retreat Has Halted and Battles Are Begun.



Fighting all along the advanced British-French line from Arras to the Aisne river indicates the Germans have retreated practically as far as they intend to voluntarily.

While the supposed Von Hindenburg line of back trenches runs straight from Lille through Douai and Cambrai, there is no apparent disposition on the part of the kaiser's men to retreat east of La Bassee, Lens, and Arras. The British have made scarcely no gain between Lille and Arras, but southeast, in the region of Croiselles (1), about three-fourths of a mile of ground was taken by battle.

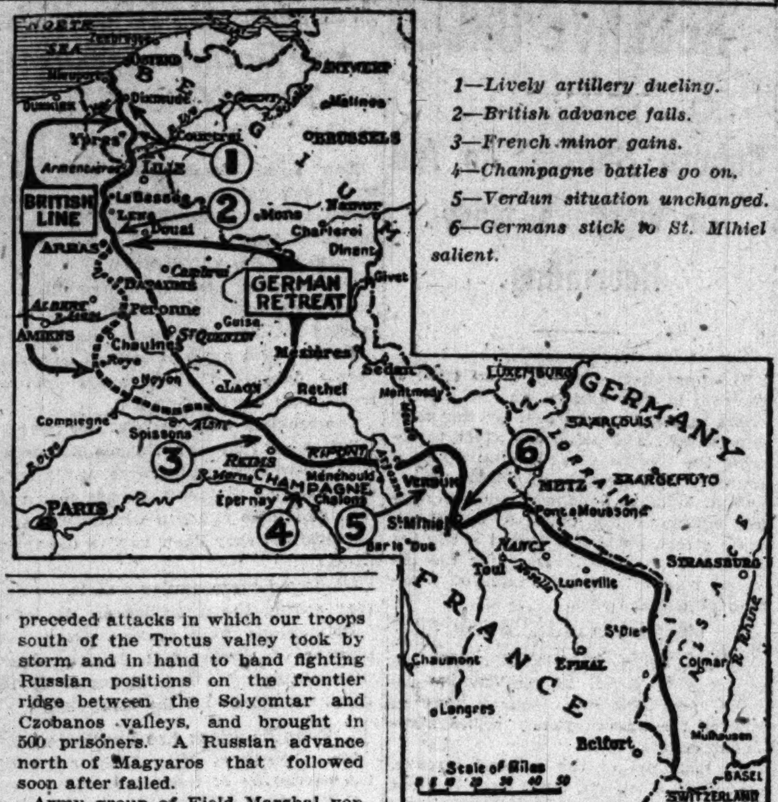
Seven miles east of Peronne the British also met stubborn resistance, but captured Roisel.

The attack on St. Quentin, German headquarters, has become so strong as to make the town untenable. Reports are that the headquarters have been withdrawn to Le Cateau or Guise (2).

But the bitterest stand is being made by Von Hindenburg before La Fere (3). Canal waters south of St. Quentin have been released and La Fere flooded, yet Paris announces the capture of two La Fere forts, with an advance of four miles up the Oise to Vendeuil. This puts the French in a position to flank the Germans and foredooms La Fere. With La Fere gone, Laon will be imperiled from the flank.

Northwest of Reims, near Berky-au-Bac (4), the French report slight gains.

Where There Is Increased Activity from the North Sea to Switzerland.



1—Lively artillery dueling.
2—British advance fails.
3—French minor gains.
4—Champagne battles go on.
5—Verdun situation unchanged.
6—Germans stick to St. Mihiel salient.

THE WAR A YEAR AGO

March 25, 1916.

Fierce artillery duel continued along Verdun front.

Three British aeroplanes lost in attack on German airship shed in Schleswig.

TWO YEARS AGO.

March 25, 1915.

Russians drove Austrians back in Carpathians and won victory in Bukowina.

Ohio Guard Regiment Parades Chicago Streets

Members of the Second regiment of the Ohio National guard, stationed at present at Fort Sheridan, paraded last night to the Strand theater, where they witnessed the film "Heroic France" and marched across the stage. The Paulist choir also was present.

Chinese Taken on Opium Charge.

Three Chinese were arrested yesterday at 129 West Twenty-second street, accused of manufacturing opium pills for commercial purposes. One of them, Lee Kee, was released on a $2,000 bond, while two others were sent to jail in default of $5,000 bonds.

U. S. REITERATES STAND AGAINST REVOLT IN CUBA

Note Reaffirms Support of Government—False Reports Allayed.

HAVANA, March 24.—A note from the American government to the Cuban government reiterating the purpose of the United States to support the Cuban government in its efforts to reëstablish order and condemning the conduct of the rebels was delivered today by William E. Gonzales, the American minister. The note follows:

"It has come to the knowledge of the United States government that in Cuba propaganda persists that in response to efforts of agents against the constitutional government the United States is studying the adoption of measures in their favor.

"To avoid continuation of misunderstandings and misinterpretations of the declarations made by the United States government which have been published throughout the Cuban republic, which defined the policy of the United States in Cuba in unmistakable terms, it is desirable to reiterate the essential points of those declarations."

German-Americans Prove Loyalty.

Kansas City, Mo., March 24.—Two hundred German-American employés of the Heim brewery here today forced one of their fellow workmen to "abdicate" because he refused to salute the American flag hoisted over the brewery. The flag was purchased by German-American employés and German-American hands ran it up the flag pole.

DANIELS AWARDS CONTRACTS FOR 24 DESTROYERS

Calls Builders' Parley in Effort to Help Rush Work.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Navy Daniels this afternoon let contracts for the construction of twenty-four destroyers and announced that he would hold conferences next week with the builders in an effort to coöperate with them in hastening the construction of the boats.

Contracts for nine more destroyers will be let just as soon as the navy department can arrange with builders to take them.

Early Action Unexpected.

In letting the contracts today the navy department acted much earlier than it expected.

Several shipbuilding concerns did not have time to get in their bids, and the department wired them it would be glad to let them have all of the work they can do, on a cost plus 10 per cent profit basis, on the additional destroyers and other vessels which are to be built.

Yards That Get Contracts.

The Union Iron works of San Francisco was awarded contracts for ten; the Fore River Shipbuilding corporation for eight, and Cramps of Philadelphia for six.

The department was obviously discouraged in its inability up to the present time to get more vessels built. It is understood on good authority that the government is anxious to build not less than seventy-five destroyers.

Mercier Aid to German Prison.

LONDON, March 24.—Mgr. Louis Legraive, vicar general to Cardinal Mercier, primate of Belgium, has been sentenced to nine months' imprisonment and deported to Germany for sheltering a discharged French soldier for one night, according to a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam.

THE MODERN CAR IS THE FAMILY CAR

Let the spirit of unselfishness join hands with common sense in buying your motor car. Your wife, your daughter, your son—haven't they the right to motoring pleasure as much as you? That is the added advantage of owning a Detroit Electric. So simple, so easy is it to drive that the whole family can enjoy it together—or singly.

Further—it is better business, if you want to put the matter on a dollars and cents basis, to own a car all the family can drive. For then you double, triple or quadruple the use you get from it as compared to the car you alone can operate.

It is a man's car. Drive it yourself and you will quickly prove its ample power, big mileage range (65 to 100 miles on a single charge), its speed, its vigorous pick-up, its flexibility. And it is a woman's car in point of driving ease, comfort, quietness, availability. You'll both appreciate its freedom from need of service attention and its low cost of operation. Prices $1775 to $2375, f. o. b. Detroit.

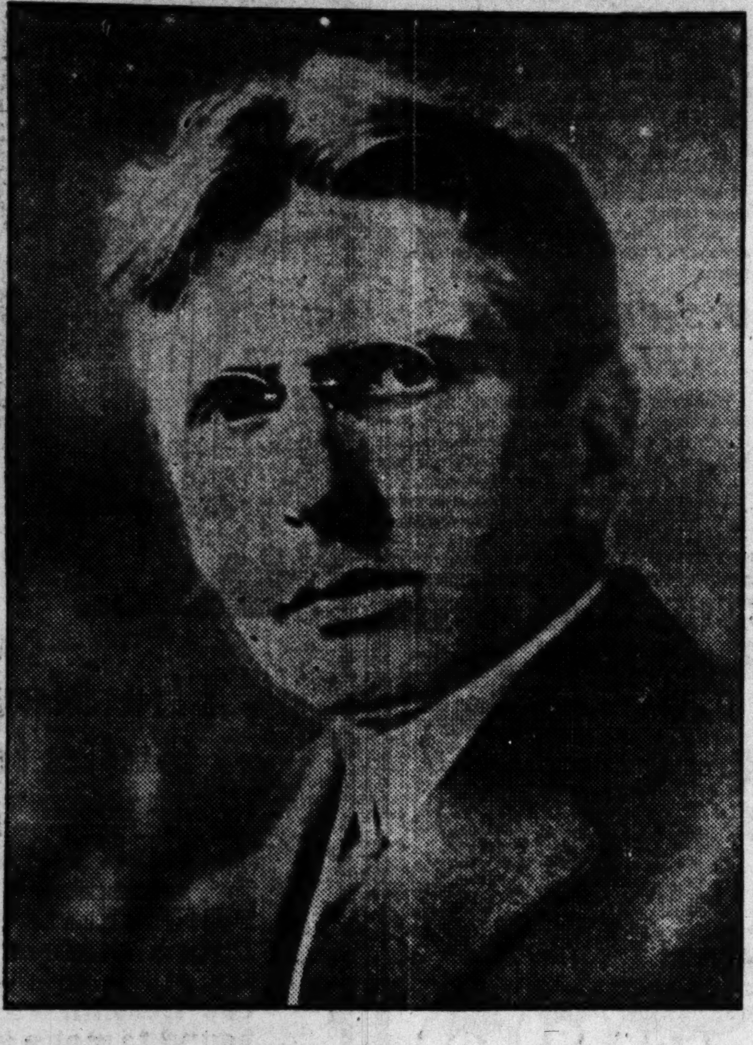
WITHDRAWN FROM BELGIUM

American Minister Who Has Been Aiding Civilians in Territory Occupied by Germans Now Must Retire.



BRAND WHITLOCK

WHITLOCK TOLD TO QUIT BELGIUM; BERLIN ACCUSED

Attitude Makes It Unsafe for Americans—Dutch Take Up Relief.

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special]—Charging flagrant violation by the German government of its "solemn engagements," President Wilson directed the state department today to announce issuance of instructions to Brand Whitlock, American minister to Belgium, to withdraw from Brussels to Havre, France.

Minister Whitlock was directed also to take with him the members of his staff, all consular officers, and all American relief workers in Belgium. At Havre the temporary seat of the Belgian government is established.

Will Remove Americans.

The order of the government means prompt removal of all American citizens now behind German military lines, and there is no concealing the fact that the government was prompted in its action for their safety in view of the constantly growing tension between the United States and Germany.

Although Germany had given verbal assurance that American members of the commission for relief in Belgium would be permitted to leave if they so desire, the administration frankly asserted that it could not risk the fate of Americans to these promises.

Can't Trust Germany.

An announcement issued by the state department said with reference to this point:

"The German government's observance of its other undertakings has not been such that the department would feel warranted in accepting responsibility for leaving these American citizens in German occupied territory."

Fortunately for Belgium's suffering people, withdrawal of American workers does not mean necessarily that the work of the relief commission will cease. Already arrangements have been made for citizens of Holland to take over the work which has been carried on so effectively by American members of the commission.

As for Minister Whitlock, Germany withdrew his diplomatic status and immunities immediately after the break in diplomatic relations with the United States. Later the American minister's courier service to The Hague was cut off and he was denied the privilege of communicating with his government in cipher. Finally he was prohibited from sending messages in plain English.

Sink Relief Ships.

As a climax to this offensive treatment German submarines recently have ruthlessly destroyed several ships carrying supplies to Belgium for the commission on Belgian relief, despite the fact that they were properly marked and there could be no possible mistake as to identity.

There were protests from this government, sent through the intermediary of Spain, but they have wrought no response from Berlin.

That the relief work will be impaired by the withdrawal of Americans there can be no doubt. Director Hoover and his associates had built up a remarkably efficient organization for "feeding a nation." The 10,000,000 people behind the German lines in Belgium are now brought face to face with the most critical situation since Germany rolled the Belgium army into France.

Text of Announcement.

The state department announcement in full is as follows:

"By direction of the president the minister at Brussels has been instructed to withdraw from Belgium with all diplomatic and consular officers, and take up his official residence at Havre.

"After consultation with the commission for relief in Belgium, Mr. Whitlock has also been instructed to arrange for the departure of the American members of the commission.

"This step, the seriousness of which is fully appreciated by the government, was taken only after careful consideration and full consulation with all the interests involved.

"When diplomatic relations with Germany were broken off the normal procedure would have been to withdraw the minister at Brussels and the American members of the relief commission. Both this government and the commission, however, felt a heavy moral responsibility for the millions of innocent civilians behind the German lines, and it was decided that the work of the commission must be kept going, despite all difficulties, until continued American participation became impossible.

"For over two years it has been the single minded purpose of this government and the commission to see that these ten millions of civilians were fed and, with this end in view, the Americans concerned have submitted to restrictions imposed on them by the German authorities which, under ordinary conditions, would never have been tolerated.

Discourteous to Envoy.

"Immediately after the break in relations the German authorities in Brussels withdrew from Mr. Whitlock the diplomatic privileges and immunities which he had until that time enjoyed. His courier service to The Hague was stopped; he was denied the privilege of communicating with the department of state in cipher, and later even in plain language. The members of the relief commission were placed under great restrictions of movement and communication, which hampered the efficient performance of their task. In spite of all these difficulties the government and commission were determined to keep the work going till the last possible moment.

"Now, however, a more serious difficulty has arisen. In the course of the last ten days several of the commission's ships have been attacked without warning by German submarines in flagrant violation of the solemn engagements of the German government.

U. S. Protests Ignored.

"Protests addressed by this government to Berlin through the intermediary of the Spanish government have not been answered. The German government's disregard of its written undertakings causes grave concern as to the future of the relief work.

"In any event, it is felt that the American staff of the commission can no longer serve with advantage in Belgium. Although a verbal promise has been made that the members of the commission would be permitted to leave if they so desire, the German government's observance of its other undertakings has not been such that the department would feel warranted in accepting responsibility for leaving these American citizens in German occupied territory.

"This government has approved the proposal of the Netherlands government to send into Belgium a certain number of Netherlands subjects to carry on the work thus far performed by the American staff."

Relief Work Goes On.

New York, March 24.—Hampered, but not discouraged by the withdrawal of Minister Brand Whitlock and American agents from Belgium and France, the commission for relief in Belgium will fight to continue its work through Dutch agents.

Herbert Hoover, chairman of the commission, sailed for Europe ten days ago to arrange the new organization. A statement issued by the commission read:

"The Belgians and the population of the occupied portion of northern France must be fed. Belgium alone has 7,500,000 depending for their very lives upon food imported for them by the American commission.

"There can be no cessation of efforts. The committee will continue as before. The only possible difference will be that competent, trained Dutchmen, members of the commission, will do the work inside Belgium and northern France."

GERMANY TAKING U. S. WAR THREAT MORE SERIOUSLY

Says America Will Be the Aggressor—Cannot Curb Sea Warfare.

BY CYRIL BROWN.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

BERLIN, March 23, via London and Amsterdam, March 24.—Latest reports from America have at last served to arouse Germany to the seemingly imminent inevitability of hostile conflict, with or without a declaration of war.

A large part of the German press, within the last twenty-four hours, has contained one common thought, expressed in practically identical words, to the effect that "if Wilson in this wanton fashion wants war, let him bring it on. We have, once for all, made an end to negotiations. Blame for having brought about the war would fall on him and his government."

This thought may well be considered to be probably Germany's last word. It may possibly be further construed as the last perfunctory warning to the American government to keep American ships and American citizens out of the barred zones.

Says Wilson Invites War.

Under the heading, "Wilson and War," Vossiche airs the following typical view of the situation:

"From the latest reports regarding Wilson's intention so much appears clearly—namely: that Wilson would only too gladly induce Germany to declare war or that he would at least like to be in the position of shoving the moral blame for the war he wishes upon German shoulders. Since, however, Germany is just mean enough not to declare war without absolutely a compelling occasion and is unwilling to supply Mr. Wilson with the desired moral pretext for bringing about a state of war, one is seeking refuge in Washington, as usual, in all manner of technicalities."

The socialist Vorwaerts says:

"A result of the activities of the jingoes is recognizable in the tone of the news coming from America. One talks of being ready for war, but at the same times mixes in peace notes. As yet there has been no material change in the president's attitude, at least none outwardly, and it will probably continue so until congress meets."

Says Germany Holds Purpose.

The Catholic organ Germania says:

"The attempts of the English news service to bring home to us the 'seriousness of the situation,' as Lansing is supposed to have expressed himself, will just as little cause us to budge from our calm and purposed course as will any other warlike decision of the American government. They know this full well in Washington today.

"If America wants war it must take upon itself the odium of the attacker, which it deserves. Despite the present undecided hesitation, we have now just as little as formerly any hope that common sense and reason will prevail in the Wilson entourage."

Taft Now a Guardsman.

New Haven, Conn., March 24.—Former President William H. Taft became a member of the Connecticut home guard this afternoon. With twenty-six other prominent men in New Haven he formally enlisted in the guard.

PLACE ALEXIEFF IN COMMAND OF RUSSIAN ARMIES

Chief of Staff Is Given Place Formerly Held by Nicholas.

LONDON, March 24.—The retirement of Grand Duke Nicholas from his post as commander in chief of the Russian armies is officially confirmed, according to a Reuter dispatch from Petrograd. Pending the appointment of a successor, the dispatch adds, Gen. M. V. Alexieff, chief of the general staff, will act as commander in chief.

The retention of Grand Duke Nicholas as commander in chief was considered undesirable by the Russian minister of war because of the grand duke's connection with the Romanoff dynasty.

The Grand Duke Cyril, nephew of the former czar, resigned his admiral's command, saying that, as a member of the Romanoff family, he could only be an annoyance to the new régime.

It is believed that some of the German troops released on the west front will be sent to Russia, where the Germans are understood to be massing troops for a drive on the Riga, with Petrograd as the goal. In this connection there is a report that the Russian capital may be moved to Moscow if the expected German drive becomes dangerous.

DUMA IN FULL CONTROL.

BY ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

PETROGRAD, March 26, via London, March 24.—"The power of the Russian government is entirely in the hands of the duma. The duma has delegated its power to the cabinet ministers it chose, now in power. They are responsible to the duma."

This was President Rodzianko's response this morning to a question as to the exact status of the government.

"The duma members are here," he continued, "and can be called when necessary to make new laws and provide a basic background for calling the constitutional assembly which will decide the future government of the country. However, there is no hurry, as the new ministry is rapidly taking hold of the government, and its members have been able to give Russia a mighty impetus forward. As to what final form the government may take, no one has yet had time to give that serious question the proper thought.

Victory Is Only Thought.

"This revolution became necessary and was carried out because it was evident that Russia would never be able to finish the war successfully under the old government. Our one thought was to bring the war to a victorious finish. We are turning every thought to reorganize and renew our efforts to repel our enemy from our soil."

"When did you realize that a revolution . . . inevitable?" I asked.

"Since last December, when the emperor dissolved the duma and permitted its reconvening to be delayed until the middle of February," M. Rodzianko replied. "If the emperor had granted a responsible government with the new year he could have saved his throne."

Ex-Czar to Join Family.

"What are you going to do with the former emperor and his family?"

"The emperor is coming to Tsarskoe-Selo, quietly, like a simple citizen, but carefully protected by the duma, to join his sick family. We shall certainly try to make them comfortable."

The Grand Duke Nicholas a few days ago set an example to his whole body of officers by declaring himself a simple citizen, working for the common Russian good. Leaving Tiflis, where he was sent by the czar because of his popularity with the army, he bade them farewell by saying he hoped to come back "as a little land owner."

"FOR VICTORY"

German Emperor Sends Message to King of Bulgaria Saying Central Powers Will Win War.

BERLIN, March 24, via London.—The German emperor has telegraphed congratulations to the king of Bulgaria in connection with the fighting on the Monastir front. The emperor said:

"The reports from Field Marshal von Hindenburg that Bulgar and German troops have behaved splendidly in the fighting near Monastir has filled me with pride and joy. I have instructed von Buelow to express my full appreciation to the German troops.

"In expressing to you congratulations on the splendid behavior of your brave troops I beseech you to instruct von Buelow to inform your gallant soldiers of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's report and of my congratulations. I know that our troops will continue to resist the enemy with the same dogged devotion, the same firm will, and will attack him until the final victory is ours. God grant it."

HECKLER TURNS CROWD TO FAVOR SENATOR STONE

Kansas City Mo., March 24.—A near riot at Kansas City's huge loyalty meeting here tonight put a crowd of more than 25,000 persons squarely behind Senator William J. Stone. One of the city's widely known citizens, Bryson Jones, demanded of Senator James A. Reed, chief speaker, an explanation of Stone's attitude on armed neutrality.

"Down with Stone!" Jones yelled as Senator Reed paused in his speech. The great crowd plainly was angered at the interference. Jumping to their feet, hissing and yelling, scores demanded that the heckler be arrested.

Naval militiamen and policemen immeuately placed Jones under arrest and released him only at the insistence of Reed, who demanded that he be placed on the platform.

Reed paused in his speech to make an explanation in which he told Jones and the crowd "the press of the country had misinformed the nation in the hurry and bustle of that violent night in which the armed neutrality bill came up."

The gathering passed resolutions expressing support of the president and the nation and approval of plans for universal training.

GEN. WOOD SEES NO TROUBLE BY ALIENS IN U. S.

New York, March 24.—Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the department of the east, in an address at a luncheon of the Republican club here today, declared he did not believe the United States would have any trouble with the "so-called alien population" within its borders.

Charles Edward Russell, widely known as a Socialist, asserted that politics, creeds, and beliefs are swept aside in an emergency such as the nation is facing.

"What is there to be afraid of," he said, "except that we might not do the right thing? No sacrifice can be too great for those who inherited Valley Forge."

Dr. M. W. Stryker, president of Hamilton college, said American ideals had been challenged by the trend of recent events and that the country has been passing through a stage of mental probation.

"I believe the United States is waking up at last," he said. "The day of action has come."

PREDICTS KAISER WILL ABDICATE TO BRING PEACE

German Writer Says That Emperor Fears Enemies at Home.

PARIS, March 24.—The abdication of the German emperor is forecast by the former German magistrate who wrote the celebrated book, "J'Accuse," in an interview published in Oeuvre. He says:

"The kaiser is obsessed by the thought that he is responsible for the war, a thought which poisons his whole existence. He feels that he is menaced by three enemies at home, without counting those abroad: First is the crown prince, the real author of the war; second, is the Junker pan-Germanists—you cannot imagine the smoldering hatred of the emperor for those whom he believes to be the maniacs who are driving him into an abyss; third, are the people, not the Socialist party, but the people who are starving, and who, he feels, are growing in number and rising little by little against those who organized the war.

Opposed Break with U. S.

"The other day at the meeting of the parliamentary presidents and the ministers of the federal sovereigns, at which the submarine war was decided upon, the struggle between the kaiser's party and that of Von Tirpitz was most bitter. The majority against the emperor was so great, however, that he was obliged to submit and pretend that he was convinced.

"In particular he was personally opposed to a break with President Wilson, but he was forced to consent. Documents will be published one day which will prove that secretly he did everything not to bring America down upon him, and that he considers that the rupture was an irreparable mistake. The failure of the submarine war will soon show that he was right, but it will be too late.

Sought Peace Once.

"Once he tried to initiate peace negotiations and failed. To try again would be to admit and proclaim to the whole world, but above all to the German people, whom he fears most, Germany's real situation. If the allies solemnly declared, as they did with Napoleon in 1815, that they would refuse to treat for peace with the Hohenzollerns, it would be a knockout blow. Our German people, who still believe in him, would abandon him, for peace at any price will soon be the unanimous and hidden thought of tortured Germany."

EUPHONA HOME ELECTRIC
—the Inner-Player that perfectly "colors" music

Without knowing anything of music, you can sit down to a piano and strike a series of notes, one after the other—the first one rather loudly, the second one a little softer, the third exceedingly loud, and the fourth so soft as to be scarcely audible.

Only musicians of the first rank can do this with great rapidity by hand. But what they can do only after years of study, YOU can do instantly—perfectly, if you own a

Euphona Home Electric

And the ability to do this—to "color" a composition—is absolutely necessary if you would obtain from your player-piano music that is equal in every respect to actual hand playing. Five minutes of your time in our music rooms is all we ask. Euphona Home Electrics may be played by hand, by pedals or by electricity.

SOLO CAROLA INNER-PLAYERS are the only players made that can accent a note or chord anywhere upon the keyboard. Most other so-called "solo" players are limited to "zones." The Solo Carola Inner-Player is unlimited in its musical possibilities.

EUPHONA INNER-PLAYERS are produced by our factories to meet the demand for a player-piano capable of producing music as it would be if played by hand and yet held to a price within the reach of the average income. Euphona Inner-Players are $200 lower in price than any former Inner-Players and may be bought on easy terms

U. S. INCOME TAX LOW COMPARED TO THAT ABROAD

Britons and French Paying Far More—Fewer Exemptions Also.

BY MARK WATSON.

New York, March 24.—[Special.]—Americans who view with misgivings the tendency of federal taxes to climb from year to year may find solace in the fact that taxes can climb a long distance yet before they approximate those of Great Britain and France. This applies not only to the extremely rich, some of whom pay 41½ per cent of their total income, but also to those in moderate circumstances.

From France's income tax there are exempt only those earning less than 3,000 francs a year, or $600. In the United Kingdom only those earning less than $650 a year are exempt. In both there are further exemptions for dependents, but in no case do exemptions exceed half the tax assessed against even the 3,000 francs earners.

British and U. S. Tax Compared.

The extent to which those of moderate means are compelled to pay their share of the income tax is illustrated in Great Britain, where, in 1914, the latest date for which authentic figures are now available, out of the 709,746 who paid the tax, 649,964 were earning less than $2,920. Their contributions aggregated in quantity more than two-thirds the total income tax of the kingdom.

In the United States not one of this great army pays a cent of income tax, for here $3,000 is the minimum, and for married men or women there is exemption for all below $4,000 a year.

In the days before the war the British income tax amounted to an average of 1 shilling and 2 pence per pound sterling, or a little less than 6 per cent on incomes above $800. This $800 exemption had been in effect since 1906, prior to which time only those receiving less than $750 were exempt. It is since the war that it has again been cut to include $650 salaried men. In France the income tax was 2 per cent.

French Wage Earners Pay.

The present exemption in France has been sheared to include the small wage earners. All receiving from $600 to $1,600 a year pay 1 per cent; from $1,600 to $2,400, 2 per cent; up to $3,200, 3 per cent; to $4,000, 4 per cent; to $8,000, 5 per cent; to $12,000, 6 per cent; to $16,000, 7 per cent; to $20,000, 8 per cent; to $30,000, 9 per cent, and above that point 10 per cent.

Thus the Frenchman earning $20,000 a year pays 8 per cent, or four times what the American pays. The Briton has been paying 19.4 per cent, and hereafter will pay 26.9 per cent, or thirteen times as much as the American.

When an American reaches the point where he commands a salary of just under $3,000 he is still exempt from the income tax. In England he would have to pay $312.50, or more than a tenth of his whole income.

Marriage Exemption Contrasted.

In the $4,000 class, where an American, married, would still be exempt from payment, the Briton, who is earning that amount pays $500, or an eighth of his whole income. If he is getting it except by his own labor he pays $800, or a fifth of the whole amount. From $10,000 the payments on income which is not earned amount to one-fourth of the whole, and on all incomes, earned or unearned, above $12,500 this 25 per cent is the regular tax.

In addition to this ordinary tax there is a gradually increasing surtax for incomes above $15,000 a year. When one reaches $500,000 a year he pays the government $203,000, or 41½ per cent. That is his "bit" in financing the less wealthy allies.

Girl Makes Shoes, Music, and Money at Same Time. She's the Only Cobbler-Soprano.

Miss Freda Rychener

In the evening, at the Bush Conservatory of Music: Tra, la, la!

In the day, at the Quality Shoe Repair company: Bing, bang, bing!

This is the destiny of Miss Frieda Margaret Rychener, the only cobbler-soprano in existence. The Barber of Seville has nothing on Frieda, who can carol the scale chromatic like a thrush, and who knows shoes from first to last (sic!).

Two years ago Miss Rychener left her comfortable home and doting parents in a suburb of Toledo and came to Chicago determined to make Garden look like a back yard. She secured residence at the home of a friend at 14 East Division street. She wrote her parents that she would complete her musical education without their help, and make a business success at the same time.

She went into partnership with her friend, Mrs. Emma Wood Smith. The firm prospered, bought the machinery, and hired workmen. They leased office and shop at the Temple Court building.

Nominally Miss Rychener is secretary of the firm. When there is a lull in the secretarying, she sits at the bench, and the cobbler's hammer in her unshoemakerlike little hands plays a busy accompaniment: Bang, bing, bang! to her Tra, la, la!

U. S. DIPLOMATS OUTGENERALED BY COLOMBIA

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special.]—Disclosures were made tonight that administration senators withdrew the Colombian treaty after Republican leaders had threatened to substantiate allegations that no effort was made to secure all concessions Colombia stood ready to grant.

It also was charged there had been laxity in the matter of procuring proper protection for the interests of the United States.

In the heat of debate behind closed doors the statement was made that under the terms of the treaty Colombia, even if at war with the republic of Panama, would have the right to transport her ships of war, troops, and materials through the American canal free of charge.

In view of these disclosures it was stated by several Republicans that unless the treaty was re-negotiated along proper lines with the end in view of giving full protection to the Panama canal documentary evidence would be made public to substantiate the criticisms made.

CALL CITIZENS TO WAR RALLY ON MARCH 31

call to all genuine Americans to get into line, that he would accept any amendment so long as the general idea was retained.

Some, particularly Mr. Rothmann and former Judge E. O. Brown, didn't want it to appear in the declaration that they were criticizing the president.

President Judson replied to this:

"On three different occasions," he said, "the president has asked the country to give him advice. That is what we are attempting to do. I can't see that we are criticizing, we are simply telling him and congress what we think should be done."

Tells Where He Stands.

Then former Judge Dickinson, speaking fervently, told just where he stood. He said he was one of the best Democrats in the United States, that he had voted against the man who placed him in the high position he once held, but that as an American citizen the time for action had come, and in this time it was no longer the part of discretion or wisdom to speak in any language but the plain language of the heart. He was so thoroughly in earnest about it, he said, that he would make any changes any one desired, provided they still retained the patriotic note that should be there.

John C. Shaffer then stirred up more discussion with a demand that the call state squarely that the country now is at war with Germany. Mr. Lee again insisted that if they were going to name the countries he would insist on Mexico being put in, possibly Austria.

Not an Outdoor Chautauqua.

At another time Col. M. J. Foreman arose and said:

"The present need is for soldiers, not outdoor chautauquas."

Finally "verge" won over "state of actual" and the call was adopted as follows:

"Our country is on the verge of war. The crisis demands immediate expression by all patriotic American citizens of their sentiments and desires. All loyal Americans who stand unconditionally for their country against all of its enemies and who desire to urge upon congress and the president that they shall immediately take vigorous and effective steps to protect American lives and property and vindicate the honor of the nation by using all of its resources are requested to meet with us at the Auditorium theater, in the city of Chicago, on Saturday, March 31, 1917, at 8 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of taking such appropriate action as may be determined upon at that time."

Mr. Wetten, who was chosen secretary of the general committee, announced that about $6,000 would be needed to defray the expenses.

Subscribe for Expenses.

Immediately contributions were made by those at the conference. Among the pledges were the following: Union League club, $500; League for Universal Training, $500; Dr. Judson, $50, and $100 from each of the following: J. C. Shaffer, Mr. Dickinson, S. S. Gregory, Joseph H. Defrees, and Ralph Shaw.

A finance committee was then suggested and Chairman Dickinson named the following: Walter H. Wilson, E. D. Hulbert, and L. A. Busby.

Committees on speakers and overflow meetings will be announced by Mr. Dickinson later.

WAR IF AMERICAN GUN OPENS FIRE ON A SUBMARINE

ZURICH, March 24.—Several German newspapers, received here today, declare that Germany will declare war on the United States as soon as the first shot is fired at a German U-boat from an American gun.

Assails German Leaders.

AMSTERDAM, March 24.—Thursday's debate in the German reichstag was featured by a bitter attack on Kaiser William and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg as "those who originated the war" and a Socialist demonstration lauding Russia's throwing off the yoke of autocracy, according to word received here today.

The Socialist member Kunert was the accuser of the kaiser and his chief minister.

U. S.-PRUSSIAN TREATY STANDS

Washington, D. C., March 24.—This government has formally notified Germany through the Swiss minister that it will not reconstrue the Prussian treaty of 1799, as was asked by Germany.

The treaty stands as before. Germany wanted broader immunities for Germans and German ships in this country.

TRACTION BILL FRIEND AND FOE MEET IN DUEL

Skinner and Fisher Debate Measure Before Crowd at Hearing.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

"The men who drew this bill were either ignorant or dishonest," declared James G. Skinner, counsel for Tomaz Deuther and his greater Chicago federation. Mr. Skinner used to be an assistant corporation counsel. He thrust forward his lower jaw and bared his teeth.

"This empowering legislation is deliberately intended to deceive the public. It provides for a thirty or fifty year franchise for the street car companies. It fools the people with a delusive promise of municipal ownership.

"It is like the 1907 street car ordinances and the Mueller law. They also were intended to deceive. The men who drew them must know that municipal ownership was impossible then and that it is impossible now."

Fisher Comes Back.

"Mr. Skinner throws bricks," countered Walter Fisher, attorney for the local transportation committee in the proposed settlement of the traction situation. "It is much easier to throw bricks than to lay them. It is exactly what I should do if I were employed by his client, provided I were willing to so far prostitute my intellect and my character. As a matter of fact, I have nothing but pity for the intellectual processes of a man who will make such statements.

"So far we have not been able to coax, cajole, or extort a single constructive suggestion out of Mr. Skinner or his fellow critics."

Last Public Hearing.

It was the last public hearing on the law now before the state legislature empowering the city council to grant a franchise for thirty years to the consolidated traction company. The crowd was so big that it forced an adjournment to the council chamber, which was filled.

At its meeting on Monday afternoon the city council will be urged to adopt a resolution asking the state legislature to pass the empowering act. It is unfortunate that the resolution comes on for a vote at the last council meeting before the aldermanic election. Half the aldermen are up for reëlection, and some of them will find it hard to decide the question purely on its merits.

Hecklers a Nuisance.

From morning until after 6 o'clock last night the debate on the proposed bill went on almost unbroken. Half a dozen other people spoke briefly. One or two professional hecklers—who are by way of becoming a great nuisance in Chicago—wasted much time in asking questions about which a single reading of the bill would have informed them. But chiefly it was an all day battle between Skinner and Fisher, who discharged gas clouds, shrapnel, legal decisions, and hand grenades at each other.

Out of it all came certain charges and the replies to them.

"Municipal ownership is a delusive hope," said Skinner. "Like Sisyphus, the people must always roll the rock of municipal ownership up to the top of the hill, only to have it roll down again."

No Action Taken.

"For ten years we have all known that municipal ownership was impossible without an amendment to the constitution," answered Mr. Fisher. "Yet none of its advocates have started yet to turn a wheel in that direction. Is there anybody in this chamber who has ever even introduced an amendment in the state legislature? But Sissy always comes fussing around whenever some actual step in advance is proposed."

"Under this bill there is not the slightest chance of ever getting municipal ownership," said Mr. Skinner.

"On the contrary, the bill preserves the present right of the city to buy the traction properties whenever it can get the constitution amended. In addition it provides a way to municipal ownership at the end of thirty years or less without an amendment. And this is its chief new feature," declared Mr. Fisher.

Cite Court Decisions.

For some hours the attorneys debated various decisions of the Supreme court as to whether it would be legal for the city to take over the traction properties at the end of thirty years without paying for them, subject to a lien on the properties to the extent of the capital invested and not paid off at that time. The chief impression conveyed is that it is idle to discuss purely legal questions to an audience of laymen. And that whatever may have been or may be the decisions of the Supreme court, municipal ownership would not, at least, lose anything by having the provision included in the bill.

Mr. Skinner politely allowed that the old Allen bill of infamous memory stood on a higher moral plane than the present legislation. The Allen law was frank and honest. It asked in plain language for exactly what Yerkes wanted. The present bill provides for the same things, but it is all smeared over with salve to make the dose slip down easily.

Branded as Effrontery.

Mr. Fisher allowed that in making such disingenuous statements Mr. Skinner was merely venting his spleen and exhibiting his effrontery. Did Mr. Skinner know that whatever ordinance is passed under the present bill must be approved by the people at a referendum? But possibly Mr. Skinner did not believe in home rule and referendums?

John F. Smulski spoke on behalf of the foreign language newspaper association. His association favored the passage of the enabling legislation. They wanted speedy improvement in the traction service. The city had employed eminent experts to make a plan, and he and his associates were ready to trust them. They resented the suspicions and insinuations of George C. Sikes, but Mr. Sikes is somewhat professionally suspicious.

Want Results at Once.

Olaf C. Ray, president of the Jefferson Park Improvement association, wanted better service at once. His people were tired of negative arguments. They favor the empowering legislation.

George Koop, a socialist, who says he was once a candidate for mayor of Chicago, wanted everything to wait until municipal banks are established. Then it would be easy to get money to finance the traction properties from them without going to New York.

George Schilling said he was opposed to more than a twenty year franchise because he believed that every generation of citizens should have an opportunity to settle its own traction problem.

BUSY

Most Helpless Invalid at Presbyterian Hospital Now Is the Most Industrious.

THE most helpless woman in the Presbyterian hospital is the busiest. She is engaged in stuffing plush bowwows, rabbits, and pigs with cotton. After a decade of invalidism, gloom has been banished through this bedside work, according to Miss Susan B. Tracy, instructor of invalid occupations in the hospital.

For ten years the patient had been suffering from multiple sclerosis, and because of the woman's nervousness Miss Tracy found the only thing she could do was to pick cotton. So the insructor left a rag rabbit and a pile of cotton on the bed. No instructions were given for fear of agitating the patient. Next day, however, it was found the woman herself had started the work, which has been continued.

Similar occupations are being worked out for the other patients. The men are working in leather, making pocketbooks, weaving baskets and rugs, and whittling. There will be an exhibition about May 1.

CATHOLIC PRIEST ARGUES AGAINST BIRTH CONTROL

Dr. Anna Blount, Mrs. Margaret Sanger, and other advocates of birth control and so-called eugenic laws, were classed as "superficial uplifters" and "intrinsic enemies of their sex," at a meeting of the Catholic Woman's league in the Fine Arts building yesterday, where the Rev. Father Frederick Siedenburg of Loyola university spoke to a room crowded with women.

"The purely materialistic doctrine held by Dr. Anna Blount and her followers is false, dangerous, and immoral," said Father Siedenburg. "The principles of eugenics and birth control can be applied in a thousand ways. It certainly seems that it would be an easy way for a man to get rid of his mother-in-law, to decide that she is scientifically unfit, and simply give her a little pill.

"What I cannot understand about the people in the social register who are such advocates of birth control is their sudden interest in the poor. They say the poor ought not to have such large families. Let the people on the Lake Shore drive pay their workers higher wages and then they can afford to bring up their children decently.

"The Catholic church is not for a propaganda of large or small families; it is for every man and woman to exercise his or her own conscience about the size of the family. And as long as they do not use artificial means of restricting the size, let them be the judges."

Arrest Interned German.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 24.—Carl Rode, a German, believed to be one of the interned men who escaped the Philadelphia navy yard, was arrested early today.

9,000 SAILORS ON LAKE SHIPS THREATEN STRIKE

Olander Says "Blacklist" System on Freighters Must Be Broken.

Another serious transportation strike—a walkout of sailors and firemen employed on lake grain and ore vessels—threatens.

Victor A. Olander, secretary of the seamen's unions, declared yesterday that only the abolishment of the "discharge book system" maintained by the Lake Carriers' association, an organization of companies operating ore, grain, and coal ships, will prevent the strike.

"Unless this system, which is in reality a 'blacklist' scheme, is done away with immediately, the strike will be called," said Mr. Olander.

9,000 Men Involved.

"Such a strike means that about 9,000 sailors, marine firemen, and cooks will quit their jobs on the ore and grain ships. Companies operating the two classes of vessels will be completely tied up. Members of the three unions involved took a strike vote last fall, but this was held off for the time being because of an increase in wages.

"Now, however, the men are determined that the 'blacklist' plan shall be eliminated, and if the association doesn't agree to it the strike will go into effect."

Wide interest attaches to the proposed strike at this time in view of the effect it might have on the manufacture of munitions in the steel plants at South Chicago, Gary, and Indiana Harbor. Trading on the Chicago board of trade also would be affected.

Carriers Doubt Danger.

The matter was not regarded as serious, however, by Dennis Sullivan, who represents the Lake Carriers' association in Chicago.

"I do not believe the strike would affect the operation of ore and grain boats," he said. "Open shop conditions are maintained on all vessels run by companies in the association, and sailors, firemen, and cooks who sign on these vessels are required to make a statement that they do not belong to the unions. If such a strike does affect any of the ships, however, the ore and grain interests would not suffer, as rail transportation could be substituted."

Mr. Olander said that, under the "discharge book system," lake seamen are required to carry books in which each captain with whom they ship writes a commentary on their work. For any reason whatsoever, Mr. Olander stated, the captain may send the book to the association headquarters 'blacklisting' the seaman with all the companies.

Sailors and firemen employed on lumber ships also are in the midst of a controversy. They held a meeting with representatitves of the Lumber Carriers' association recently, both sides failing to agree on a new wage scale. Negotiations are still being carried on.

Prof. Tufts Recommends Illinois Housing Bill

Prof. James H. Tufts, chairman of the bureau of social legislation, University of Chicago, addressed members of the Chicago Political Equality league yesterday in the Congress hotel on "Housing Conditions."

He gave a report of the state housing bill, which will be proposed at the next session of the state legislature.

This bill, if passed, will prove a benefit to every one," said Prof. Tufts. "It provides that one story dwellings be built at least two feet from the side building line, two story dwellings, four feet from the building line, and three story houses at least six feet."

STATE CAPITAL BELLWETHER IN RUM CAMPAIGN

Springfield, Ill., March 24.—[Special.]—Springfield will be the center of the most significant local option contests to be settled at the township elections in Illinois April 3.

The dry leaders lay particular stress on the significance of a victory in Springfield, as having a psychological effect on the legislature, on the thousands of visitors attracted by the many conventions, the state fair, and by the regular run of business at the statehouse, before the Supreme court, and in the legislature.

The dry forces also argue that Springfield is likely to be the mobilization camp of the national guard and of the volunteer regiments in event of war and that the city should go dry as a preliminary to the assembly of the thousands of troops.

Twenty-seven Illinois townships, including Northfield of Cook county, will vote wet or dry on April 3. On April 17 twenty municipalities, including Elmwood Park, Cook county, will vote on the same proposition.

If YOU had $10,000 to invest and four or five of America's ablest bankers advised you how to invest it—

Would you follow their advice? Of course, you would.

You have here the unanimous advice not only of four or five able bankers, but of other well-known successful Americans. They give you very good reasons for owning the new Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The everyday usefulness of this great work makes its purchase an investment of the first order—which will be worth far more to you than $10,000 would yield.

James B. Forgan, until recently the President of the First National Bank of Chicago:

"As one of the early subscribers, I can say that the Britannica contains such reliable information on all conceivable subjects as to make it almost a necessity to any one who wants to post himself on matters such as come almost daily to his attention but about which he has not previously had occasion to inform himself."

W. R. Crabtree, President of the Southern Trust Co., of Chattanooga, Tennessee:

"The most valuable work in my library is the new edition of The Encyclopaedia Britannica. I have had occasion to consult it almost daily and it has been a source of increasing pleasure and profit during the months it has been on my shelves. It seems to cover its field perfectly, and the system of classification and indexing is a marvel of thoroughness. If I could not have it replaced I would not part with my Britannica for any consideration."

Albert H. Wiggin, President of the Chase National Bank, New York:

"The Encyclopaedia Britannica, as a book of reference, speaks for itself. It is most valuable. The form of the 'Handy Volume' Issue is most convenient, and because of my personal satisfaction, I have considered it a wise and satisfactory holiday present, which accounts for the many orders that I have given."

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, America's most noted educator, President of Harvard University from 1869 to 1909:

"I bought two copies of the new edition of The Encyclopaedia Britannica (India paper, flexible covers) for the benefit of my two sets of grandchildren. I find the work altogether admirable; and my grandchildren, who are at the most inquisitive ages, are of the same opinion. The Cambridge University Press has rendered a great public service, especially to the rising generation, by constructing and distributing widely this Eleventh Edition of the Britannica, fresh in its contents and ingenious and pleasing in mechanical execution."

Hugh Chalmers, began as an office boy, is now a millionaire and President of the Chalmers Motor Company:

"I believe The Encyclopaedia Britannica at such a material reduction in price offers a great opportunity to the younger men in the automobile industry as well as in other branches of business. The young business man of today needs to be thoroughly posted in order to prepare himself for promotion. I think that these books should afford him a means of securing accurate information quickly, and the books would undoubtedly help any young man to increase his store of knowledge."

George M. Reynolds, President, Continental and Commercial National Bank, Chicago:

"When a man stops learning he stops growing, and it is only the men who grow and develop who reap the money prizes in business. There never has been a time when it paid a man better to educate himself out of one job into another, and there have been a good many striking examples of this in the banking business. A man who has The Encyclopaedia Britannica at hand where he can consult it at any moment has a distinct advantage over the one who has not."

Rudolph Blankenburg, who came to America a poor boy and became a great wholesale merchant; known nationally as a political and civic reform advocate; formerly Mayor of Philadelphia:

"I suppose it goes without saying that The Encyclopaedia Britannica is regarded as a business and household necessity by those who have been able to afford it. The 'Handy Volume' Issue will now give to people in very moderate circumstances, who are generally the most ambitious members of any community, that ready access to the knowledge of the world which is indispensable to progress and success in life. It is a very great satisfaction to know that this has been made possible."

William H. P. Faunce, formerly a Baptist minister, head of Brown University:

"The Encyclopaedia Britannica takes in the whole world as its field. The authoritative character of its articles makes the work indispensable in every institution of learning. It seems to me that you have performed a very useful service to the graduates of American colleges in bringing this valuable work within the means of a large body already equipped to profit by it."

Richard Lloyd Jones, proprietor and editor of the Wisconsin State Journal:

"No one realizes better than an editor what it means to have the Britannica within easy reach of his hand whenever any question arises. There is no source of information on which he depends with such certainty. The habit once acquired, it becomes as natural to consult the Britannica in any emergency as it does to look up trains in the time-table before starting on a trip."

Luther H. Gulick, formerly director of physical training in the New York City Schools; President of the Camp Fire Girls, the national organization for girls similar to the Boy Scouts:

"There is more material that I use in the Britannica than in any one other source. I wish that each Camp Fire Guardian in the country could own them, for they expand the horizons of life."

Joseph T. Talbert, Vice-President of the National City Bank of New York, the largest banking organization in the world:

"After several years of daily use, myself, of the original (Cambridge issue of the Britannica), I have come to prize that monumental work as the most complete, useful and valuable achievement in the English language."

John H. Patterson, a typical example of the successful business man, was a small-town merchant. His genius developed the National Cash Register Company, of which he is the president:

"The Encyclopaedia Britannica is a clearing house of knowledge and a great help to understanding current events recorded in the daily press. Your 'handy edition' is indeed a library in a nutshell and will appeal widely to people of moderate means."

Albert J. Earling, who was a telegraph operator in 1866 and is President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway:

"The books are their own best endorsement and will doubtless appeal to each individual to whom presented, and especially to the large employers of labor, who realize the assistance that frequent reference to a work of this kind would be to the ambitious employe. I am confident that these advantages will be fully appreciated by a vast number who, for the first time, find a complete encyclopaedia of high grade within their means."

Arthur Brisbane, editor of the New York Evening Journal, the highest-paid editor in the world, with a salary said to exceed $150,000 a year:

"It is really a misfortune for a family of children to grow up, or for a man or woman to carry on the work of self-education without The Encyclopaedia Britannica at hand. The knowledge of the world condensed and arranged by the ablest scholars is in those volumes. In those pages every question is answered. The reading of every serious book should be done with The Encyclopaedia Britannica at hand. Each unfamiliar word and name should be looked up in the Encyclopaedia. To develop that habit in children would be of the greatest possible value to them."

Bishop John H. Vincent, founder of the Chautauqua movement:

"The 'Handy Volume' Issue of The Encyclopaedia Britannica is a Library, a Museum and a Picture Gallery, as one might say, 'under one roof,' and the fact that the Britannica is now brought out in this convenient form, and at so much less cost, is sure to be appreciated by a great many people to whom the privilege of owning it has hitherto been denied."

These men all own the new Britannica and strongly advise you to own it. Thousands of other business men have written letters to the same effect. What they say is reinforced by the experience of 160,000 men and women who also own and use the Britannica.

You need this wonderful work—because you want to be more successful in your work and business and get up in the world; because you have a desire for knowledge on many subjects; because you wish to broaden your outlook and be more interesting to your friends. And there are a hundred other reasons, equally sound and practical, why you should buy a set.

Investigate the usefulness of the Britannica for yourself. Send for the free illustrated book which tells you all about it. Do this at once, for the sets now on hand are all that can be offered printed on genuine India paper. These remaining sets are selling fast. When the last are sold, you miss your opportunity to own the Britannica in the popular "Handy Volume" form, printed on India paper.

Not only are the present prices exceedingly low, but if you choose you can buy a set for only $1 down and pay the balance in a limited number of monthly payments.

SEARS, ROEBUCK AND CO., Chicago, Illinois

SAYS GERMAN PLOTS CAUSED FALL OF CZAR

Writer Tells of Intrigues in Which Russians Were Involved.

This is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Washburn analyzing the Russian situation. Mr. Washburn is a well known war correspondent and authority on Russian conditions.

BY STANLEY WASHBURN.

[Copyright: 1917: By The Tribune Company.]

The first week of August, 1914, witnessed one of the most extraordinary demonstrations in Petrograd that the Russian capital had ever experienced. The day after the declaration of war there gathered in the huge eclipse that faces the red winter palace in Petrograd a crowd of more than 100,000. In spite of the intense heat of summer this immense throng stood for hours in the blazing sunshine before the home of the czar, where it had been reported the emperor of all the Russias was for the day with his consort and the little boy, heir to the imperial throne.

"God Save the Czar."

For hours and in almost an unbroken silence the populace waited. At last the emperor, moved by the knowledge of the demonstration, appeared on the balcony with the empress and the small grand duke. Instantly the entire crowd knelt in the square and with spontaneous enthusiasm sang the Russian national anthem, "God Save the Czar." The emperor withdrew, overcome with emotion.

For the first time in a hundred years the czar seemed to be in absolute union with his people and there seemed to be for him a new place in the hearts of his people. For nearly two years past he has moved about Petrograd and Russia almost without guards, and has visited places without escort, where before the war it was considered unsafe for him to go even with armed battalions drawn up around him.

German Influence Cause.

This week we have seen this same populace in this same winter square tearing down the imperial emblems from the winter palace and ripping the pictures of the imperial pair from every public building in Russia. To understand what has brought about this extraordinary sentiment in less than three years it is necessary to examine into the factor which has made this revolution possible, and that is the German influence in Russia.

Probably the czar has changed very little and the people are much the same, but now the latter have at last come to realize the true meaning of the German influence which for nearly two decades has been endeavoring to strangle the national life of Russia. Had it been possible to have eliminated the pernicious influences without striking at the dynasty there is every reason to believe that the new leaders of Russia would have taken that course, for few of them believe that the emperor personally was other than an extremely well meaning sovereign.

But two years of warfare and misadventure have made it clear that the influences about the czar had become so powerful that his capacity to realize the true conditions in Russia and act accordingly was utterly gone. And I have no doubt that the very men who forced the abdication of the czar, such as Grand Duke Nicholas, Gens. Alexieff, Brussiloff, and others, did so with saddened hearts, for I know that all of these men individually have nothing but the deepest personal affection for their monarch. But it had become a question of the elimination of the czar and with him the group of malevolent intriguers or rival the fate of Russia in the war.

Menace to Nation.

The German influence in Russia has been of generations in standing, but not until the last decade or two had it reached a point where it was becoming a menace to the very life of the whole Russian nation. When the new German empire entered its industrial period after the war of 1871 it speedily became evident that Russia was their great potential market. As the German internal development grew there began a more and more comprehensive and systematic endeavor to capture and to hold in perpetuity the huge market of an empire which has now reached a population of nearly 180,000,000.

It is a perfectly obvious fact that a progressive and industrial Russia was a menace to German commerce, and it was equally evident that an educated and liberal Russia would lead not only to commercial progress but would at the same time make a far more dangerous militant neighbor on Germany's eastern frontier than she cared to contemplate.

Germany's motives then for checking Russian development are easily understood. But Germany without coöperation within Russia could hardly expect to influence internal political conditions affecting the life of the nation. But within Russia there was, and until last week always had been another faction whose selfish interests likewise were bound up in the proposition that an ignorant and illiterate Russia was for their best good.

Officeholders in Ring.

This faction was composed of the officeholders who for years have been able to prey on the national revenues which for centuries have flowed vaguely and irresponsibly through a small group of public buildings in the Russian capital. An educated Russia meant a liberal government and a liberal government inevitably meant a ministry responsible to the people and an immediate check on the graft and corruption which have become such an unpleasant factor in the Russian business world.

One often hears harsh criticism of Russian business methods as being filled with bribery and corruption, but let Americans pause and consider what would be the conditions in this country or any other for that matter if all the republic revenues ran through channels over which there was no responsible check.

Generations of autocratic government in Russia have produced this system in the same way that we find the squeeze system in China. As soon as the Germans became deeply involved in the Russian market there developed immediately a community of interests between the Teutons and that portion of the bureaucracy who lived as parasites by preying on the national revenues.

There are large numbers of Germans in the Baltic provinces who are Russian subjects and for many years this element has been gaining a greater and greater hold upon official life in Russia. I do not mean, of course, to intimate that all the Baltic province Germans were disloyal, for hundreds and thousands have been fighting heroically in the Russian army.

Czar Not Pro-German.

I think it untrue that the czar has ever been pro-German, but he has always been an autocrat and, inasmuch as the German and bureaucratic alliance depended upon autocracy to keep Russia asleep, his course, of course, followed their line of thought. The German influence did not then aim merely at securing the trade of Russia, but aimed at keeping Russia ignorant, illiterate, and retrogressive, that the German trade might be a permanent factor.

Germans Gain Strength.

In the last decade preceding the war the German influence had acquired such strength in Russia that it had been able to slip its agents into many of the highest offices in Petrograd. Few realized the extent to which this activity had gone until war was declared, when it became evident that in almost every quarter pernicious influences had been at work. When the Russians withdrew from Poland in August, 1914, they blew up the bridge at Kalisse, and for weeks every one was puzzled as to how it came about that the Germans had a new steel bridge operating in sixteen hours. Investigation developed that the bridge had been made in Germany on contracts let by the war department, original blueprints were on file, and when the war was declared duplicate parts were already made, and within five hours after the Russians left the steel was on the bank and in sixteen hours troops were passing in trains in pursuit of the Russians.

During early months of the war in Poland every move the Russians made was known instantly by the enemy. As weeks went by it became more and more evident that wherever there had been German industry or German traders there in the war were to be found German spies. On or in almost every German owned factory in Poland were found wireless telegraph stations above, or underground telephones beneath to advise the Germans of the Russian movements.

Russians Wake Up.

Before the war was a month old there began to dawn on Russians everywhere the meaning of the German trade and German influence in Russia, but even then no one dreamed of the grip that the canker had on the highest positions in the Russian empire. When Warsaw was threatened the world suddenly was amazed to find that the formerly strong defenses of Warsaw had been demolished two years before by order of Sukomlineva, Russian minister of war, on the ground that fortified cities might prove traps for field armies.

The following spring suspicions began to crop up everywhere against the smooth and oily minister of war, who had assured the czar that Russia was fully equipped and prepared with guns and munitions to conduct as long a war as need be. I am personally acquainted with an individual who offered the Russian government a large quantity of shells for field guns, to be delivered in February, 1915. He has a letter in reply dated November, 1914, signed by the doughty minister of war to the effect that by February, 1915, Russia would have shells for sale, so huge were the stores of ammunition, and the offer was politely turned down.

Shell Plot Seen.

In the latter part of March and April, 1915, huge quantities of shells that were a shade too large were delivered on the eastern front and by strange coincidence a German drive was delivered at the same time the badly gauged shells arrived at the front.

A little later in the year the wife of the minister of war became involved in a German spy scandal, and later still when Grodno fell almost without resistance it was discovered that the fortress on which Russia had spent millions had been designed by a German engineer, who is said to be serving this very day on Von Hindenburg's staff.

By the middle of 1915 came the dearth of ammunition and the fall of Warsaw, due entirely to the ammunition which was lacking because the minister of war had seen to it, as the current report ran, that there should be no ammunition.

With the fall of Warsaw came the first really definite move of the bureaucracy and the pro-German faction for independent peace. But before that can be considered one must take a brief glance at the military situation for the first six months and the somewhat unforseen obstacle which the intriguers ran up against in the person of the Grand Duke Nicholas, then the commander in chief of the Russian armies in the field. As this great Russian's contribution to the war during the first six months in large measure saved the situation it must be treated in a separate article.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c.

GROW CROPS, U. S. APPEAL TO CITY AND FARM ALIKE

Washington, D. C., March 24.—A statement urging that as a patriotic duty city residents transform their yards into gardens and farmers diversify their crops in order to make each section self-sustaining was issued tonight by Carl Vrooman, assistant secretary of agriculture.

The great need in war time, Mr. Vrooman said, would be a surplus of wheat with which the nation could feed its allies. He also declared the acreage of soy beans and cow peas should be increased to augment the resources for protein, which in time of emergency could take the place of meat for human consumption.

CHICAGOANS IN RUSSIA IN PERIL?

Concern was felt among the friends and relatives of Mrs. Potter Palmer for the safety of the Princess Cantacuzene, her son and two daughters, who are believed exposed to dangers of the present unrest in Russia.

The Princess Cantacuzene is the daughter of the late Maj. Gen. Frederick Dent Grant and Mrs. Grant, who was the sister of Mrs. Potter Palmer. Prince Cantacuzene is a member of the Russian royal family and a colonel of the imperial guards. He was aide de camp to Grand Duke Nicholas.

Girl Sentenced for Fraud.

Frances Kasner, 19 years old, 5417 Winthrop avenue, was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to thirty days in the house of correction yesterday by Judge John A. Mahoney on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses. The girl admitted obtaining goods from Mandel Brothers by fraud. Miss Marie Henderson, 6450 Maryland avenue, held on a similar charge, asked for a jury trial.

BATTLE IN THIRD FOR ALDERMAN TESTS CITY HALL

Frederick W. Patterson Faces Combined Foes of Thompson.

This is the first of a series of articles discussing the Chicago aldermanic campaign, which reaches a climax on April 3—election day. The wards will be taken up numerically and the situations in five wards will be reviewed each day. As "city hall man" for "The Tribune" the writer has been in daily contact with council affairs for several years.

BY PARKE BROWN.

In one of the first five of Chicago's thirty-five wards a "beautiful scrap," as the politicians call it, has been in progress for almost two months. That is the fight in the Third; and, to tell the whole story, it is a continuation of the battle of a year ago, which never entirely died out.

The Thompson organization in the 1916 primary got the scalp of Ald. Nathaniel A. Stern. But the anti-city hall forces swung en masse behind the Democratic candidate, Ulysses S. Schwartz, and by almost 2,600 plurality snowed under the city hall man, Frederick W. Patterson.

But W. A. Bither, the Thompson ward leader, retaliated this year by scalping Ald. E. J. Werner, and Patterson again is the Republican nominee. So once more the swing over to a Democrat is under way, and there are predictions from many sources that George F. Iliff will succeed to Werner's seat.

The Walkovers.

The annual walkover is scheduled in the First. The Second will send another Negro to the council. And the Democrats have it all their own way in the Fourth and Fifth, but the absence of battling of any seriousness in those four is more than made up by the operations of the sappers, the bomb throwers, and the poisonous gas experts in the Third.

All of the issues of last year—including the appeal to the heavy Jewish vote based on the death of the late Dr. Theodore B. Sachs—have been revived. Money and promises of money and jobs have been distributed freely. Religious sentiment has been played upon. Sensational stories have been sent afloat.

In 1915 Thompson carried the ward by 7,718. Hughes carried it last fall by about 5,000. But Patterson's vote last year was only 6,887, in contrast to Thompson's 15,309; and in the same election Schwartz received 9,756.

Democrats Behind Iliff.

Iliff, the Democrat, is head of the real estate department of the State Bank of Chicago. Behind him are the combined forces of all the Democratic factions. William O'Connell of the Dunne camp is said to be working just as hard as Jacob Lindheimer, former city treasurer; Thomas D. Nash, the ward committeeman; Ald. Schwartz, and Daniel Sullivan. In addition, men like George E. Cole, identified for years with civic alliance, who, although not residents of the ward, have declared Iliff excellent council timber.

Patterson's chief backer is W. A. Bither, formerly law partner of City Attorney Francis and now one of the "experts" receiving high fees from the board of local improvements; but with him also this year is Robert R. Levy, the committeeman who fought him twelve months ago. The influence of the two is said to lie chiefly in the west end of the ward, where about 3,000 Negro votes can be mustered.

Head of Auto Company.

Patterson is the head of the Ajax Automobile company and an automobile insurance adjuster. Before entering this business he was an "extra" telegraph operator and agent for the Illinois Central railroad. In proof of his adherence to Thompson, the opposition has reprinted the text of a letter sent out in 1916 on facsimiles of the mayor's office stationery bearing the mayor's signature.

But in meeting Patterson's claim to independence this year the Iliff supporters are relying more upon Ald. Werner's recital of events leading up to Patterson's entry into the primary. Werner charges that on Saturday, Feb. 8, Patterson telephoned for an appointment. They met downtown. Werner says Patterson told him to count on his support and asked how he could be of assistance. On Sunday, Werner continues, Bither called on him and told him that he would be renominated and reelected without a penny of expense if he would support the administration's budget plan.

Refused to Vote.

Werner says he refused any such assurance, and on Monday, when the budget came up for passage, he refused to vote for any of the administration's propositions to increase the appropriations approved by the finance committee. And that night, according to Werner's story, Patterson was brought into the race.

Possibly the ward is not so deeply stirred now as it was immediately before last year's election. The response to calls for independent meetings for Iliff has not been enthusiastic, but there is another week before the polls open.

On the theory that some one may want to know who is opposing Ald. Michael Kenna this year it may be said that William A. Brush received the Republican nomination in the First ward without opposition. He owns a cigar and book store.

Anderson City Hall Man.

Louis B. Anderson, assistant corporation counsel and a colored man, is slated to succeed to the seat of Ald. Oscar De Priest, colored, under indictment. He is slated because he has the Republican nomination by grace of an agreement made by the organization three years ago to name a colored man each alternate year. Anderson is considered one of the leading men of his race in Chicago. He is opposed by Fred E. Wenig, a machinist and former ball player.

In the Fourth ward Ald. David R. Hickey, because of the ward's normal Democratic plurality of 4,000, does not consider it necessary to make a campaign against Michael B. Demith, a former ward employé, now in the city collector's office, who was unopposed for the Republican nomiation.

WILD FLOWERS

Movement Against Their Sale Gains Supporters.

THE plea to the florists of Chicago and vicinity to stop dealing in wild flowers is said to be gaining support daily as various organizations hold their meetings. Already bodies comprising a membership of more than 7,000 have signed the petition to the florists. The petition was drawn up by the Wild Flower Preservation society and backed by the conservation council.

Scratch Too Small to Note Causes Death in 2 Weeks

A scratch, too small to deserve medical attention, caused the death of Herman Stern of 564 Arlington place. More than two weeks ago Mr. Stern brushed against a news stand in his hurry to catch a car. His leg was scratched.

Last week he went to a hospital to recover from a physical breakdown. A small clot of blood from the scratch yesterday found its way into his circulation. Death was almost instantaneous. Physicians say it is one of the rarest cases on record.

Mr. Stern was 47 years old. He was western representative of the Jeweler's Circular Weekly.

PATRIOTISM OF ALD. KENNEDY 27TH WARD ISSUE

Aldermanic Fight Rages in the Thirty-third Also.

The Twenty-seventh and Thirty-third wards are to be the spectacular battle grounds in the closing week of the aldermanic campaign.

Ald. John C. Kennedy's views as a Socialist are to be the main issue in the Twenty-seventh ward.

Kennedy has been campaigning nightly, in association with Adolph Gurmer, national secretary of the Socialist party, and Ald. W. E. Rodriguez, Socialist alderman in the Fifteenth ward.

He has come out squarely for the Socialist party and says he will be guided by what his party counsels decree on the present national crisis.

Kennedy's Talk an Issue.

In one of his speeches he said that the workers of this country were as justified in precipitating a revolution here at home to free themselves from the capitalist class domination as the United States is justified in going to war with Germany or any other nation, though, he qualified the statement, the Socialists were opposed to any kind of war.

This and similar statements many women of the ward are placing before the voters with the appeal that Kennedy be defeated on patriotic grounds.

Mrs. Ida L. Fursman, president of the Teachers' federation, and Mrs. Harriet Stokes Thompson, president of the Chicago Political Equality league, have taken the stump in behalf of the Socialist candidates in both the Twenty-seventh and Fifteenth wards. The Socialists are supporting the proposed elective school board law.

In the Thirty-third.

Friends of Irwin R. Hazen, the Republican candidate who defeated Ald. Buck in the primary, are plastering the ward with the story of the "deal" between the Buckites and "Big Tim" Crowe, the Democratic committeeman, whereby Lester Clow, nominated in the primary, was pulled off by the Democratic managing committee because he was "too close to the Catholics" and D. I. Jarrett substituted.

In a pamphlet issued by the Thirty-third Ward Republican club it is stated that the alleged meeting at which the Buck-Crowe deal was put through was held at the home of Fred D. Breit, a Sullivan sanitary trustee.

At this meeting, the pamphlet says, were Buck, George C. Sikes, "Big Tim" Crowe, Wiley W. Mills, Frank M. Padden, Barney Mahoney, Lester F. Clow, D. I. Jarrett, and "Sy Watkins, chief manipulator for the Municipal Voters' league."

Mr. Buck is asked if he agreed at this meeting to deliver Republican votes to the Democratic candidate if that candidate should become Jarrett instead of Clow.

Clayton F. Smith, Democratic candidate for county treasurer, spoke last night in behalf of Mr. Jarrett.

Professor Speaks Against Prohibition in Debate

"There hasn't been a mayor of Chicago elected in the last twenty-five years whose choice has not been controlled by the liquor interests," said Robert McMurdy, former president of the Illinois Bar association, in a debate with Dr. George B. Foster, professor of comparative religions at the University of Chicago, at the weekly meeting and luncheon of the Young Men's Associated Jewish Charities at the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

"Psychologically," argued Prof. Foster, "prohibition is profoundly stupid, and morally it is decidedly unethical."

TRUCK GARDENER TELLS FOOD WOES TO U. S. ATTORNEY

Report Geweke Exposed Price Manipulation by Dealers.

August Geweke, president of the Farmers' and Truck Gardeners' association, yesterday conferred with Robert W. Childs, special assistant attorney general, in charge of the government's food and coal investigation here. Dealings of the truck farmers with Chicago produce commission men are said to have been discussed.

Although it is said Mr. Geweke supplied no information upon which to base federal prosecution, the attention of State's Attorney Hoyne may be called to the produce situation as Mr. Geweke is said to have outlined it to the government attorney.

Limited Buying.

It is said that the chief of the truck farmers' organization accused the Chicago produce dealers of having made an agreement whereby they would buy only a limited amount of produce from the farmers, and the limited amount is alleged to have been fixed below the requirements of public consumption. By the process Mr. Geweke is said to have disclosed the produce men were able to maintain high prices on the ground that they had not enough supplies to meet the demand of consumers. Mr. Geweke is said to have pointed out the farmers have been forced to let great quantities of foodstuffs rot.

Mr. Geweke is said also to have charged that while high prices were charged the consuming public, the farmers were unable to get fair prices from the market afforded them by the produce men.

Inasmuch as the dealings of the Cook county truck farmers with the local produce men constitute intrastate and interstate business, the government is powerless to act. Nevertheless, the suggestions of Mr. Geweke are being thoroughly looked into by government agents on the theory that information may be found that will lead to the discovery of violations of the federal law.

Car Figures Sent On.

Data gathered by Mr. Childs and agents of the bureau of investigation, supplementing that already sent by Joseph P. Griffin, president of the Chicago board of trade, as to the transportation situation, was sent by Mr. Childs to the interstate commerce commission. This data is to the effect that Chicago elevators and cars in local railway yards are filled with grain which cannot be moved because of the railroads' system of car distribution.

It is said that the railroads west of Chicago bringing in grain will not allow their cars to go farther east than Chicago, while the eastern roads are not supplying enough cars to handle the business from Chicago eastward. So, while Chicago is clogged with grain, the east is suffering from a shortage.

FOOD PRICES STILL RISING, FIGURES SHOW

In three months the cost of living has taken a considerable leap, as indicated in the prices paid for food by the board of education for the boys of the Chicago Parental school. The table shows the difference in some foods between the price on Jan. 1 and those offered for April 1:

	Jan. 1, per lb.	April 1, per lb.
Steer loins	$ .21	$ .23½
Chuck	.10¾	.13¼
Bacon	.22	.31
Ham	.19	.23
Salt pork	.15½	.31½
Pork loins	.16	.19½
Spareribs	.11	.14½

Only two bakers bid on the bread contract. One of them bid at the rate of 15 cents for a two pound loaf and the other made a mistake. The board will advertise for new bids on the bread contract.

"MONOZYGOTIC" TWINS APPEAR TO REFUTE SAVANT

Charles and John Briggs' Fingerprints Alone Show Difference.

"Twins alike! Two twins alike! There are no blades of grass alike; no two grains of sand. And among such valuable things as diamonds, or eggs, or potatoes there are no two alike, when you put them under the glass. I stand in the defense of my science."

Frank V. Martinek, identification expert of the civil service, city hall, and chairman of the finger print committee of the International Association for Criminal Identification, was the speaker.

He had been reading an announcement of a new book, "The Biology of Twins," by Horatio H. Newman of the University of Chicago. The article had said that twins might be so similar as to deceive not only the eye but the finger print expert.

Enter, the Twins.

"Look," said Mr. Martinek.

A door swung open. Two men appeared. Their hats were identical, their hair and eyes and skin, their complexions, their clothes, their watch chains, and their shoes.

The two men smiled. They smiled alike. They spoke. Their voices were the same. Every movement of the body, the tilt of the shoulders, their movements appeared identical.

"Enter the monozygotic twins," said Mr. Martinek. "I introduce you. They are Charles and John Briggs. They'll have to tell you which is which."

"That's John, which leaves me Charles," spake one of them. "We are of exactly the same stature. We have never weighed more than a pound different. We eat the same food and we drink the same drinks. We're bachelors, both of us, and we sleep in twin beds.

"We were born in Rochester, N. Y., 108 years ago—I mean fifty-four years ago, bein' twins, we're in the habit of doubling things—and we had the same father and mother.

"That's all stuff and nonsense about having the same pains and aches. Course, we get hungry three times a day, alike, and we have had colds at the same time."

Jobs Are Different.

John Briggs is a mortgage expert in the employ of H. O. Stone & Co. Charles Briggs is in the employ of Percival B. Palmer company, cloaks and suits. They have lived for ten years in the same bachelor apartment at 617 Dole avenue, and have been for twenty-five years in Chicago.

Mr. Martinek took their fingerprints, and as he did the work he remarked:

"Out of about seventeen billion fingerprints no two have been found alike."

And the fingerprints of Charles and John, Chicago's monozygotic twins, verified the statement. They are not alike.

The cushions are of a new double spring construction. The upper layer soft and yielding; the lower layer supporting and protecting you from the slightest jar. And in upholstery fabrics the richest, most serviceable velours and tapestries make interiors of exclusive tone.

The year 'round — in any weather — on any road — you are sure of comfort in this Cadillac Limousine. It has an extra long wheel base, a wonderful balance, a cradle-like action on roughest roads. No car ever rode quite so smoothly as these latest limousines.

As for Power! Do you know the feel of the latest Cadillac Eight? If you do, there is no need to tell you the exhilarating sense of smooth motion, the certainty of action on hills, the wonderful road performance of the Cadillac Limousine.

In town or country it is equal to any emergency—thick traffic—quick pick-up — hard pulling. Its comfort for your mind is as great as for your body. You are always sure in a Cadillac.

It is these unusual excellences of Cadillac performance which have earned for the Cadillac its leading position today. It is still copied—more than ever. And it still leads—by a wide margin.

Surface Lines Accused of Overcharging City

Accusations that the Chicago Surface lines are overcharging the city for the electric current to operate its bridges were made by John P. Garner, commissioner of public service.

"The Surface lines furnish the current at $50 a month for each bridge," said Mr. Garner, "and this amounts to about $25,000 annually.

"The city has an understanding with the Commonwealth Edison company for the purchase of electricity at a rate which would make the operation of the bridges cost $5,000."

Mr. Garner said the contract expired last January, and the city is now in a position to effect a substantial saving.

4 HURT AS AUTO CRASH BLOCKS SHORE DRIVE

Mrs. Webster and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Giddings in One Car.

A collision of two automobiles in front of the Potter Palmer residence at Schiller street and Lake Shore drive, in which four persons were hurt, emptied Lake Shore drive residences of their occupants at the dinner hour yesterday. Startled by the crash and fearing some mishap to expected guests, many women rushed to the street without taking time to throw on wraps.

Occupants of Cars.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Giddings of 939 Argyle street, and Mrs. Virgil C. Webster of 4718 Ingleside avenue, a niece of Julius Rosenwald, had just turned north on the drive after leaving Schiller street. They were riding in Mr. Giddings' car, which collided with that of Dr. Alexander F. Stevenson of 48 East Schiller street, who was also going north. A third machine had crowded the Stevenson motor against the Giddings car.

The occupants of the Giddings car were thrown to the pavement. Mrs. Webster's nose was broken. She was taken to the Michael Reese hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Giddings sustained injuries to the face and arms. Dr. Stevenson was bruised. The drive was strewn with broken glass.

Traffic Blocked an Hour.

De Witt C. Cregier, city custodian, was passing in his motor and called police ambulances. Traffic was blocked for an hour.

Mr. Giddings is a broker at 39 South La Salle street. Mrs. Giddings was Ruth Leone Terrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archelaus Terrill of Oak Park. Mrs. Webster is the wife of the cashier of the Illinois State bank.

Dr. Stevenson is attending physician at the Presbyterian and Columbus hospitals and a professor at the Rush Medical school.

One of the guests in the home of Franklin MacVeagh, former secretary of the treasury, fainted when she heard the crash.

Auto Supply Dealer Hurt.

J. T. Smith, 7934 Emerald avenue, a dealer in automobile supplies, was hurt yesterday in a collision between his automobile and a street car on Wabash avenue between Randolph and Washington streets.

MRS. FIELD AND PARTY ORDERED OUT OF THEATER

Nazimova, Angered by Comment, Halts Play Until They Leave.

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special].—Mrs. Marshall Field and five other Washington society women occupying a box at the Belasco theater last night, where Mme. Nazimova is appearing in "Ception Shoals," were compelled to leave the playhouse before the end of the performance.

Toward the end of the second act, when Miss Elizabeth Luckett, in the role of a young mother, attempts to explain to a girl of her own age, isolated from all women up to this time, information concerning married life, the incident occurred.

During this recital an audible comment came from the box occupied by the Field party. In an instant Mme. Nazimova called for "curtain" and the scene was curtailed. An usher hurried to the box whence the disturbance came and cautioned the occupants.

But Mme. Nazimova told the manager of the theater that she could not proceed until the cause of the disturbance was removed. The manager thereupon proceeded to the box, and while the lights were lowered the occupants thereof filed out. The play then was resumed. The names of the members of Mrs. Field's party could not be learned.

Indiana Avenue Flat Hit in Gambling Raid

Five telephones were confiscated. Harry Morgan, 27 years old, who gave his address as 5632 Prairie avenue, was booked as the keeper.

"I Might Have Had A Hudson Super-Six"

Last spring many thousands of car buyers delayed their choice too long. They found our output two or three months oversold.

Don't wait as they did. It means long regret to say, "I might have had a Hudson Super-Six."

No Car Like It

The Super-Six motor is patented. No other car offers anything like it.

The difference is enormous. This one invention added 80 per cent to motor efficiency. It almost doubled endurance.

The Super-Six holds all the worth-while records. In speed, in hill-climbing, in long distance performance, nothing has ever matched it.

But it excels above all in endurance. It broke the 24-hour record by 52 per cent. It twice broke the ocean-to-ocean record in one continuous 7000-mile round trip.

Why It Endures

The thing we fight is friction. That wastes the power, and it causes wear. It is friction that destroys machinery.

In the Super-Six motor friction is almost ended. After thousands of miles under top-speed strain, this motor has shown no evidence of wear.

Again and again it has performed feats which would break other motors to pieces. Yet not a part or bearing was affected.

That's its supreme advantage. The Hudson Super-Six will outlive, probably, any man who drives it.

New Economies

This year we add a new gasoline saver in the form of radiator shutters that control in part the heat of the motor. We add a motormeter. We use a patent pneumatic carburetor which adjusts itself to every engine speed.

We are using bodies which, in beauty and luxury, excel anything you've seen. We use upholstery made of rare-grade leather. We have a finish which is wonderfully enduring.

But the Super-Six motor means more than all. It means performance such as no other car can match. It means endurance such as other cars can't hope for. It means pride in your car.

Last year, because of this motor, Hudson outsold any car in the world with a price above $1100.

You want it for capacity, for service. Find this out, for your own sake, before we get oversold.

This Leaves the Skin Free From Hairy Growths

(Toilet Talks)

A simple method for completely removing every trace of hair or fuzz is here given. This is painless and usually a single treatment will banish even stubborn growths. To remove hairs, make a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain you get delatone.—Advertisement.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE.

RUSSIA SAVES CRIPPLES FOR A USEFUL LIFE

Maimed Soldiers Taught Trade for Future and Given Limbs.

BY MILDRED FARWELL.

PETROGRAD.

Here far behind the lines lies the real sadness of war, and one of the saddest problems Europe has to face is that of the maimed. We hear much of the efforts of England and France to mend the bodies and reconstruct the lives of these broken soldiers, but little of Russia's, and yet what she is doing to solve it is enormous—only to advertise is not the Russian way.

They shout their faults from the house tops, their virtues they leave you to find out for yourself. Since 1915 the Russian government has supplied missing members to over 20,000 cases.

There is an inconspicuous building in Petrograd where the maimed, after they are discharged from the hospitals, go to be fitted with wooden legs, arms, and glass eyes. As they enter each man is given a little book with his name and a complete description of his case written in it. The government furnishes two articles—for instance, a leg and a duplicate—to each man, and on presentation of his book every two years a new set is given him.

Fifty Maimed in One Room.

There were about fifty or sixty poor hulks there waiting their turn when I saw them. They were lying in a big room, fully clothed, on small iron beds on the outside of gray soldiers' blankets, some with one leg or arm gone, or with only arms and a torso—none of them complete.

A boy of 20 had just received his two wooden legs, a stump and one fitted with a foot in a boot exactly like his own remaining one. He had the booted leg on the bed beside him playing with the catch that made it bend at the knee, and we asked him to try it on.

The legless and armless men in the other beds volunteered advice and comment as he adjusted the leather strap over his shoulder and around his waist.

"The stumps are best for every day," they told us; "we shall keep the other legs to look fine in on Sundays."

Boy Had Not Told Parents.

The boy, balancing himself, walked a few paces across the room, turned, and, smiling, said something in Russian. He has not told his father and mother that he was wounded, some one translated, and now when he goes home for Christmas he thinks they won't know that he has lost a leg.

But to give a man a wooden leg and turn him loose on the community is not enough—the streets would be flooded with beggars. I wanted to see what became of him. A society organized by the Duchess Xenia lodges and feeds the cripples while they are learning a trade. Many of the great palaces in Petrograd have been donated for the maimed soldiers' use.

At that of Countess Vorontzov-Dashkov, where 150 of them live, a great volume of music rolled out to meet us when we opened the door. The men standing before their midday meal were singing the Russian grace; their faces, intent and exalted, were turned toward the ikon in the corner. They did not look at us until the prayer was over.

Palace Used for Workshop.

Countess Orloff-Davidoff, whose husband has given half of his own palace for the cripples' workshop, had charge of this house. She said she would be delighted to show us everything, "only not the pigs; they are in the yard, and you can see them for yourself. You know the government makes all the hospitals and soldiers' homes keep pigs. We buy them little, feed them waste, and later eat them."

As we went from room to room—the lower part of the walls covered with boards to protect them—we could see above the beauty of marble pilasters and elaborate plaster work.

She explained the use of each.

"Here is where the doctor gives medical massage," she said. "We try to spare the steps of the one legged men, so they sleep here in these big rooms, in the beds that you see. Upstairs there are more dormitories for the one armed men. Come into the kitchen now and taste the soup. Good, isn't it?"

Drones Given Fair Trial.

A stream of busy, cheerful, one armed, one legged men was passing in and out of the front door. Those who through laziness will not work are not allowed to stay here, but after a fair trial are sent away.

They seemed not at all distressed by their deformity and we followed some of them back to their workshop in the big Orloff-Davidoff house.

In peace time it has been the scene of many gaieties. The rooms are transformed now with boarded walls. The bent figures and intent peasant faces of crippled tailors stitching away on sewing machines make a strange contrast to the size and height of the rooms. A French officer in a corner was having a fitting for a fur lined coat. The French order all their great coats here from the cripples. In another room toys and lead soldiers were being made.

Cripples Vie at Work.

In another great house, that of M. Demidov, once Russian minister to Athens, are the work shop for bootmakers and one armed makers of knitted garments. The crippled men vie with each other in the amount of work that they do and are pitifully proud when you praise their quickness. The boots are good boots, not ones you would buy only out of charity.

When the maimed first came in they feared to go back to their villages useless cripples. The peasants with their own hard struggle for existence are not kind or tactful to the unfit and they hated the thought of the names they would give them.

But now they go without fear, reconstructed physically with false limbs and a trade that often brings in more money than their old one, able to take their part usefully in the work of the community.

Gov. Lowden Supports Move to Save Dunes

In its fight to save the dune country as a national park the Dunes Pageant association will have the enthusiastic support of Gov. Lowden. The committee yesterday received a letter from Gov. Lowden which said:

"I am heartily in sympathy with the project for saving 'The Dunes.' They have natural beauty and at the same time are very suggestive of the early days, before this portion of the country was settled. I should like to see them incorporated into a national park."

THIEVES' PROFITS FOR WEEK REACH TOTAL OF $40,000

Burglars, holdup men, swindlers, safe robbers, pickpockets and other thieves had a $40,000 week of it. On the other hand, the police had a successful week from their standpoint.

Four auto bandits were arrested in thrilling chases.

One of the bandits, caught in an attempt to rob the paymaster of the Fortune Bros.' brewery of the weekly payroll, is believed to have been implicated in several "jobs" of this kind.

Child Bruised by Auto; Arrest Driver of Car

Anna Mruk, 10 years old, of 334 Holt street was severely bruised by an automobile last night at North Ashland and Grand avenue. Albert Vitter of 2156 Farragut street, the driver of the car, was arrested on a charge of assault.

WRITS DEFEAT DETECTIVES IN FRAUD PURSUIT

Detective Sergeant Frank Smith returned to Chicago yesterday and reported to Lieut. Larkin his lack of success in arresting five confidence men who swindled Millard Harrington, a wealthy farmer near St. Paul, Minn., out of $10,000 several weeks ago by means of the "wire game."

Harrington met the swindlers in the south and they interested him in horse races, afterward inducing him to accompany them to Waycross, Ga., where they fleeced him.

A friend advised Harrington to stop off at Chicago and inform the police. He did so, and Smith accompanied the farmer back to Waycross. The swindlers fled, but were pursued to Jasper, Fla., and captured. The men obtained their liberty on writs of habeas corpus.

King Satisfaction

THIS photograph is of Mr. J. T. Hughes of 620 South 15th Avenue, Maywood, a well-known Chicago business man. He writes of his King 8:

"I have just started a second season with my Model E King 8 Car, purchased from you June 1, 1916, and feel that you are entitled to know of the satisfactory results after covering 6,500 miles in and around Chicago—a good portion of which was country roads. So far I have experienced no trouble traveling highways used by any vehicle transportation, at the proper speed necessary to get the best results from my machine.

"For continuous power and smooth running the King 8 has few rivals. I might also state that I am still using three of the original Goodyear Tires received with the machine."

There are many reasons why King 8 owners are so unanimous in expressing satisfaction.

DR. SACHS LEFT $13,000; WIDOW DEFENDS NAME

Resents McCoid's Hint of Profits from the City Sanitarium.

Mrs. Theodore B. Sachs, widow of Dr. Sachs, who was president of the board of the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium at the time of his death, yesterday asked permission of the finance committee to state the truth regarding Dr. Sachs' personal estate.

Mrs. Sachs made her statement after Arthur McCoid, attorney for the present board of directors, had insinuated that Dr. Sachs profited from his connection with the institution. Tears came to the eyes of her friends as Mrs. Sachs spoke.

"Because of the rumors that have reached me regarding my husband's estate I wish to tell you just what he left me," began Mrs. Sachs.

"Unnecessary," Says McCoid.

"That is unnecessary," interposed McCoid. "Of course if you want to open this up we will have to go into the whole matter."

H. M. Gottlieb, attorney for the Committee of One Hundred, declared it was only fair to allow Mrs. Sachs to proceed.

Mrs. Sachs then stated that the estate consisted of three savings accounts and one checking account, the total being $13,000.01. In addition, she received life insurance, the amount of which was not stated.

"Didn't he leave any real estate?" asked McCoid.

"No," replied Mrs. Sachs.

Mrs. Sachs earlier in the day had replied to innuendoes of McCoid that Dr. Sachs sent his private patients to the municipal sanitarium.

"He always inquired very carefully whether the patient wished private treatment or wanted to go to the municipal sanitarium," Mrs. Sachs said. "In the latter case, his invariable rule was to refer the patient to the downtown office of the sanitarium."

5 CHICAGO BOYS WILL APPEAR IN 'FOOLS' PARADISE'

When the University of Michigan comic opera, "Fools' Paradise," is presented at the Auditorium theater on the evening of April 13, there will be five Chicago boys in the cast. They are Richard L. Hardy, Orva G. Williams, R. J. McCoughey, Milton H. Freund, and Morrison C. Wood. A. S. Hart, son of A. D. Hart of Hart, Schaffner & Marx of Chicago, wrote the book for the play.

The occasion of the opera will be made a gala time by the 2,300 Chicago alumni of the University of Michigan, under whose auspices the show is given. The Michigan society also will take part.

Following the performance a reception and dance will be held in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel. Attorney Paul Reinhard is general chairman of the event.

WAR OMELET!

Eggs and patriotism!

They go together in the national crisis, the Chicago butter and egg board decided yesterday, when it adopted a long set of resolutions pledging support to the president and the government in case of war.

"Whereas," the resolutions read, "the country is facing prospects of a speedy entry into the conflict now raging in Europe, and,

"Whereas, it is incumbent upon us as a board and individuals to assume our share of the responsibilities;

"Resolved, That we tender to the president our assurances of loyal and united support in his efforts to uphold the honor and dignity of our flag; and be it further

"Resolved, That we tender to him our knowledge and experience with particular reference to the lines in which we are engaged."

Also movies and partiotism.

Watterson R. Rothacker of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing company, offered the use of the company's entire plant for whatever use the army or navy might deem fit. Mr. Rothacker is a member of the Navy league and urges other members who have business enterprises to take similar action.

CHICAGO POETS SING WELCOME TO SPRINGTIME

Unmistakable signs of spring issued from the windows of the Auditorium hotel last night. The robin may guess wrong. But when the poet writes of the springtime the question is settled beyond a reasonable doubt. And to nail it down more securely, they sang their own lays.

Twenty-six of the poets who contributed to the Chicago anthology were present at a dinner given by the Writers' guild. Considerable extempore verse was brought forth by a prize offering. Poet Frank Putnam had saved $1.50 for the dinner, but had to leave the city. He sent his check and a note that the $1.50 should go to the best poem of the evening.

But the committee found none, it said, worthy of the full amount, and split the prize five ways. Here follows George S. Seymour's 30 cents worth:

For poets inclined to be thrifty
This Writers' guild dinner is nifty.
From soup to ice cream
Every course is a dream.
I love it, but O you one-fifty.

A scrap of paper, proving that poets do not need scented tissues and lavender ink to compose verse, contained the following:

There is a young lady named Cooley,
Quite charming and never unruly;
And I'm glad it was she
Who sat next to me;
For I am both hers and your truly.

WALLACE RICE.

Poet G. B. Masslich was awarded 30 cents for this:

My portion of ice cream was pink.
It nearly put me on the blink.
It was frozen so hard,
My front teeth are scarred.
O, give me hot water to drink.

Outside of that there was a considerable program, from the story of Llewellyn Jones of Amy Lowell's version of the fall of Ezra Pound and the rise of Amy Lowell to the closing poem by Vincent Starrett about the petulant relic collector who wanted the head of James I.

It should be said that Poet Douglas Malloch was toastmaster.

PAY ROLL BUGGY RAMMED; FIGHT SAVES $15,000

Paymaster Springs from Wreckage to Battle Four Men.

Pay roll bandits, essaying their regular Saturday afternoon holdups, met a Tartar yesterday when they attempted to take $15,000 from John Laverty, an agent of the Fortune Bros.' Brewing company. One of four bandits was shot and captured and his three companions put to flight.

The attempted robbery took place in front of the brewing plant at 412 South Desplaines street. Laverty was returning from the bank in a buggy, bringing with him the $15,000 pay roll in a small hand satchel.

Wrecked Buggy.

As Laverty drove up in front of the brewery offices the bandits smashed their car into his buggy, wrecking it. Laverty was thrown out and at the same time the robbers leaped to the ground and tried to wrest the satchel from him. Laverty held the bag close to him and fought back, the robbers surrounding him and attempting to knock him down. One blow almost succeeded in rendering him unconscious, but he broke through and gained the door of the office, thrusting the bag into the hands of Jeremiah Carmody, 1158 West Harrison street, a saloonkeeper, who was waiting to obtain cash for checks.

Realizing their failure, the robbers attempted to escape, and three of them gained the automobile and drove off. The fourth ran, followed by Frank Kehoe, vice president of the brewing company.

Mounted Policeman Pursues.

In a moment the chase was joined by Mounted Policeman John Ryan, who galloped after the fleeing robber.

In danger of capture he turned and fired three shots at the policeman, who then jumped from his horse and fired at the robber, wounding him in the hand. The wounded man threw up his hands, exclaiming.

"You've got me."

He was taken to the Desplaines street police station, where he gave the name of Edward Shishen. He gave his nativity as Turkish, and an examination of the police records disclosed him as "The Turk," known to detectives of the district. A magazine pistol was found in his clothing.

Harry Martini, manager of the "Bucket of Blood" saloon at 1733 West Madison street, was arrested last evening. The nature of the charge against him was not made known.

Auto Thieves Sentenced to from One to Ten Years

William Howard and August Englehart were sentenced to the penitentiary for from one to ten years yesterday by Judge Pam for having received stolen property. Both were members of the so-called "automobile thieves' trust." Englehart also is said to have been implicated with Adam Prochowski and others in the selling of loot from the "Gold Coast" burglaries.

MINGLE UTILITY WITH BEAUTY IN GARDEN SLOGAN

City's Backyard Committee Adopts Campaign Keynote.

While you are wielding the hoe in your home garden patch this spring and summer think of this slogan:

"Chicago beautiful—Chicago useful."

It was adopted as the keynote in the city wide garden campaign by civic leaders appointed yesterday by Chairman Perry G. Holden of the city wide garden committee to carry out the back yard and vacant lot "back to the soil" movement.

Big Men on Board of Works.

The active management of the campaign will be handled by business men appointed by Chairman Holden.

A board of works will be in direct charge of the city garden bureau, 507 city hall, and consists of the following: George W. Dixon of the Dixon Transfer company, chairman; J. E. Ferguson of Swift & Co., Walter D. Moody of the Chicago Plan Commission, John O'Leary of the Association of Commerce, L. J. Boughner advertising manager of the Daily News, Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson, and W. G. Parks of the Illinois Central.

Other committees appointed are: Garden lands, L. J. Boughner, chairman; soil preparations, William Burhart, chairman; seeds and planting, J. H. Prost, chairman; publicity, promotion, and extension, C. M. Carroll and Edgar Cooley of the International Harvester company, Dr. H. B. Thompson, and representatives of newspapers; crops, B. H. Heide of the Union stockyards.

Plan $15,000 Fund.

An executive secretary and a finance committee to raise a fund of $15,000 will be announced later.

"I have selected business men for this campaign," said Chairman Holden, "because they are the best qualified."

INDIANA STORM TOOK A TOTAL OF FORTY-TWO LIVES

Property Damage in New Albany Alone Placed at $1,133,000.

New Albany, Ind., March 24.—With six additional deaths reported during the day, and measures for relief instituted, New Albany today began to emerge from the gloom which had enveloped the city after the storm which wrecked portions of it late yesterday.

The deaths in New Albany reported to the chamber of commerce brought the list to thirty-seven. Five deaths were reported from the nearby territory. Of the 100 who were injured in New Albany, less than a dozen were in a serious condition.

Relief Measures Prompt.

The institution of relief measures was prompt. Citizens of Louisville, led by the board of trade, subscribed $12,000 and sent motor trucks loaded with food and clothing. Later the chamber of commerce issued an appeal to the country for aid, estimating that $200,000 was needed to properly care for the injured and homeless.

The work of clearing away the wreckage was under the supervision of a detachment of state troops. Sixty were on duty today and 100 more are expected tomorrow, when 200 inmates of the Indiana state reformatory at Jeffersonville will be put to work.

Property Loss $1,133,000.

An effort to estimate the property loss was made today by a committee appointed by the chamber of commerce, the New Albany real estate board and Red Cross representatives. The committee placed the loss, including damaged or destroyed homes and contents, at $1,133,000.

Red Cross workers, who made a survey, announced tonight that about 150 dwellings had been destroyed.

When the rescuers today examined the ruins of the Negro schoolhouse, which was expected to yield a number of bodies, they found a badly frightened but practically unhurt Negro boy.

WESTERN ROADS PREPARE A PLEA FOR RATE RAISE

Washington, D. C., March 24.—Application of western railroads for an increase in freight rates because of the higher cost of labor under the Adamson law and of supplies and equipment was forecast late today by a telegram to the interstate commerce commission, signed by officials of more than twenty roads, asking for a conference to consider steps necessary to meet "a financial situation requiring immediate relief."

While the western roads did not state specifically that a general advance in freight rates would be requested, such a request is expected to follow.

New Method of Control
Easiest of All to Operate

Because the builders of the Owen Magnetic realized that an entirely new method of power control was needed, the Owen Magnetic is the easiest of all cars to operate.

The functions of starting, stopping, gear-shifting and operating clutch are all performed by the mere movement of a small finger-lever on the steering wheel. This is made possible by the wonderful magnetic transmission used in the Owen Magnetic, which eliminates all of these separate parts.

No other car is so simple to drive—easy to drive—and safe to drive.

And the general excellence of the Owen Magnetic is fully comparable with its perfection of operation.

Only by driving or riding in an Owen Magnetic can you fully realize the vast difference between it and other cars.

Steel Boilers Supreme

There's absolutely nothing in the world like steel to build heating boilers out of. Show us something better and we'll make Kewanee Boilers of it. Thus far in our career we have found nothing that compares with steel. We've been building Kewanee Boilers out of steel for 25 years. None of them have ever worn out or cracked or leaked or spread—or failed in any sense. The average cost for repairs is about $1.50 per year.

So, we don't know how long Kewanee Steel Firebox Boilers will last. But we do know they will last 25 years at least. In many instances they have outlasted the building. Show us some other material with a record like that or some other boiler that will produce like the Kewanee has—does and will. Other materials are subject to the whims of heat and cold—they will crack and break and expand and contract. Kewanee Steel Boilers will not. And necessarily they are fool-proof.

156 solid miles of Chicago's finest buildings are heated by Kewanee Steel Firebox Boilers and in each instance the Kewanee Boiler is a renting, heating, health and advertising asset. Ask real estate men, owners of buildings, architects of renown, engineers who know, insurance men and contractors. They will tell you the Kewanee never fails and that the Kewanee is built of steel and goes into your building in one piece. The proof is everywhere. So is the Kewanee Steel Firebox Boiler.

CREDIT LAND CO. GETS RECEIVER; HUNT PROMOTER

Stop Delivery of Mail to W. E. Wright's Office.

Judge Carpenter yesterday appointed Frank M. McKey receiver for the American Credit Land company, whose president, Willis Ellsworth Wright, promoted the company as "something new in the financial world." A warrant charging use of the mails to defraud was issued for Wright, who is missing.

From W. H. Lamar, postoffice solicitor at Washington, the Chicago postal authorities received a telegram directing that delivery of mail to the offices of the company at 111 West Monroe street be stopped.

How Investors Explain It.

Investors explain Wright's scheme as follows:

A solicitor was sent out. He sold contracts with the company. Under the contract an investor would pay in $10 a month for twenty months. After the first payment, however, he was returned a coupon for $1.25, which he could use as part payment on the next installment.

He received such a coupon after each payment. Thus at the end of twenty months he had paid in actual cash $200 less the total amount of the coupons, which amounted to $33.75. In other words, he had invested $166.25. The company promised to return to him $200 at the end of the twenty months.

"It looked grand on paper," said Dr. August H. Bauer, one of those who described himself as "nicked."

"The solicitor with whom I dealt said the company could afford to give the investor $200 for $166.25, because its money was being invested at high interest rates in states with no limit on the interest rates."

None of the 250 persons who are creditors of the company was in court, but Attorney Richard R. Locke, treasurer and acting secretary of the company, appeared at Judge Carpenter's request.

Office Furniture Sold.

"I don't know where Wright is; I wish I did," said Locke. "He sold the office furniture for $1,000 and I haven't heard of him for a week. The company's biggest asset is thirty-nine lots in Gary, Ind., worth $15,000 and mortgaged for $8,000."

"This looks like a pretty mixup," said Judge Carpenter. "I will appoint Mr. McKey as receiver, and if Wright is where a hound dog can find him, McKey will find him. McKey, put your nose on the creosote and dig up some assets."

Judge Carpenter intimated that the federal grand jury will be asked to investigate the company. It also developed that the government has had the company under investigation for several weeks.

Trustee Appointed.

Postal inspectors turned over information to show the fraudulent use of the mails to Assistant District Attorney James R. Glass. Wright persuaded Mr. Glass that he could "come back" in a financial way, and Attorney Roger B. Hull was appointed trustee to handle the earnings of the concern. Instead, Wright left town with $400, which should have been turned over to the trustee, according to Mr. Glass.

Attorney Glass asserted that Wright's manipulations have allowed him to take between $30,000 and $40,000 out of the company in the last two years and a half.

When it became apparent that Wright was not making good in his promise to revamp the company, a warrant was sworn out for him.

FISH

State Culturist Promises to Stock State Rivers if Grant Park Gets Hatchery.

When C. B. Whitford, state fish culturist, promised to put 25,000,000 pike perch annually into the rivers and lakes of Illinois if the legislature established a hatchery near Grant park the group of fishermen at the Kuntz-Remmler restaurant last night found it impossible to suppress its emotion. Members of the state legislature were guests of the fishermen who are anxious to establish a hatchery in connection with the proposed aquarium. The meeting was called by a number of casting clubs.

The legislators were asked to make an appropriation of about $25,000 for the hatchery, which they desire to have placed in Chicago as the most favorable distributing point for the state.

Representatives of the following organizations were present: The Chicago Association of Commerce, the Hamilton club, the Rotary club, the Kiwanis club, the Chicago Principals' club, the Mystic Athletic association, the Chicago Aquarium society, the Chicago Fly Casting club, the Illinois Casting club, the Anglers' Casting club, and the North Shore Casting club.

Is your baby safe? Out of every thousand children born in Chicago last year, one hundred and eight died. Rich and poor both suffered. The well-to-do mothers trusted their refrigerators to keep baby's food from spoiling, never dreaming that the fluctuating temperature of the average ice-box makes it an unsafe storage place. "So often," says one eminent physician, "have I found a faulty refrigerator the cause of a baby's illness, that now I always take the temperature of the family ice-box as carefully as I do the baby's. And I have yet to find one capable of keeping milk cold enough the whole twenty-four hours." But—what melting ice can never do, Isko the electric home refrigerating unit now does every minute. It creates an endless stream of dry, steady cold that keeps milk, cream, and other perishable foods sweet and safe for days. It fits any ice-box, and gives your family the protection of perfect refrigeration, at moderate cost—$275, at Detroit. Install Isko now—before the dangerous hot season begins. See "the electric iceman" at the Isko Corporation of Illinois, 1717 Fisher Building, Chicago, or 'phone Harrison 2929.

HAITIAN TREATY MAKES U. S. REAL RULER OF LAND

Finances, Diplomacy, and Police Placed Under American Control.

BY GEORGE HINMAN JR.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, March 18.—The Haitian-American treaty, signed after various revolutions had terrorized the republic, gives the United States rigid control over Haitian affairs.

The most important provisions of the treaty may be summarized as follows:

1. The United States shall control the customs receivership.

2. The United States shall select a financial adviser to make such "recommendations" as "may be deemed necessary for the welfare and prosperity of Haiti."

3. Americans selected by the United States shall organize and officer a national constabulary "for the preservation of domestic peace, the security of individual rights, and the full observance of the provisions of this treaty."

4. The United States shall select engineers to direct the work of sanitation and public improvement.

5. The United States "will lend an efficient aid for the preservation of Haitian independence and the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty."

6. Haiti shall not lease or cede land to any foreign government, nor shall Haiti sign any treaty tending to impair its independence.

U. S. the Real Ruler.

In substance, then, the United States collects the revenues of Haiti, directs the finances and controls the national police; in other words, performs for Haiti all the important functions of a sovereign government.

The provisions which take from Haiti the prerequisites of sovereignty, are distinctly Wilsonian. The nominal sovereignty of Haiti is preserved by the treaty provision that the officials named shall be appointed by the president of Haiti upon "nomination by the president of the United States."

Opposed by European Powers.

These summarized facts tend to put an aspect of harshness upon the policy followed by the Wilson administration; but there are certain conditions which must be taken into consideration as furnishing at least some excuse for the steps taken.

Before the outbreak of the European war in August, 1914, the United States was in an embarrassing position as a result of the Haitian situation. Our efforts to handle the problem alone and to maintain the Monroe doctrine met with the opposition both of France and of Germany, which sought to participate.

While France spoiled whatever chances there were of obtaining the desired concessions from Guillaume Sam, Germany was the more frankly insistent. Both sent notes asking that they be allowed to participate in settling the Haitian problem; and to both the United States replied that the traditional policy of the American government would not harmonize with such an arrangement.

Germany Has Other Tasks.

Thereupon Germany answered that the imperial government would not be able to "understand" any settlement in which it was not included. Then came the war, and Germany, like Napoleon, had more important matters to look after.

But when Admiral Caperton landed at Port-au-Prince he found unmistakable evidence that the Monroe doctrine was not as well thought of as might have been desired.

In the archives of the Haitian department of foreign affairs was a note from the imperial German government which stated in substance that Germany was ready to take over the supervision of Haitian affairs, peaceably if possible, forcibly if necessary.

It must not be supposed that the troubles of Haiti were solved when the Dartiguenave government signed the treaty of Sept. 16. What was done by the government at Port-au-Prince in the years before the intervention had never bothered the hill folk in the northeast. For years the northeast had been the birthplace of Haitian revolutions. In the hills and mountains dwelt the Cacos, almost a race apart. When the spirit moved them they were wont to descend upon the towns and take what they wanted.

The real Caco campaign began in the last week of September, 1915. Fourteen hundred marines were divided into twenty-four columns to sweep the country. The night before one detachment was to leave the town of Le Trou it was attacked by Cacos. They were driven off. Two marines were wounded and thirty-eight Cacos killed. The bodies were soaked with gasoline from a marine motor truck and burned in the town square. That was just a starter.

Rebel Bands Wiped Out.

Detailed reports of the Caco campaign are not available. The marine columns worked thoroughly. Band after band of Cacos was overtaken and annihilated. A man standing on one hill looked out over the surrounding country to see scattered all about spirals of smoke rising from the ruins of burned Caco cottages.

How many Haitians were killed by the American forces of occupation it is impossible to ascertain. Estimates by those most closely in touch with the campaigns place the figure between 600 and 700, nearly all of whom were killed in the northeast. The marine casualties, including wounded, total barely a score.

Jeffery Six
Points of Superiority

Go over a Jeffery Six feature by feature; examine it carefully from the springs to the top. Then you will understand why we believe, and its performance among over two thousand Chicago owners bears out what we say, that this car is the greatest motor car value in the industry.

To start with, this car has more alloy steel than any car within $400 of its price. Alloy steel is far costlier than carbon steel, but it doubles dependability and gives longer service. Then the crankshaft of the motor is balanced inherently so that vibration even at high speed is eliminated. This is a vital feature, and it makes the Jeffery Six motor the smoothest running motor made. It easily adds fifty per cent to the life and superior running qualities of the Jeffery Six.

The large roomy body is made of the best grade white ash and extra heavy gauge steel. Even after months of service the Jeffery Six is noted for its freedom from any squeaks or rattles caused by loose body construction.

And you'll find all through this car that the Nash Idea of quality has been scrupulously maintained. And remember that this car is built and backed by one of the greatest motor car organizations in the world—the Nash Motors Company.

Frequent feats of performance show that the Jeffery Six will outperform any other car within two hundred dollars of its price. We are ready to prove this statement. Come in or phone for a demonstration.

The Jeffery Six has a world of power and speed. And it is amazingly flexible. You can range from two to sixty miles an hour with but high—no shifting gears. It pulls powerfully, smoothly, silently, in the toughest going you can find.

“Own Your Own” “Own Your Own”

“You bet it’s a good garage”

“AND the best thing about it, Burke, is the fact that I bought that garage ready made.”

“Son Jack and I assembled it this afternoon. It was a cinch; dont know when I have had so much fun. No sawing or nailing to do; just bolted it together and it’s stronger than anything a carpenter could build.”

“You had me guessing, Palmer.”

“When I went downtown this morning there wasn’t a sign of a garage on your lot and I saw you starting off for your regular ‘two-a-day’ hike for the public garage just as I left.”

“I know it, Burke, but I got tired of the inconvenience of boarding my car, the long walks and the still longer garage bills, so I decided to ‘own my own’. Always thought it cost too much money until I read about these Togan ready made garages—and looked into the matter for myself.”

“Oh, one of those portable garages—”

“Just a minute, Burke; get that flimsy ‘portable’ idea out of your head, these are real buildings. This garage is made in strong, durable sections about 8 feet by 3 feet; easy to handle and every section perfectly machined and matched. The windows are in, the service doors are hung and all sections joined with the Togan lock-joint. The buildings are absolutely weatherproof. And solid—the pyramids haven’t anything on that garage.”

“Must have cost you a nice little pile, Palmer. That garage of mine cant touch yours and I paid $300 for it last year; it took me about three weeks to get it up and they were some three weeks of worry, believe me.”

“Burke, that experience of yours with delays and high cost made me a little gun-shy on owning a garage of my own.”

“But this ready made idea takes all the worry and fuss out of garage building. Would you believe it, that building cost me only $150—from 25% to 50% less than a carpenter or contractor would charge me for a similar garage, and this is a better one, and I got it when I wanted it. The storage I’m saving will pay for it in a few months.”

“Burke, you wouldn’t shop around for your car; buy your engine one place, wheels somewhere else and then get the village blacksmith to put it together—I should say not. You buy a car that has been made in a modern factory; you get the benefit of big buying and big manufacturing, specialization and concentration—the highest efficiency.”

“Well, it’s the same way with these Togan people. They make these buildings in enormous quantities; you get the saving of big buying and big making. Every part is carefully machined. They put the finest quality of everything into these buildings—”

* * * *

There are any number of men like Palmer who haven’t bought a garage because of the cost; you may be one of them. The Togan ready made garages solve your problem; high in quality—time and money savers.

Many men who haven’t cars are putting up Togan garages on their lots and are renting them to their neighbors who haven’t room for one. And men like Burke, who already have garages, are planning on Togan ready mades for their summer homes.

By all means investigate: you’re going to like the looks, the low cost (from $81 up), the convenience and the quality. You can see these garages already erected in our exhibition room on the 5th floor of the Advertising building at 123 West Madison Street, or at 11007 S. Michigan Avenue.

Make Sure Of Your Togan Now!

Then you’ll be ready to get full pleasure out of the first days of spring motoring—and those days are just about here.

Reserve your garage before the spring rush starts and we can deliver it on any day you say.

If you cant drop in and see the building in “real life” at our exhibition room on the 5th floor of Advertising Building, 123 W. Madison, phone Franklin 3388 or sign the slip at the left and mail it today for literature giving full information. Tear out the slip NOW before you forget.

RECORDS FALL AS MAROONS WIN TITLE

CHICAGO LANDS 38 POINTS IN BIG NINE MEET

Dismond, Ames, and Midway One Mile Squad Set New Mark.

Table of Points

Chicago	38
Illinois	23
Wisconsin	20
Northwestern	11½
Purdue	9½
Minnesota	6
Indiana	2

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

In a meet featured by the closest kind of competition the team representing the University of Chicago last night won the seventh annual indoor track and field championship of the Western Intercollegiate association with 38 points. Illinois athletes were second with 23 points and Wisconsin third with 20.

To Jerry Fisher of Chicago went the individual honors. He scored ten points by winning the running high jump and the pole vault.

Four conference records were broken, but only three of the new marks will stand. Ames of Illinois lowered the sixty yard high hurdles time to :07 4-5, Dismond of Chicago cut the 880 mark to :50 4-5, and the Maroon quartet set a new one mile relay mark of 3:32⅗. Van Aken of Purdue lost a record when he was disqualified for fouling after winning the half mile in 1:59 3-5.

Meet Draws Crowd of 2,000.

Two thousand rooters and friends of the competing athletes crowded into the gymnasium to see the contests, which were featured by the keenest and most interesting competition seen since the meet was inaugurated seven years ago. The building was decorated with American flags, and cheers of the competing colleges reëchoed through the big hall.

Schardt of Wisconsin won the mile run by five yards from Gantz of Illinois. The pair raced nip and tuck the entire distance, but the Badger held the pole and kept other contenders from taking it away from him. The time was 4:31 4-5.

In a blanket finish Smith of Wisconsin won the final heat of the fifty yard dash. Casey of Wisconsin was set back a yard for a false start. Barker of Northwestern was second, a scant foot behind the winner, who footed the distance in :05 3-5, one second slower than the record.

Ames Breaks Hurdles Record.

The first record to go by the board was in the sixty yard high hurdles. Waldo Ames of Illinois broke the mark of :08 by leaping the barriers in :07 4-5. He made the new mark in the first heat and tied it when he won the final heat.

Fisher of Chicago won the pole vault by clearing the bar at twelve feet three inches. Lang of Illinois, Graham of Chicago, and Endres of Wisconsin tied for the other places at twelve feet.

The second record to fall was in the quarter mile. Binga Dismond of the University of Chicago won by two yards from Smart of Northwestern in :50 4-5, which beat his own record of :52, made in 1915. Smart gave the Maroon a race from start to finish, and only the endurance of the colored runner won him the verdict.

Campbell Takes Two Mile Run.

Campbell of Purdue won the two mile run. Wallace gave Minnesota its first points by winning second place.

Van Aken of Purdue won the half mile, but was disqualified for fouling on the turn. After an argument Clark of Chicago was given the verdict. The Boilermaker beat Clark by at least five yards. He trotted the distance in 1:59 3-5, which beat the record of Osborne of Northwestern, made in 1913, but, because of the disqualification, Van Aken's mark will not stand.

With the Big Nine track title assured, the Maroons stepped out for all the honors possible and closed the meet by winning the one mile relay. Feurstein, Curtis, Greene, and Dismond ran in that order for Chicago.

James W. Bixby
J. D. TOLOFF PHOTO

JAMES W. BIXBY, physical director of the Evanston Y. M. C. A., is to basketball what McGraw, manager of the Giants, is to baseball. Ten years of success as a basketball coach hasn't turned Bixby's head one bit, and he is as reserved as he was when he first went to Evanston in 1906.

From 1907 to 1912 two teams, the Evanston Reds and the Crescents, were regular world beaters. Few quintets in this section made such a record, and all the boys credited it to Bixby, who in turn said the boys were responsible. Since 1912 Bixby has been coaching the high school teams, and has turned out many a youngster who made good in his college days.

Among the university stars were the Woods twins, who placed Illinois on the basketball map in recent years; also Mackay at the Urbana school; Driscoll, Ellingwood, and Marquardt at Northwestern; Cobb at Yale, and Overbagh at Brown.

During Bixby's first two years with the high schoolers, Evanston won the north shore championship. In 1911 the first central states tournament for preps was held, and in four of the five years Evanston cashed first money, winning from a representative field of star quintets.

Last Saturday Evanston won the biggest prep championship tourney ever staged in this country when it defeated Freeport at the University of Chicago in an overtime combat. Since the organization of the Chicago-Suburban conference, Evanston under Bixby's tutelage has won three of four heavyweight titles, losing one year to New Trier and three of the four lightweight cups, losing this season to New Trier.

BACKERS UNITE ON SINGLE BILL TO GET BOXING

State Commission and a Tax on Fighters, Clubs, and Referees Asked.

BY RAY PEARSON.

If the incorporation in one bill of the best features of three measures before the state legislature at Springfield will bring about passage, then Illinois looks reasonably assured of a revival of boxing. That was the way things looked yesterday afternoon after there had gathered at the Hotel La Salle the sponsors of the three bills, numerous managers, sporting editors, and boxing writers of the local newspapers and a couple of boxers.

It was a get together meeting set for the purpose of discussing the introduction of one measure at Springfield in which would be combined the best points of all the others. Representatives Jacob W. Epstein and T. D. Murphy, who some time ago introduced bills at the state capital, were on hand, as was Leonard Hicks, who also has prepared a bill. Epstein, Murphy, and Hicks each read his bill, and the revamping went along as they read. All of the measures were found of the proper spirit, but it quickly was discovered that there was plenty of room for improvement.

Bill Comes Up Wednesday.

As a result of the meeting there will go to the license and miscellany committee at Springfield next Wednesday for introduction what will be known as the committee bill. This is the measure worked out at the conference yesterday, and if it succeeds in passing that means there will be boxing in Chicago by July 1. An effort was made to find a title for the committee measure, but after several had been suggested none seemed acceptable and further action on this point was deferred.

The new bill calls for a commission of three members, who will serve without salary. The secretary, however, will be on the state pay roll, drawing down $3,600 for his services annually. The commission is invested with full power to regulate the sport, and the selection of men who will act without receiving pay for their services, it is expected, will result in a commission of members who will work for the full interests of boxing.

Incorporated in the new measure is a clause to the effect that boxers must register with the state bureau and pay the sum of $5 annually for a license to box in Illinois. The referees also will be licensed and must pay an annual fee of $25.

Club License Fee Varies.

Considerable discussion resulted when an effort was made to set the amount of the license fees for the clubs. The plan suggested was to charge all clubs in Chicago $1,000, but friends of the smaller clubs took up the cudgels at this point and convinced the meeting that this would work a hardship on clubs with small memberships. This resulted in a clause being inserted in the bill which affects only Chicago. Clubs of under 2,000 membership in this city will pay $250, while those of over will be taxed $500. All clubs will be forced to post a bond of $5,000.

In cities of under 5,000 population throughout the state a $25 fee will be charged, for over 5,000 it will be $50, and for 100,000 or more, $100.

It was decided that 5 per cent of the gross receipts of all contests shall go into the state treasury. Out of this amount the secretary will be paid his salary and be allowed $1,500 annually for traveling expenses. Inspectors will be chosen to work at the command of the commission.

No Tax on Amateurs.

Another feature of the committee bill is its liberality toward amateur boxing. No fee will be charged for A. A. U., A. A. F., or playgrounds boxing.

At the conference Roger J. Marcy acted as chairman, others present being Frank Vice Jr., Representatives Epstein and Murphy, and Leonard Hicks. Willie Ritchie, former lightweight champion, and Charley White also attended.

Darcy Says O'Sullivan Isn't His Manager Now

Milwaukee, Wis., March 24.—[Special.]—In an effort to straighten out his Milwaukee contract tangle, Les Darcy, the football of the ring, has sent the state boxing commission an affidavit that Tim O'Sullivan is not his manager. After hearing from O'Sullivan the board will decide what standing Darcy has in Badger fistic circles.

In his affidavit Darcy charges O'Sullivan with trying to hold him up after he paid O'Sullivan's fare to this country and was willing to give him what he thought was a fair rakeoff on each fight.

O'Sullivan, he says, insisted on 25 per cent of Darcy's end for the McCoy fight and even hinted at a 33 per cent split. Darcy says he balked at this and when O'Sullivan stood firm in his demand told him his services no longer were needed.

TENNIS ASSOCIATION LINES UP PLAYERS FOR SERVICE IN WAR

New York, March 24.—The catapult force of Maurice E. McLoughlin's service or the preciseness of William M. Johnston's grenade shots or even the stinging back hand drives of R. Norris Williams II. may be felt in the trenches in case of war, it was indicated today when the United States National Lawn Tennis association, through its executive committee, formally advocated compulsory military training and urged all tennis players to enter training camps.

Tennis players were urged to write their congressmen, asking support for any measure that may provide an acceptable form of military training.

Cancel Meets in Case of War.

These recommendations may be changed, it was stated, if war really comes. Tournament schedules, now tentatively agreed upon, may be canceled, it was said, upon recommendation of the war department.

The meeting authorized a committee to inquire into the standing and activities of every player selling tennis goods to his brethren. The purpose was given as finding out how far some players have been involved in capitalizing their reputations. The final schedule of tournaments was left to a committee composed of the president and secretary of the association.

National Title Tourneys.

Dates of the national championship tournaments were awarded as follows:

Women's national championships, the Philadelphia Cricket club, beginning June 18. Clay court championships, Ohio Lawn Tennis association, Cincinnati, July 7. National doubles, Longwood Cricket club, Aug. 13. National singles, West Side Tennis club, Forest Hills, L. I., Aug. 30. Church cup, an intercity team match between New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, Merion Cricket club, Philadelphia, June 8-9.

Macks Take Final, 8 to 5, but Braves Win Series

Miami, Fla., March 24.—The Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Boston Braves in the last of the three game series, bringing the standing for the series to two to one for the Braves. The score was 8 to 5. Heavy hitting and loose fielding featured. There were nine doubles and two triples. Score:

CRAZY KENNEDY, DETECTIVE

Words AND Pictures

BY RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER 1.

I WAS accidentally sitting in my office one morning when the telephone rang. I took up the receiver.

"Hello," I said.

"Who is this?" said a voice at the other end of the wire.

"Frank Morrison," was my reply.

"I must have the wrong number," said the voice, and its owner hung up.

CHAPTER 2.

Ten minutes later my telephone rang again.

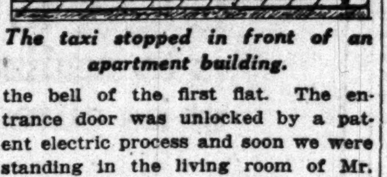
"Hello. Is that you, Morrison?" said a voice which I instantly recognized as that of Crazy Kennedy. "Get your hat and coat on. I will come by in a taxi in two minutes. I want you to take a ride with me. It's a professional trip, and the case promises some neat little points."

Three minutes later I was seated beside my interesting friend and we were speeding westward on the boulevard. I waited in vain for him to enlighten me as to our destination and the reason for the hasty journey. All he said on the way was:

"I have too few facts to form any conclusions. I am trying not to think about the case. It's a big mistake for a man to attempt deductions before learning the full details."

CHAPTER 3.

The taxi stopped in front of an apartment building just this side of the city limits. We alighted and Kennedy, after telling the driver to wait, proceeded into the vestibule and rang the bell of the first flat. The entrance door was unlocked by a patent electric process and soon we were standing in the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Painter, for that was the name of the people who held the lease.



The taxi stopped in front of an apartment building.

In an adjoining room an infant was screaming at the top of its voice.

"I perceive you have a baby," remarked Kennedy.

"Wonderful!" commented Painter.

"O, yes, they all are," Crazy replied.

Mrs. Painter wrung her hands and ears. She was evidently distraught.

"It is on his account that we summoned you," she said nervously. "He has been crying like that ever since 5 o'clock this morning and we can't find out what's the matter."

"Let us have a look at the ornery brat," said Kennedy, and the parents took us into the bedroom.

The baby was lying in a cradle, kicking like a steer. Kennedy hastily removed his (the baby's) clothing.

"No," he said when he had finished. "It's as I expected. There are no pins sticking into him. How old is he?"

"Fourteen months," replied Mrs. Painter.

"How many bottles a day?" Crazy inquired.

"Five," answered the mother.

"When did he eat last?" asked my friend.

"At four-thirty," said Mrs. Painter, "and he has been crying ever since he got through."

"I'd like to see that bottle," said Kennedy.

"You may," said Painter. "It's in the kitchen sink."

We all moseyed to the kitchen. With a yell of triumph Crazy rushed to the sink and picked up the bottle.

"Just as I thought!" he cried. "Mr. Painter, when you got up to give your boy his bottle, you were half asleep. And you gave him a bottle of beer!"

"But," I butted in, "why should that make him cry?"

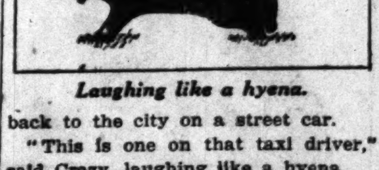
"Morrison," said Kennedy, "remember that a baby's capacity and that of a full grown man are somewhat different. A pint of beer would have no effect on you. But it has given this brat a weeping jag."

CHAPTER 4.

"Mrs. Painter," said Kennedy, when we were about to depart a few minutes later, "is there a way of going out the back door and getting over to the next street without being seen from the front of this building?"

"Certainly," was her reply, and she led us through the kitchen and out into the court.

In a little while we were bound back to the city on a street car.



Laughing like a hyena.

CUBS START WILDLY; LOSE JOKE CONTEST TO FRISCO NINE, 12-7

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

San Francisco, Cal., March 24.—[Special.]—It was too bad for the Cubs that the much talked of Frisco fog didn't appear today and hide them from view. Instead it was a fine, bright, sunshiny afternoon and about 3,500 Frisco folks could see quite clearly just how Fred Mitchell's remodeled young men were acting. It made every one laugh, for the Cubs were awful in the first four innings, and the game resulted 12 to 7 in favor of the Seals.

A lot of bad luck broke against the Cubs in the early innings. Balls hit to the outfield would carom off lumps of dirt big as a man's hat and go bounding away to the fence, and little poky hits would fall safely over our infielders; but, just the same, the whole exhibition was laughable to the folks who live out here. It is doubtful tonight if a fan in Frisco would consent to a swap even the Seals for the Cubs.

Double Squeeze Upsets Cubs.

Wolverton's frisky fellows even went so far as to pull the double squeeze, or something like it. Once with Pick on third and Downs on second and no one out the latter started for the home plate when the pitcher began to wind up. The batter hit an easy bouncer down to Deal, who messed it all over the third corner of the diamond, while both base runners dashed over the plate, one a yard behind the other.

Mitchell started Phil Douglas and took him out when the Seals rapped out four runs in the first. Packard replaced Phil and the Seals made one in the second, four in the third, and one more in the fourth. That was all Gene could stand, and Claude Hendrix then tried his luck. He got by nicely, although a couple of runs came over in the eighth on some more messy play.

"Casey" Smith Checks Cubs.

Indian Smith, who was known as "Casey" Smith when he once had a trial with the Cubs as shortstop, kept the big leaguers guessing for five rounds through which he labored as the Seals' twirler. He was succeeded by "Spider" Baum, one of the stars here, and the Cubs lammed "Spider" for six runs in the sixth, after two men were out. A third one should have been out, but got his life on an error. Baum had no trouble thereafter.

Nine errors all told were made and the Cubs were guilty of seven of them. No wonder the fans out here think these spring exhibitions are a joke.

HURLER FABER GOES DISTANCE, WINNING, 6 TO 3

VICTIM NO. 1

Albuquerque, N. M., March 24.—Ben Toledo, an 18 year old Navajo Indian boy, is the first victim of the 1917 baseball season. He died within a few minutes after being struck over the heart by a foul tip, batted by a teammate on the United States Indian school nine here late yesterday.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Houston, Tex., March 24.—[Special.]—Red Faber worked the full nine inning route today for the first time this year against the Buffs and proved he is getting ready rapidly to go the same distance against tougher antagonists. The White Sox were the victors, 6 to 3, and the locals counted two-thirds of their runs in the final spasm.

Six safe swats were made off the Cascade, Ia., hurler. Three of them got together in the first round and produced one run. It would have been two but for a rapid fire gun concealed in Felsch's sleeve, which killed off a runner at the plate. From there to the ninth Faber made the ball perform all its usual tricks, and with perfection broke curves across the corners or inside as he pleased.

Risberg's Feat Stops Rally.

Six Buffs whiffed themselves to death and only two hits were made from the first to the last period. In the ninth a punctured batsman and a two base whack, followed by two infield outs, scored two runs.

Risberg pulled the feature play in stopping this final attack of the enemy. It was a whirlwind stop of a base hit over second. The Swede raced back, dug the ball out of the dirt with one hand, and got his man at first by a step. Although the home bugs were rooting for a winning rally, they quit and cheered Risberg instead.

Criss, none other than the Dode, who used to lead the American league in pinch hitting, pitched part of the way against the Sox and got by for three rounds without damage. In the fourth the Rowlands landed for five solid blows, including a pair of doubles, and took the lead with four runs. Utt, who spelled the former St. Louis Brown, did his "Utt-most" to blank the Sox, but they pestled two tallies off him in five innings.

Three White Sox Sluggers.

The healthiest blows were by Jackson, Felsch, and Risberg. The last named completed the circuit on a sizzler that shot over Northen's head on the bound and went to the fence, but the runner would have been held on third if Britton had not foozled the return throw.

The Sox did not emerge from the sage brush district until this morning, and had some difficulty in keeping the pepper pot full after three straight nights in sleepers. They are booked to play the Buffs again tomorrow, then practice three hours each morning while the local team exhibits with the Chattanooga club of the Southern league. On Thursday the Sox and Buffs will meet for a third game.

Hose May Play Chattanooga.

Manager Rowland has offered to play one game against Chattanooga and let the Houston team keep the gate receipts. What the Sox most need is practice against pitchers who are trying and team fielding on a good diamond.

They are no longer the "Whites," as as they donned their gray traveling suits of 1914. The white uniforms of last year having been ruined by the oiled base lines in Fort Worth.

WORLD RECORD AGAIN BROKEN IN A. B. C. MEET

Satorius and Holzschuh of Peoria Raise Mark for Doubles to 1,346.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 24.—[Special.]—Two bowlers from Peoria broke the world's records in doubles today for the third time in the present American Bowling congress tournament when Gus Satorius and William Holzschuh of the Edelweiss club rolled 1,346, thirty-two points over the mark of the Indianapolis men, McCaughan and Peachey, who had felt secure.

Holzschuh opened his doubles with a single pin blow. With 1,300 for his first six games, Sartorius shot only 589 in singles.

Doc Peters and Billy Becker of Chicago led that city in doubles during the morning with 1,227. Seven totals over 1,200 were made, Chicago rolling three of them. Frank Grebe led the individual work in the early play with 651 and ran into seventh place. The leaders' scores:

FIELD OF 300 PREPS BOOKED TO COMPETE IN PURPLE CONTESTS

BY EVAN STONE.

Athletic Director Lewis Omer is making extensive preparations for taking care of the 300 high school and prep athletes expected to take part in the eighth annual Northwestern university interscholastic scheduled at Patten gymnasium next Saturday. Entries from distant schools show the Purple indoor classic is becoming widely popular.

George Vilas, a dash man from Phillips Exeter academy, is the farthest eastern entry, while western athletes are coming from Grand Rapids, Ames, Ia., and Mempis, Mo. Other out of town schools which have sent in entries are Stronghurst, Wheaton, Kankakee, West Aurora, Streator, and Manteno, Ill.; Laporte, Ind.; Tomah, Wis.; Decatur, Mich., and Coldwater, Mich.

Osborn Brother of Purple Star.

From Coldwater comes Kenneth Osborn, brother of Gravy Osborn, former star half miler under Coach Omer's tutelage, and who now holds the conference indoor record of 2:00 3-5 in the 880. Young Osborn is entered in the mile and half mile. Another athlete around whom interest centers is Walter Adams of Manteno, Ill., who has a record of six feet in the high jump.

The largest entry list so far received is from University High, with nineteen men. Other Chicago high schools are expected to send in their entries this week. The track and field events will be held Saturday night. In the afternoon the interscholastic swimming meet and the oratorical contests will be staged. Preliminaries in all contests will be held on Friday.

Coach Robinson, who has the swimming meet in charge, is planning to stage a bigger meet than last year.

Frats to Entertain Preps.

Preparations for housing and entertaining the visiting athletes are being pushed by the fraternities and student council. Vaudeville stunts and moving pictures will keep the athletes from suffering from inertia after they have done their several parts in the meet.

COMEBACK BY COLUMBIA Y. C.; RACES ON CARD

Lake Front Club Regains Position—Will Revive Lipton Cup Event.

BY JOHN DE LONG.

The Columbia Yacht club, after having been tossed about in the financial breakers for several seasons, at last has succeeded in clawing off the lee shore, has resumed its prominent position among Lake Michigan sailing organizations. Reorganization, which has quietly been going on for some time, was completed last week.

The clubhouse at the foot of Randolph street, which formerly housed the late lamented Sportsmen's Club of America, has been refurnished and reoccupied; a vigorous campaign for active members started; a full schedule of racing events mapped out, and prominent boat owners elected as officers. At a recent meeting of members the following ticket was elected for the year:

Commodore, C. H. Morgan; vice commodore, H. D. Moreland; rear commodore, D. W. MacDonald; secretary, Frank B. Wever; treasurer, M. J. Bates. Directors, Fred D. Porter, H. L. Diehl, J. F. McGuire. Regatta committee, E. J. Conlan, chairman; J. J. Coyne, M. J. Bates.

Revival of Lipton Cup Race.

That the Columbians intend to take a prominent part in yacht racing was indicated at the recent meeting of the Lake Michigan Yachting association when delegates representing the organization announced that the popular Lipton cup races would be revived under its auspices the coming season.

"Regular meetings are now being held at the clubhouse," said Secretary Wever. "Everybody is enthusiastic over the prospects for building up an active organization. It was necessary to make a clean sweep of the barnacles that retarded the progress of the craft in the past. Our membership, which has been opened to all nautically inclined, is rapidly filling. We have a fine clubhouse, are free from debts, and a great season is assured.

Offer Yachts to U. S.

Boat owners of the Jackson Park Yacht club have fallen into the preparedness line and offered their boats to the government, to be used in case of war. Fifteen of the members have placed their names on the list of yacht owners who will turn their boats over for the use of the recently organized Chicago yachtsmen's naval auxiliary. The Jackson Park Y. C. has planned one of the busiest racing seasons in the history of the organization. At a meeting of the regatta committee twenty-seven events were listed for the summer's campaign on the lake.

Elks Athletic Events to Be Held on May 1

With the Coliseum as the place and May 1 as the date, Chicago lodge No. 4, B. P. O. E., is rapidly perfecting plans for the annual Elks' athletic carnival here. Indications are this year's entertainment will surpass the banner affair of last season, when the carnival attracted 10,000 visitors. The carnival will be a sort of three ringed circus, with athletic stunts holding the center stage and vaudeville celebrities entertaining on the side platforms. Les Darcy, Packey McFarland, Freddie Gilmore, Charley White, and Johnny Coulon are among the boxers who already have promised their services. Joe Stecher, wrestling champ, also has given his word that he will appear in actual combat.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

THE OBSERVANT ANGLER.

ANGLE ROD is not "an expert fisherman," nor yet one of those anglers we describe by saying "he always gets fish." He is simply a gentle soul who loves fine tackle, clean angling methods, and to whom fish, few or many, are only incidental to a day on the stream or lake.

Why, there have been days when he has gone to his favorite stream and never rigged up his rod. He would just loaf on the bank and invite his soul. There he would sprawl, his hands clasped beneath his head and one leg comfily crossing the other as he gazed up into the blue sky "and at every little cloud that went, with sails of silver, by." He would drink in, almost unconsciously, the songs of the birds and would lazily wonder, like any other imaginative boy, at all the dim chatter and mysterious rustlings and uncanny cracklings that continually break the silence of wooded places. For an angler, brother, is merely a boy who, through no choice of his own, but because of a biological law and a social necessity, has grown up.

In trout fishing, Angle Rod divides his time between casting and observing. He notices, for example, that insects are on the rise and he often cuts open his first fish to see what it has been feeding on, and then selects his flies accordingly.

Of course he doesn't follow this or any other observation religiously, but gathers a hint here and another there and puts them together. He travels his flies over the same route fish food naturally would follow, and when the sun is fairly high he always, when possible, drops his flies in the shadow of a shrub or tree, having observed that trout liketh not the brash, brazen glare of a hot sun.

When fishing a stream he has learned that one should work all of the good water carefully with not more than from thirty to forty feet of line. There are ten good casters to one good wader—most stream fishermen hurry along too much and thereby pass good spots and lose fish that are eligible to occupy space in one's creel. "A likely spot," says Angle Rod, "seldom produces a fish, but the water near it often does."

One day Angle Rod was fishing a stream and he noticed some bees swarming on the limb of a tree overhanging the water. Occasionally a bee would fall into the stream and the current would carry it past a big rock. Then there would be a swirl—exit bee!

He got up on the bank and made a detour around the tree and reëntered the water above it. Opening his fly box—he uses only eyed flies—he selected one of a beelike coloration known as the McGinty and tied it to his leader.

He cast it and allowed the current to carry it past the big rock. Zowie! How that trout did snap it! He permitted the fish to take plenty of line, after hooking him, and followed him down stream, where he landed him at his leisure. Did he rush right back for another and spoil it all? Not Angle Rod. He sat up on the bank, filled his pipe, and took a smoke. By the time he was ready to fish again things had quieted down. To shorten the story, he took six sizable fish from that spot while two fishermen of the hustler type had waded several miles of the stream—right past the big tree—and got one fish apiece.

Onother time Angle Rod was at a nearby bass lake. It was mid-summer and the day was hot, the sun bright, and the lake as smooth as a mirror. You know the kind of a day we mean—"Cast my fool head off 'n never got a strike" is what they say at the supper table after a day like this.

That evening Angle Rod took a walk around one end of the lake to visit a cottager. It was dark when he started back. Coming to a place where the path runs along the edge of a high spot on the shore he heard something that aroused his interest. It was just a "flip" followed by the swirl of a feeding fish. His flashlight showed that the "flip" was the impact of a cricket striking the water—the swirl told the rest of the story. He hurried back to the hotel, rigged up his fly rod with a small black gnat fly—it was very amusing to the unsuccessful bait casters—and hustled into a boat.

Did you ever take a bass on a fly rod in the dark? Then you know what sport Angle Rod had that night. He took seven pretty bass, the only fish caught on the lake that week end.

In bait casting Angle Rod soon learned the value of casting fairly high in the air. This lesson was learned one day as he loafed on a bluff overlooking the lake and saw two casters "working the shore line." The one who cast his lure a little up got all the fish. Angle Rod could see the fish in the clear water below him take after the high traveling bait just like an outfielder gets under a long fly.

Angle Rod learned also that persistent casting in one spot often "devils" a fish into striking; that a lure started back quickly gets the most strikes; that light tackle gives the most sport, and a whole lot of other things that anglers learn sooner or later, just in proportion as they observe.

NEW CLUB BUILDS COURSE IN YEAR, SETTING RECORD

Bob o' Link Golfers Speed Construction—First Tourney May 30.

BY JOE DAVIS.

In a report submitted to officials of the Bob o' Link club by W. A. Alexander at a luncheon yesterday at the University club, the chairman of the greens committee stated the course can be played over now, using winter rules, without damaging it. By the 1st of June, he predicts, the putting greens will be in better shape than nine-tenths of those on other Chicago courses.

The notable feature of these conditions is that the work has been done and results produced inside of a year. In this short space of time the members have been given a scientifically constructed course and a park which by the middle of the summer will look as if it had been there for a century.

Opening Tournament May 30.

Mr. Alexander asserts the course will be in perfect condition by the middle of May, an accomplishment unprecedented in the annals of golf in this country, and one which proves that the original investment in a golf course should be permanent.

President Walter Ross announced the clubhouse and new locker room are under roof and that the club probably will hold an opening tournament about May 30.

Work on the second nine holes of the Speedway course is being pushed as fast as the weather will permit. The course laid out by Tom Bendelow is the longest in this section of the country, measuring 6,600 yards. The first nine holes were played last year and the full course will be opened on June 9, the date of the third annual Chicago auto Derby.

Water hazards, which are breeders of mosquitoes and bad language, are to be omitted, and as high bunkers would impede the view of the Speedway they also are to be tabooed.

The Lincoln Park Golf club will hold a tournament at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Dillon's indoor school, 3162 Broadway.

Next Stop Olympia Fields.

Next stop, Olympia Fields! Within a few months conductors on the Illinois Central road after leaving Flossmoor will make this announcement. Plans for the new station for the accommodation of members of the Olympia Fields Country club have been completed and work will be started shortly. The building will conform in style to that of the clubhouse.

Work on the initial buildings of the new club is under way. The men's building will contain 500 lockers, shower baths, professionals' shop, and an office for the caddie master. It will be one story high and colonial in design. The second building will contain the club and dining room, women's locker, and restroom, and shower baths.

College Expert Examines Soil.

Work on clearing the underbrush on the three courses already planned is being pushed, and as soon as the weather will permit the work of piping the greens will be started. An expert from the University of Illinois is now making an examination of the soil.

A new addition to local golf literature will be the Olympian, which will be issued bi-monthly under a trinity of editors, consisting of Lloyd Maxwell, Walter Crowdus, and J. W. Fulton.

DROP GOLF MEET AS WAR LOOMS

New York, March 24.—Announcement today that the Fox Hills Golf club of Staten Island had called off its invitation tournament scheduled for May 17 brought to the attention of golfers the question of how the sport would be affected by war. The Fox Hills club canceled its tournament on account of the grave international situation. Howard F. Whitney, secretary of the United States Golf association, said the organization had as yet adopted no policy, although its executive committee was watching developments. He declared there would be no attempt "to force tournaments down the throats of players."

PIER CONTEST TODAY ENDS INDOOR SEASON FOR TENNIS PLAYERS

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

The indoor tennis season will close this afternoon with the final game in the open doubles competition on the municipal pier concrete courts at 2:30 o'clock. Ketchum and Gifford will meet Kinsel and Holbrook for the title. All the local clubs are already drawing plans for the outdoor tournament season.

The Chicago Tennis club has started extensive improvements on the clubhouse, courts, and grounds at Granville and Ridge avenues. The directors voted $6,000 for six new stone dust and clay courts, a baseball diamond, addition to the locker rooms, and parking space for autos. The entrance to the clubhouse, west on Thorne avenue from Ravenswood avenue, will be resurfaced, and the clubhouse improved by the construction of a two story porch on both the north and south sides. The added space will be used for a dining room and living room.

The South Parks club, at Calumet avenue and Sixty-second street, will shortly take up the work of building the three stone dust courts recently voted. The newly organized south side club has added many to its list of members with the approach of the outdoor season, and ground for the courts and club quarters at Seventy-first street and Jackson avenue will be broken soon.

The districting of the territory of the Western Lawn Tennis association, according to a new system last month, has resulted in the absorption of everything but park tennis associations in this city and suburbs by the Chicago Tennis association, which for the last two years existed merely as a loose organization of clubs for Saturday and Sunday team matches.

CHAMPION M'COURT BEATS JOHN MOORE IN CUE GAME, 50-26

Charley McCourt of Cleveland, world's champion, romped away from John Moore in their Interstate league match at Mussey's Monroe street room last night, winning 50 to 26, in fifty-five innings. Starting at the nineteenth inning, McCourt ran three, eight and two in succession, taking a lead of 23 to 5. Moore was not in good stroke and could not break through McCourt's safety play.

The champion played his usual fast game and was particularly strong on short angle shots. His high run was eight, and he had four runs of three. Moore's high run was three. Score at each tenth inning:

Moore	5	5	10	16	21	26
McCourt	5	21	28	35	45	50

Charley Morin and C. Kearney defeated Drs. W. Campbell and C. Nelson, 50 to 38, in their return three cushion match at Mussey's.

Maupome League Leader.

Entering the twenty-first week of play, Pierre Maupome leads the Interstate Three Cushion league with the slight advantage of half a game over August Kieckhefer of Rockford. Charley Ellis of Milwaukee is a close third. One of the trio generally is picked to win the Brunswick championship medal and $1,500 first prize.

Otto Reiselt, the young Pittsburgher, who has been up in the race since the start, had a disastrous week, losing to Jackson, Ellis, Capron, and Cannefax, and dropping from a tie for second to sixth position.

Joe Capron distinguished himself by defeating Reiselt in fifty-seven innings and getting high run of 10. Capron and Cannefax will travel this week, the St. Louis player meeting Moore at Mussey's new room Friday night. Standing:

West secured eight tricks.

North knew his singleton heart would be of little use to his partner and made a try for his spade suit. West played throughout to compel south to lead a heart, and his task looked easy after the fourth trick.

South frustrated this plan by cleverly unblocking with the jack of diamonds at trick eight, allowing the lead to go to north on the next play. The situation is not uncommon and is worth study.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—The score stands one frame for us and nothing for the opponents. My hand is as follows:

Spades—Ace, queen, jack, deuce.
Hearts—Ace, queen.
Diamonds—Ace, queen, 7, 5.
Clubs—Ace, jack, 9.

I am the dealer and bid two no-trump. Second and third hands pass, but the fourth bids three spades. I double. Am I correct in my double, or must I bid three no-trump? G. F.

Answer: The obvious answer to this query is to double the three spades, as a score of 400 or more seems probable. The character of the fourth bidder must be considered in such a case. A three spade bid made by a careful player under such circumstances must mean an enormous suit of spades, and the dealer would better bid one more no-trump, as the gain would not be sufficient to offset the sacrifice of a game. Against the great majority of players, a double would yield the best returns.

JULIA GAY TEAM DEFEATS BUENA IN BASKET FINAL

W. Schaefer, Ex-Maroon, Leads the Final Attack with Nine Ringers.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Julia Gay Memorial church tossers won the championship of the Cook County Sunday School association by nosing out Buena Presbyterians last night at Central Y. M. C. A., 28 to 26. Buena led at the half, 21 to 15, but the rival team developed the tossing fever in the second period and shot its way to the pennant. W. Schafer, formerly of the Chicago varsity, caged nine ringers and one free throw for Julia Gay. Koefoot had seven baskets for Buena, and the loser's guards, Morf and Wetzel, played well. Score:

Apaches won the basketball championship of the Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A. league by defeating the Mohawks, 43 to 38, in a strenuous game last night. Mohawks led the Indians league during the early part of the season, but the Apaches developed in the later games and Ine, who shot twelve baskets last night, proved one of the best point getters of all the tribes. SPEEDWAY ASKS MEMORIAL DAY DATE FOR DERBY

BY SHEPPARD BUTLER.

Following the announcement that the Indianapolis speedway management had abandoned this year's 500 mile race, scheduled to be run on May 30, David F. Reid, president of the Speedway Park association, yesterday wired Richard Kennerdell, chairman of the contest board of the American Automobile association, and asked that the Memorial day date be awarded to Chicago.

If the request is granted the third annual Chicago auto Derby, now carded for June 9, will be advanced to May 30 and made a feature of the national holiday.

Offers Speedway for Army.

President Reid, also wired Secretary of War Baker renewing his offer made a year ago to turn over speedway park to the government for military purposes, to be used, if the need arises, as a training camp for volunteers and an army aviation school. At the outbreak of the European war, Brooklands, the famous English speedway, was similarly utilized.

In a letter to A. A. Sprague III., member of the executive committee of the American Red Cross, President Reid tendered the use of the speedway to that organization for a pageant or any other exhibition that may be planned for the raising of Red Cross funds.

Derby Pilots May Enlist.

"We will hold the auto Derby either on May 30 or June 9, provided the threatened war is not so serious as to make necessary the use of race drivers and mechanicians as aeroplane pilots or army car and truck drivers," said President Reid.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

THREE MANDATORY POLICIES.

1. Universal service.
2. American troops to Europe.
3. No separate peace.

After a century of comparative isolation or freedom, at least from serious entanglements, the American republic now finds itself involved in a European war, a world war.

We have placed different tags upon our relation or position, changing them from time to time. We have been neutral. We have taken on "armed neutrality." We are now, it seems, to find ourselves in a "state of war." But the basic fact is that from the first we have been a vital factor in the war, a source of strength to one set of belligerents, and for that reason a source of weakness to their adversaries.

Our course of action has followed an assertion of neutral right. But this must not hide from us any more than it hides from Germany the essential fact that the exercise of this right has been injurious to the central powers and helpful to their enemies.

If we call the next stage war, and act upon that hypothesis, we shall only be intensifying our participation, not fundamentally altering it.

Our isolation, therefore, such as it was, is gone. We are and have been, willy nilly, a part of the world conflict.

The nation is only half awake to this truth. If it does not court a supreme disaster, it must seize it fully and shape its course accordingly. It must get rid of its negative policy, framed on the theory of isolation. It must meet the responsibilities of its participation in the European struggle. There is no option now. For two years we have been really a part of the war. We are now assuming a more active rôle. We must accept all its responsibilities.

The first of these is to develop our military strength, and it must be maintained as well as developed. The responsibilities we have assumed, the resentment we have aroused, the rivalries we must meet, do not belong merely to this war. They will continue after the war and become perhaps still more serious considerations when peace has in some degree released the belligerents.

The first duty of America, therefore, is to be strong in her own right and to keep that strength in years of peace as well as in years of war. We do not wait to insure our houses until they have caught fire. A defense not good when the skies seem clear will not be ready when the storm falls.

The only ever ready defense is a citizen army, founded on the principle of citizen service, and justly applied to rich and poor. The volunteer system has not proved adequate. In peace time training has been shirked and the enlisted strength recedes. Congress and the nation forgets defense and army and navy appropriations are cut. The paid regular force and the organized militia are insufficient in numbers, while their equipment and supply run down.

When war comes it finds the nation's defenses in the dryrot of peace. There is a scurrying to prepare, an impulse of patriotism which brings thousands of green men to the colors, waste, red tape, ignorance, confusion, loss of life, defeats in the field, finally the forced and belated adoption of the system which would have avoided all this if maintained in peace.

There is only one way of being always ready to defend ourselves, and congress should take that way at once, for war and for peace, by establishing the democratic system of universal military training and service, ending the dangerous and costly deception of the volunteer system, and creating an ever ready citizen army, which will virtually assure us against invasion, if not aggression.

But the nation must consider more than the establishment of a defensive strength. The world is shaken by a mighty struggle, in which we are taking part. We have helped one side. We have hurt the other. We cannot compromise now. Fate and our interests have created an alliance of fact, and if we are not to suffer the fate of a weakling, who interferes in a brawl, we must take off our coats and wade in. If we are to have any compensatory benefit from our participation in the war we must stand at our allies' shoulders and bear the brunt of the fight with them. We cannot send a competent force abroad now, because we have hardly enough to take care of our own threatened border. But we should prepare such a force as expeditiously as possible. We cannot afford, either for the sake of our self-respect or the respect of others, to fight with money while our allies are paying in blood.

Of course our participation in every form must be in coöperation with our allies, so as to give them what they need when they need it. But we shall be deceiving ourselves if we think this does not mean men whenever they can be made ready.

Finally, we should see to it that we enter formally into the war on the same terms as the allies, which have bound themselves not to make a separate peace. We cannot afford to incur the heavy charges of a war against the central powers and be left out when our allies settle their accounts. We are in the war of Europe. We must be in the peace of Europe.

The time for discussing theories of entanglement and isolation is past, though some of our public men do not realize it. We are and have been entangled since the war began. Let us face this truth now with all that it implies, making ourselves strong at home, bearing our full share of the sacrifices of war, taking the seat we have fairly won at the council table where the peace of the world is to be formulated.

Our program should be:

1. Universal service.
2. American troops to Europe.
3. No separate peace.

JAPAN'S WANING ABSOLUTISM.

Casual thought will attach little significance to the fact that there is at the University of Chicago a Japanese professor engaged in searching out an ethic for his government. Taken by itself it is merely moderately amusing. In connection with Japan's plunge into westernism it is highly suggestive.

It implies that Japan is finding it necessary to slough off her oriental political philosophy as well as revolutionize her economic organization. It is a symptom that her political creed is threadbare.

Americans may have suspected from Count Terauchi's remarks upon taking office that mikado worship was becoming lip worship. He urged, it will be remembered, that the safety of the nation depended upon a revival of mikado worship. What he meant was that the safety of the system of government depended upon mikado worship.

The truth, of course, is that oriental political philosophy will not fit an industrial nation. When Japan started universal compulsory education she began undermining the creed which held her together as an oriental nation. No mystical regard for an emperor is possible. When she started building railroads and publishing newspapers she began building democracy.

Mikado worship was an excellent cement for a medieval nation. It was about the only possible means of unifying a nation of illiterates. But that kind of glue cracks under the heat of industrialism and education. Ceremonialism cannot satisfy intellect.

It was found necessary in Count Ito's time to give the Japanese a constitution. Thus far it has served; but the political issue in Japan for the last five years has been squarely against this constitution. The people are beginning to want a cabinet responsible to the diet, and their fight on Premier Count Terauchi is exactly because he will not recognise parties. Absolutism is cracking in Japan because absolutism and mikado worship do not satisfy. That is why Japan is looking for a new ethic.

GROSSNESS IN WAR AND PEACE.

The prudential theory of life is essentially ignoble. Avoidance is its rule. Trial by fire is beyond its conception. Timidity and selfishness are its guides. The life history of a cabbage would be heroic by comparison.

There are pacifists inspired by the noble idea of sacrifice. In essence they are not pacifists at all. Jane Addams is more nearly Joan of Arc than she is a pacifist. She has a different ideal. Hers is a sublime idea of earthly brotherhood. She would put on armor against a reptilian enemy from Mars. Miss Addams, a pacifist ready to suffer martyrdom for pacifism, to go to the stake for the sake of others, is not a pacifist and not a teacher in the prudential cult.

The prudentials, not willing to make any sacrifices for anything, gather grace from her countenance. With the exception of a few brilliant examples of fortitude and courage, pacifists in the United States represent a condition of ignoble inertia. They would have life consist of comforts ranging from pork chops to limousines. The grandeur of life is attained in a fur overcoat; is represented by a closed car calling at the office, by a ride home through the park, and by a comfortable and undisturbed after dinner softness.

They are pacifists because the alternative means self-sacrifice—not the sacrifice represented by attending a lecture on housing conditions, not the sacrifice represented by writing a check, not the sacrifice which produces a noble glow of a good deed well done without cost, but the sacrifice which puts the person sacrificed in conditions of filth and danger against which every instinct protests.

That sacrifice is the soldier's sacrifice. The lice and shrapnel and high explosives are his tests, and there is no noble glow in the proceeding. But the soldier, serving an imponderable as well as a weighable good, giving all he possesses for what he thinks is good for the spiritual and material well being of the nation he loves, is not gross. The pacifist is.

The fear of death as the greatest of all possible human ills is gross, materialistic, unworthy, and ignoble. Although the patriotic soldier is exposed to the grossest forms of physical force and living conditions, he is spiritually on heights which could not be ascended by the spiritually gross materialist who deplores the grossness of war.

Editorial of the Day

HE MADE GOOD WAGONS.

[From the Philadelphia Inquirer.]

While Andrew Jackson was president of this United States there was a family of thirteen children living at Gettysburg, which later was to be the scene of the crucial conflict of the civil war. Most of the sons went west to grow up with the country. Some were blacksmiths and wheelwrights, and they made up their minds that the great need of the section was good and strong wagons to haul farm produce over the horrible clay and muck roads of the period. They resolved to make the best possible wagon regardless of cost. The Studebaker farm wagon in time came to be the standard of excellence. Its originator is just dead.

Not far from this primitive wagon shop another band of brothers made up their minds that the country needed better plows to till the soil and especially plows which would stand the constant scouring and the ravages of rust. The Oliver chilled steel plow was the result—also based on the principle of quality regardless of cost.

It would be difficult to say in terms how much the development of the west depended on these two implements, a development very soon to be greatly aided by the mowing and reaping machines, which also were evolved near where they were needed most. All of these implements were exploited by hard headed mechanics without education or special training other than what they got from hard work and observation.

During the civil war a million young men left the farms to fight for the union, but the agricultural implements made it possible for those who remained behind to actually increase the supply of food for the northern states. The day of the small manufacturer is gone. Great corporations now manufacture by wholesale at low cost, but they got their inspiration from young men of vision and of character, men who would be satisfied with nothing but the best.

The names of Studebaker, Oliver, and McCormick will one day be held in higher esteem than now because in a real sense they were Builders of the Nation.

SPECIAL PERMISSION.

A firm of shady brokers in Boise, Idaho, was prosecuted for swindling. In acquitting them the court, with great severity, said:

"There is not sufficient evidence to convict you, but if any one wishes to know my opinion of you I hope that they will refer to me."

In a day or so the firm's advertisement appeared in the local papers with the following well displayed:

"Reference: as to probity, by special permission, to the judge of the District court of this county."

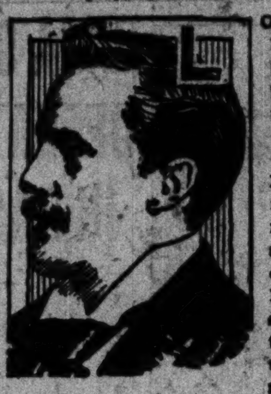
LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood Co.]



LONDON society has just lost one of its most conspicuous and assuredly popular figures through the death of Harry Cust, the original of Freddie Ducane in Rhoda Broughton's novel "Doctor Cupid," next heir to the barony and to the great estates of his cousin, Lord Brownlow, and who since the beginning of the war had done much useful work as chairman of the central committee for national patriotic organisation.

On this side of the Atlantic he will be chiefly remembered by reason of his fights with Lord Astor during the years that he occupied the editorial chair of the London evening paper, the Pall Mall Gazette, when it was owned by that American born peer of the British realm. It was the Countess of Cork, the social sponsor of Lord Astor during the early years of his life in England, who may be said to have urged upon him the appointment of "Grannie" Cust to the editorship of the Pall Mall Gazette, although he knew nothing whatever about journalism.

Modesty, however, was not among "Grannie's" virtues, and if it had been he would have lost it at Eton, where his second name of Cockayne was quickly corrupted by his schoolmates into "Cocky," owing to his firm conviction that he could do everything better than everybody else. Thus when he assumed the editorship of the Pall Mall Gazette he announced that he intended to teach the other London papers their business, and it is certain that he introduced a number of since universally accepted innovations, including the adoption of electricity for the working of his printing machines.

"Grannie" Cust spent some sixteen years in parliament and belonged to that ultra exclusive social organisation known as the Souls, of which Mrs. Asquith, then Dorothy Tennant, and portrayed by Benson as Dodo in his novel of that name, as well as the Rt. Hon. Henry Arthur Balfour, now first lord of the admiralty, the Duchess of Rutland, and a number of other well known people were members. He was one of the most intimate friends of King Edward's youngest brother, the late Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany; stood high in the good graces of all the royal family, and was so witty and original in his way of looking at things that he may be said to have simply made the Pall Mall Gazette, since everybody bought it in order to enjoy his treatment of the news of the day and his sparkling and sarcastic comments thereon. Quip, retort, repartee, quotation, allusion, epigram, all flashed from his brain with most amazing yet unerring audacity, and he was the life and soul of every gathering.

Within a very short time women will enjoy the right of practicing law in England as solicitors, and a bill conferring upon them this prerogative has just passed its second reading in the house of lords. Once this measure becomes law the admission of women to the bar as barristers will follow in due course. We may even live to see women elevated to the ancient and lofty offices of lord chief justice of England and even to that of lord high chancellor.

During the debate on the subject the other day in the house of lords two former lord high chancellors put themselves on record as declaring that there had been in ancient times an instance of a woman occupying the woolsack in the house of lords. Lord Buckmaster, who was keeper of the great seal in England in the last coalition cabinet, commenced by declaring that Queen Eleanor, during the absence of her husband, King Henry III., in France, sat on the woolsack as regent of the realm, and administered justice in such an unprecedented form that the city of London rose in revolt against her decisions and decrees.

Another former lord high chancellor, the now 92 year old Earl of Halsbury, thereupon declared that it was not the rebellious citizens of London who had put a stop to Queen Eleanor's occupancy of the woolsack, but the fact that she was overtaken by the pains of childbirth while administering justice from the woolsack, and was compelled hastily to adjourn the proceedings and to clear the chamber in order to bring into the world then and there the prince who afterwards became King Edward I.

Lord Halsbury seemed to believe that something of the kind might happen again; that a judge, a lord chief justice, a master of the rolls, and a lord high chancellor might, if their offices were held by women, permit themselves to be influenced in their dispensation of justice by considerations of imminent maternity and voted against the admission of women to either of the two branches of the legal profession. But his opposition was of no avail, and after the third reading of the measure it will require only the king's sanction to become the law of the land.

It is probable that after the war the offices of naval and military attachés of embassies will be abolished. There was already a move in this direction at the time of the Dreyfus case, where the revelations during the course of the various trials had the effect of placing all military and naval attachés under the suspicion of endeavoring to obtain possession of military secrets that the governments to which they were accredited were unwilling they should know. The Dreyfus case showed that the military attaché of the kaiser's embassy in Paris was the chief of the extensive German espionage system in France.

German military attachés have always rendered themselves particularly odious in abusing the hospitality of the country to which they are assigned in this connection. In the past embassies have usually had but one military attaché; Germany sometimes two. But the kaiser has now no less than 500 of them in Switzerland. They are all German officers officially attached to his legation at Berne, and as such are entitled to all diplomatic immunities.

Formerly numbering 300, they were housed at Berne in the Hotel Metropole. Since their number has been increased to 500 Emperor William has taken over the whole of the Hotel Moderne for their use. Inasmuch as one military attaché is perfectly adequate for all legitimate use, it follows that his 499 assistants must be employed for purposes that are not legitimate—namely, espionage.

SHORTER HOURS; MORE AND BETTER WORK.

AS is the case with all European nations, the British think they are fighting for existence. In consequence they are giving their best thought to certain questions which in ordinary times are left to work out themselves. Every man and woman in Great Britain is expected to do his or her bit. No slackers are allowed. Those who can fight must do so. Those who cannot fight must work. The workers are being driven just as hard as the fighters. Patriotism is manifesting itself at the bench as in the trench. Under the stress they feel that every worker must yield the maximum of output.

The question comes up at once, under which plan—a long or a short working day—is there the greatest output? Now mark this carefully. The conclusion which has been announced from more than one source is that the short day produces more output than does the long one.

I am sure that nine out of ten employers, when they read this, will say, "Bosh!" The other tenth will say, "Bunk!" But I want to suggest that they examine the evidence carefully. They will appreciate that this is no time for high flown theories in England.

Whatever plan turns out the most product must be used during this year, even though it increases the number of human beings that must be scrapped five, ten, twenty years from now. That is the philosophy of the trench, and the same philosophy, founded on the same patriotism, animates the bench. In the face of all that the English report in favor of the short day for men as well as women.

The Iron Age for Feb. 22 abstracts a report made by Prof. Kent of the University of Bristol, who has been commissioned by his government to study the question of fatigue. The Iron Age article carries this caption: "British Study of Industrial Fatigue—Experiments Which Seem to Prove Overtime to Be Uneconomic. Reduction of Hours Increases Workers' Efficiency and Total Output."

Prof. Kent's observations were made on 2,000 men engaged in manufacturing surgical supplies and dressings and 600 men and a large number of women engaged in the manufacture of iron and steel implements of war.

It was found that working overtime usually leads, not to an increase but to an actual diminution of output. Overtime proves to be economically extravagant. The shortening of the working day by 16½ per cent (one-sixth) resulted in an actual increase of over 5 per cent in the output, whereas a further reduction from a ten to an eight hour day resulted in a total increase of 12.4 per cent in the remaining hours.

In order to save on overhead and also to meet the excessive demands for output it is often found necessary to keep the machinery going long hours or even continuously, but in that event it was found to be best to work the men in shifts short enough to prevent excessive fatigue.

Prof. Kent's definition of fatigue is interesting, since it has a direct bearing on his conclusions. He defined fatigue as diminished efficiency, occurring after labor and partly depending on it. The seat of fatigue in his opinion is, first, in the nervous system, and second in importance, the muscular system.

Some who are disposed to dispute his conclusions will hold that his definition indicates that he has at least an unusual idea as to what constitutes fatigue, and furthermore that this definition indicates that the workers investigated were doing work calling for attention rather than muscular effort. The objectors will claim his methods of testing do not appeal to them as exactly fitting the case. Others will say that the only test worth while is the test of production under actual operating conditions.

The reply to this objection is that the test of actual output has been made in these and still other factories. I have as authority for the latter part of this assertion a statement made by Dr. Alice Hamilton.

The report is divided into studies of fatigue as a result of overtime, the influence of fatigue and overtime on output, and a group of such questions as the influence of short and long rest periods, the effects of lunches on output, the effect of work undertaken before full recovery from fatigue, the methods of getting the maximum from the human machine. Finally, there is a suggestion that the immediate effect on work of long hours is not the only question to be considered, but that the ultimate effect on health also must be considered.

Employers will be interested especially in the observations on the percentage of time used in actual work under short and long hours. Employers have long known that Monday morning is the most inefficient working time. A part of this is due to a badly spent Sunday. A part is due to the lessened efficiency of automatic processes and the greater tendency of the mind to wander Monday morning.

Observations indicated that fatigue is greater Monday morning than Monday night. Employers have noticed that the accident rate is high Monday morning. They also have noticed, and for much the same reason, that the afternoon accident rate is highest during the first half hour after lunch.

The Saturday forenoon was a time of great efficiency, provided there was to be a half holiday. If men were to be worked overtime any day during the week Monday was the best day for it. The long rest period from Saturday noon until Monday morning made it possible for the worker to stand a long Monday workday.

It was found that a long rest period was essential. If the workday was begun before the fatigue of the day before had been fully recovered from the effects of fatigue were magnified geometrically. I know many factories where the noon lunch and rest hour is materially less than an hour. I know of some where the period is less than a half hour.

I have lectured in factories where in a forty minute rest period the workers were supposed to clean up, eat, and listen to a twenty minutes lecture. I feel certain that in these factories the more nearly I imitated Charley Chaplin the more good I did. Half hour rest periods were not found to be helpful. There was not enough time for recuperation from the morning to make for efficiency during the afternoon. A half holiday on Saturday with a Sunday holiday was found to be better than a full rest day in midweek and a Sunday holiday.

Night workers suffer more from fatigue than do day workers. The home conditions of workingmen do not make for long hours of undisturbed recuperative sleep.

The temperature, ventilation, foulness of air, noise, and vibration greatly affect the degree of fatigue resulting from work. To maintain factory conditions in which there is good ventilation, clean air, proper regulation of temperature, and a minimum of noise and vibration is to increase the volume of output.

Prof. Kent advises that where workers cannot return home for their noon meal that the employer furnish a noon meal based upon proper economics and proper food values. The food which workingmen get in restaurants does not make for efficiency. There should be a moderate range of selection of food, but no food which is wasteful economically or from the nutrition standpoint or which is difficult of digestion should be served.

Thirty-six and eight-tenths per cent of the workers examined had some degree of difficult digestion. This is responsible for some lessening of output. It pays an employer to start work in his factory late enough in the morning for his employés to get a good breakfast, well cooked, and to eat it without hurry. In several cases workers producing far below the average were found to be doing without breakfast.

When the number of hours was reduced and time was allowed for a properly cooked breakfast before leaving home fatigue greatly diminished and the output increased 12.4 per cent.

Women and children in particular are underfed because their dietary consists of too many delicacies and therefore of less substantial food.

A group of eight workers increased their average rate of output from 262 to 276 pieces as a result of shortening the day from twelve to ten hours and to 316 on bringing it down to eight hours. Where the employés worked twelve hours it was found that they loafed or did not actually work during 10 per cent of the time. The increase in output of pieces was due to decrease in the amount of time loafed.

In a ten hour day one man actually worked eight hours and forty minutes and another worked seven hours and twenty-six minutes. With an eight hour day one man actually worked seven hours and twenty-three minutes and another seven hours and twenty-four minutes. The percentages of time loafed were (6 a. m. to 8 a. m.), 18.3 to 33.3 per cent; 8 a. m. to 12 m., 6.1 to 8.75 per cent; 1:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m., 22.3 to 38.7 per cent.

In those cases where men were away from work on account of ill health it was found that suspension of overtime decreased the loss 4½ per cent.

My advice to employers is that they give serious attention to the evidence that a short working day increases the volume and quality of the output.

DIET FOR BABY.

Mrs. T. E. H. writes: "My 13 months old baby girl absolutely refuses to take a bottle, or farinacious foods, or custards, or milk in any food, or plain. What can I feed her? She still is being nursed, but I desire to wean her. She is well and gaining. She was 7 pounds at birth, and is now 25 pounds. Since 9 months of age she has eaten only zweiback, soda crackers, soups, prune or orange juice, and lately baked potatoes, finely chopped carrots, also spinach. She always has been a restless baby at night, and I still nurse her twice or more during the night. She cut her first six teeth within the last three weeks."

REPLY.

7 a. m.—6 ounces of milk diluted with 3 ounces oatmeal gruel. Give from a cup.
9 a. m.—One to two ounces orange juice.
10 a. m.—Same as at 7 a. m.
2 p. m.—[a] One egg, or
[b] Beef juice, or
[c] Mutton or chicken broth.
Toasted bread or crackers.
Boiled or baked potato and gravy.
Milk, 4 ounces.
6 p. m.—Same as 7 a. m.
10 p. m.—Same as at 7 a. m.

She can take carrots, spinach, or turnips in place of potatoes from time to time. Persist in giving her milk. If she will not drink it otherwise add some sugar to it. If she will not take the milk increase the quantity of bread given. Give her both buttered toast and milk toast. Also give her some finely chopped meat. You must not nurse her at night.

HAS EPILEPSY.

C. C. P. writes: "My brother, a man of thirty-one years, has had a spasm in the night at varied intervals since the age of 10. Otherwise he seems to be in perfect health, except that he has a coated tongue. He had a spasm last week at 5 a. m. The one before that, nearly a year and a half ago, was at 2 a. m. Would he ever be likely to have them in the daytime? What is the cause of these spasms? Is there a cure? Would dieting help? He is temperate, but smokes a little."

REPLY.

He has epilepsy. Eventually he will have day spells as well. Epileptics are greatly benefited and some of them are cured by attention to right living. Above all, attention to the bowel habits is necessary. Eating habits are also of importance. He should watch his tongue closely. He is in danger of an attack whenever his tongue becomes foul. If there is a state colony for epileptics in your state send him there.

HAVE EYES EXAMINED.

G. M. writes: "What will prevent sties? I have had seven during the last six months, all on the same eye."

REPLY.

Have your eyes examined. Poor vision is the most frequent cause of sties. Keep the edge of the lids clean. Wash as often as necessary. Pull lightly on the eyelashes several times a week. Anointing the margin of the lids with a yellow oxide of mercury ointment is sometimes advised. I doubt that it does any good.

ASSESSMENT REDUCTIONS.

Chicago, March 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why was St. Anne's hospital allowed a reduction in the Division street paving assessment when other property owners were not favored with a decrease? Why are not property owners notified of special assessment hearings? When is the district about Division street and Parkside avenue to have electric street lamps? W. C.

Acting upon certain evidence brought up in the trial of the assessment for paving Division street from Cicero avenue to Austin avenue, the court ordered a reduction of the assessment against the property which forms the site of St. Anne's hospital. The persons who paid the general taxes during the last preceding calendar year, in which general taxes were paid on all property fronting on a proposed sewer, paving, or water main improvement, are notified of the public hearing to be held on such improvements. The persons who paid the general taxes during the last preceding calendar year in which general taxes were paid on all property assessed for any local improvement are notified of the pendency of a special assessment proceeding in court, which notice contains the amount of the assessment. The city collector follows the same procedure in sending out notices of the assessment when the same is in collection. Division street in the vicinity of Parkside avenue will be lighted by electricity this year with funds available from the 1916 bond issue.

THE BUTTERINE TAX.

Chicago, March 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The recent action on the part of congress in refusing to withdraw the tax on oleomargarine, in the light of present conditions, is vicious legislation. Oleomargarine has been found by dietitians as having all of the food properties of butter, and its method of manufacture requires such care in preparation and quality of ingredients as will insure its wholesomeness. The revenue tax has been a quarter of a cent a pound on uncolored and 10 cents a pound on the colored product.

The action of congress was at the instigation of the agriculturists. The butter supply of the country is inadequate to supply all who would care to indulge in its use and pay the price usually asked. In fact, if there were no substitute for butter a large proportion of our population would be deprived of a very beneficial food. There is not one farmer out of a dozen who does not artificially color his product, especially at this season of nonpasturage.

When the fact is considered that the best quality of butterine contains upward of one-third pure butter, it is patent that the action on the part of the agriculturist in imposing a penalty on the other fellow for coloring his product, which he practices diligently himself, and endeavoring to place a handicap on a legitimate substitute, is as nefarious a practice as that of the food speculators in cornering a food supply to their own advantage and to the detriment of the poor. We would say, let the two food products compete equally on their own merits; that is Americanism.

YELLOW STATESMANSHIP.

Chicago, March 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Gross inefficiency and pusillanimity, after taking refuge to the limit of public endurance behind such pretexts as "watchful waiting," "too proud to fight," etc., has certainly got to the end of its rope in its latest moves.

Asking united support to rise above partisanship, it seriously seeks to bribe Colombia $25,000,000 worth to be good. This proposal is born either of rank cowardice or partisanship of the meanest and pettiest type in seeking thus to discredit the manly decisiveness of Roosevelt, to which its own floundering and wabbling stands in painful contrast. It is beyond belief that such an invitation to future assault and aggression will be given consideration.

Add to this the scheme to put the lid on the press, that "publicity may not be given to administration activities." It is not publicity for what he is doing, but for what he is not doing, that Wilson fears. We are not yet ready to see a free press abolished—which is what it means—that the appalling incompetency of any one man may be denied publicity.

Such proposals as these give us the correct measure of the man who rattles around in the chair once filled by a Lincoln or a Roosevelt. H. N. C.

WHAT G.-A. STANDS FOR.

Chicago, March 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—For the benefit of John E. Wrenn (Vox Pop., March 8) and other hyper-Americans shouting themselves hoarse for war with Germany, the real Americans, of whom I claim to be one for fifty years or more, I beg to state that, as is patent to any not blind, the German sympathizers among the real Americans are fighting for the following principles, founded in general justice and intimately interwoven with the history, the constitution, and character of this American nation:

1. Fair dealing and peace with all foreign countries, with an especial precaution against alliance with a foreign country, especially of Europe.

2. Unbending determination to resist encroachment of our rights on land and sea, and to fight to the death, no matter with what foreign power or combination of powers, until our rights are recognized, as we did at our birth and in 1812.

This is what the real Americans, especially the German-Americans, started to do since August, 1914, and they are in the foremost ranks in this fight. If only they had to extend their fight to a wider range almost as soon as the war got under way, and all that have the real American sand in them will continue the fight of real patriots and will save this country, as they have done before.

GEORGE J. BLATTER.

TO SWAY WORLD OPINION.

Chicago, March 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I suggest that this government establish and maintain a publicity department, the same as all successful private concerns have, whose duties would consist in buying space in all the worth while publications of the various cities and countries of the world.

This space to be used for the publication of such documents as our reasons for severing diplomatic relations with Germany, the arming of our ships, the Pershing expedition into Mexico, and all other such matter which would set our objects and reasons before the people of the world and sway world opinion with us whenever our president or congress considered it expedient and of benefit to us to do so. THE RUSSIA WE NEED

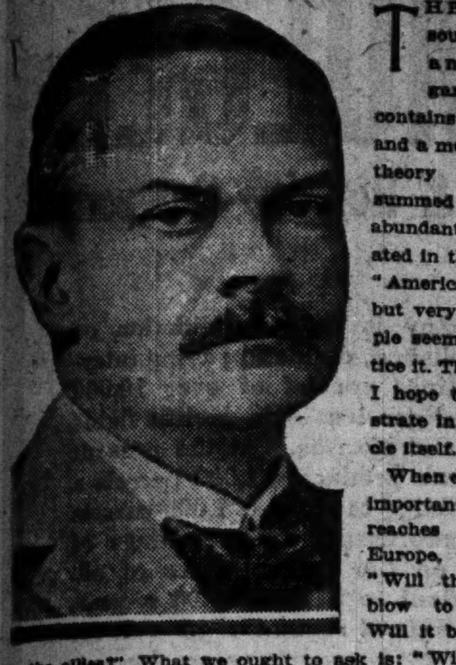
by Edward Goldbeck



THE title sounds harsh and arrogant, but it contains a theory and a method. The theory has been summed up and abundantly reiterated in the slogan, "America first!" but very few people seem to practice it. The method I hope to demonstrate in the article itself.

Whenever any important news reaches us from Europe, we ask: "Will this be a blow to Berlin? Will it be a boon to the allies?" What we ought to ask is: "Will this be a blow or a boon to our country?" A visitor from Mars who would not know anything about us and observe our attitude in such cases would think that the national motto is: "America last!"

We shall find a point of view from which we may try to understand (not to judge!) the events in Russia, if we ask ourselves what kind of Russia would be the best for us. Do not think that this is too selfish: it will not harm the Russians, they will work out their salvation without any regard for our wishes. They are too busy now to mind other people's opinions. Let us drop the pose of magnanimity.

WE need a Russia which is strong, peace loving, stable and liberal. Why do we?

We need a Russia which is strong and commands respect, for international reasons. The only nation in the world which might be able to improve its situation by a war with the United States is Japan. The interests of both countries diverge in several respects and may clash sooner or later. If Japan's neighbor and rival with regard to China, if Russia should become a negligible quantity, seen from the viewpoint of international policy, then Japan would feel absolutely unrestrained on this side. As long as a powerful Russia is in existence, Japan will have to be more cautious in her relations with the United States. This would be so, even if both countries, Japan and Russia, were allied. Allies always suspect each other, hamper each other, and are afraid that the other fellow might get the lion's share. A strong Russia will be a counterpoise to the possible aggressive tendencies of the Japanese. That is the reason why we want Russia to remain strong.

People will say that if this is the case we cannot wish Russia to be crushed by Germany. Certainly not, but the topic is irrelevant, as Russia cannot be crushed by Germany. Even if Russia should be compelled to make peace on bad conditions—loss of Poland, payment of an indemnity—that would not seriously hurt her. Russia cannot be crushed by a foreign power. Ajax was the only one who could destroy Ajax.

On the other hand, we cannot wish an overwhelming victory for Russia, because this gigantic country is subject to the mania of expansion, and a victory of this kind would enhance the evil.

FOR international reasons we need a powerful Russia, but we need a peace loving Russia, too. Why do we? For business reasons. It is probable that we are going to lose the Chinese market, because we are too weak to keep the door of the Celestial empire open. (If we had universal military service, Japan would be less self-assertive.) So it may be good to look out for other opportunities. Russia has been stirred up by the war. The Russian intellectuals are united in the purpose to develop, completely and as quickly as possible, the natural resources of their country.

After the war Russia will face the necessity of raising immensely greater revenues than she had ever contemplated as necessary. To do this the wealth of the nation must be rapidly increased and the ability of the individual to pay taxes greatly augmented. The best asset of a country is man. Russia's population is officially stated to be 174,000,000, the largest of any country, except China and India, with a normal increase of about 3,000,000 per year. Awake the peasant, get him out of the slough of his communistic habits, educate him, and imagine what can be done in a country of inexhaustible resources.

Up to now Russia, on the basis of square miles, has only 8 per cent, and on the basis of population, only 10 per cent of the railway mileage of the United States. "In many ways Russia today presents an enlarged picture of the United States at the close of the civil war, with its population then occupying the territory east of the Mississippi river, and with a great unoccupied and undeveloped public domain lying beyond. Just as the United States then turned to the development of its public land and mineral deposits in the west and to the organization of industries in the east, Russia is now taking stock of her great timber resources, her fertile unoccupied lands, the hidden treasures of her mountain ranges, and turning her attention to the organization of industries in her more thickly populated sections, for only in this way can she produce the greatly increased wealth which will be necessary to enable her to meet her war obligations and give her an increasingly greater position in world affairs." (Samuel McRoberts, vice president of the National City Bank of New York City, in his article, "Russia's Future Needs for Capital," annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, November, 1916.)

The Russian needs capital, industrial education, business experience, the stimulating example of initiative and unflagging energy, and all this we can give him.

BUT this cannot be done if Russia is not stable. Let me give an instance. In 1905 Stolypine, then prime minister, started the agrarian reform which after his assassination was continued by the minister of agriculture, Krivochine. This was a most admirable effort. Up to 1905 the village community, the so-called mir, was considered an intangible Russian palladium. The peasants did not own their fields, they belonged to the community. At certain terms the common property was divided newly among the peasants. The community decreed the time of sowing and harvest and all the details of their agricultural policy. The result was that nobody took any interest in the output, production lessened, and migration to the cities augmented. Stolypine resolved to do away with this system which showed by lack of psychological insight, and to give every peasant property in land. Within ten years the reform had been realized for half of the existing farms. If it would have been finished, this work would have enhanced Russia's productive power immensely. At the same time it would have set up a barrier against the revolutionary tendencies, as a peasant who owns his land is bound to be more or less conservative. But the war broke out and the reform was truncated. The new régime must seem solid enough to give a certain guarantee against such sudden turns. Capital is timid, it wants to be sure of stability, and if we are expected to plunge into what cautious people might call the Russian adventure, we shall have to look out for political weather signals.

From this point of view we shall look at the changes which are now preparing in Russia. Many people lose their heads as soon as they hear the word "republic," as if there was a magical power in it to remove all social and economical evils. After enjoying free institutions for about 140 years we ought to know better.

We must not forget that Russia is about a century behind other European nations. It is a characteristic detail that Ivan IV. allowed the art of printing to be introduced in Russia one century after the death of the inventor. When Alexander II. redeemed 23,000,000 serfs, few illiterate people were to be found in Germany. In the beginning of the '70s of the last century there were tests made in France which gave an interesting insight into the political judgment of the agricultural population. H. Taine has told us about them. One peasant said: "I took the ballot which looked the nicest." Another one asks which is the "good" one. Somebody tells him and he throws it into the box. The next day he is asked what he did with the "bad" one. He laughs maliciously and says: "I gave it to Peter. He is a rascal. He put it in. Serves him right!"

Nobody will believe that the Russian peasant of today has reached the level of the French peasant of 1870. So it seems a little premature to talk jubilantly of the will of the Russian nation. What we see happening in Petrograd now has been planned by a tiny majority of intellectuals. The immense bulk of the nation will follow the strongest.

I DO not think that it is desirable to make a salto mortale from a theocracy into a republic. Probably a sincerely constitutional monarchy would promise the greatest amount of stability and progress. Russia is not in the case of France in 1789. France was an autocracy. Louis XIV. could rightly say: "I am the state." But Russia is a theocracy. The tsar can say: "I am the state and I am the church." The synod, the highest religious body in Russia, was established by Peter the Great. The oath which the members have to make at their inauguration contains the sentence: "I swear that I acknowledge the emperor of all the Russias as the highest judge over the holy synod."

So a revolution which would try to dethrone the dynasty of the Romanoff would be not only political, but religious, too. It is hardly necessary to say that this makes a tremendous difference. (It may be mentioned, en passant, that the reigning dynasty is Holstein-Gottorp, not Romanoff. That is a pious fraud. The last male of the Romanoff was Peter Alexejevich, who died in 1730, the last female, Elisabeth, who died in 1762.) But speculations about this point are idle, the man who rules the army will rule the country. The question is whether there is a man in whom the undauntable spirit of Nicholas I. is resurrected. Today the enigmatic figure of the Grand Duke Nicholas attracts the anxious interest of the whole civilized world.

The feature of the Russian character which is most disquieting in a situation like the present is his radicalism. In his dreary panorama of Russian life, "Dead Souls," Gogol compares Russia to a troika (a buggy drawn by three horses) which is chasing its way with uncanny speed. "Was it a lightning?" the dazzled spectators cry out. "What means this awful speed? What mysterious power works in these horses? Are there whirlwinds in your manes? Russia, answer, where are you speeding to?" It would be desirable to have a solid brake fastened on this troika so that it may not be thrown into an abyss.

The Russian, once unfettered, goes to the last extreme. He is enthusiastic to ecstasy, tyrannical to bestiality, orthodox to blindness, dissenter to self-destruction, skeptical to nihilism, rebellious to murder. If he believes in the idea of authority, he bows to the dust before it; if he denies it, he throws a bomb at the man who incarnates it. Such a character is dangerous for a republic and there will be a long apprenticeship before the nation learns moderation and self-restraint.

Another danger is in the lack of centripetal power in Russia. Christians, Jews, Mohammedans, Buddhists will have to live together in peace. Poles and Ukrainians, Balts and Letts, Swedes and Armenians, Circassians, Mingrelians, Esthonians, Fino-Carelians, Bashkirs, Kirghises, Calmucks, Laplanders will sit in the parliament. The intoxication of the first days will sober down. After the night of revelry dawn follows with its gray disgust. The fraternizing of the victors turns into a desperate struggle for the spoils. We have seen all that in Turkey.

Natura non facit saltus, ne mens quidem. There should not be any neckbreaking jumps in the political development of a people. A constitutional monarchy with the motto "Monarchy Is Peace" would probably afford the best guarantee for stable conditions.

HOWEVER, this is none of our business. Russia will, as Lord Salisbury was fond of saying, "muddle through somehow." There will be liberal mindedness enough in the future Russia, no matter whether it be a monarchy or a republic, to improve the condition of the Jews. Then the difficulty about the passports of Jewish-American citizens will have ceased to exist. Without a certain degree of modernism and liberalism a coöperation between the United States and Russia would be unthinkable, but revolution or evolution will bring that and the conclusion of peace may usher in a new period of good will, understanding, and mutual help between the two nations.

Since the days of Peter the Great the struggle between the east and the west has continued in Russian life. National isolation or fertilization by western ideas? Pride or humility? Russian autonomy or the cosmopolitan doctrine? Shall the tsar remain "our little father" or shall he learn his "metier de roi" as England's rulers did? Every thinking Russian had to wrestle with this dualism. On the one side the east with its awe inspiring, deep rooted tradition and the elementary forces of the people, on the other side the western world with its dazzling mirage of liberty and culture. Pushkin, Gogol, Dostoievsky, Tolstoi adhered to the east, Turgenieff and Herzen voted for the west. Now the west has gained a great victory. Will it be decisive?

THIS is what we have to say from our egotistical national point of view, and lo! it leads to the unexpected and comforting result that our wishes and aspirations are entirely for the good of the Russian nation, although we only thought of ourselves and did not once wave the white flag of humanitarianism. Perhaps enlightened selfishness is not such a bad thing after all and a level headed Russian who would read this article might say: "Why, yes, that is the Russia we need!" But the virtual conclusions of this little essay are irrelevant; what really matters is the theory and the method. I hope that THE TRIBUNE will engrave the following epitaph on my tombstone: "Here lies one of those undesirable German-Americans. He tried for years to impress on our high minded countrymen the painful duty to think of themselves first in all international relations. He was an iconoclast and indefatigable in bombarding our beloved, beautiful, and hollow statue of magnanimity."

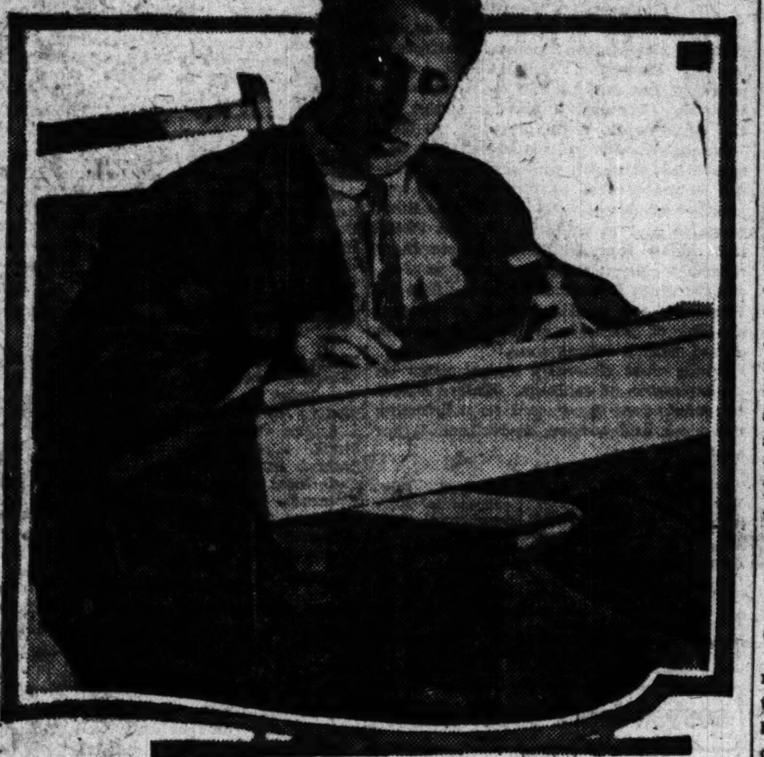
ROBERT FROST read some of his poetry at the University of Chicago last week. There was a sympathy between the poetry and the audience that is most unusual. There is an honesty about his poetry, an open heartedness and a fleeting exquisite beauty, that is the poetical reality of the open countryside. "Mountain Interval" (Holt) and "North of Boston," the first volume which he published in this country, have that intimate personal appeal about them which the poems of Will Carlton had a generation ago.

I remember when I was a tiny little girl in Kansas a picture of a room full of men and women and some one reading aloud, and I shall never forget the human sounds that filled that room. They wept or laughed those little catchy, half sobby giggles that come when emotion which has touched the depths of tragedy suddenly finds relief. When I grew older I remembered that picture and I found out what it was that had been read. One of Will Carlton's farm ballads it was, "Over the Hills to the Poorhouse" or "Lawyer, Draw Up the Papers." I borrowed the ballads and read, curious to see what written thing could have stirred a group of men and women to such an extent that I had remembered their sounds of emotion ever since I was a child. The ballads were mostly sentimental twaddle, but they must have had something which in those days answered the call for poetry which is in every man's heart.



Robert Frost

That call is different now. We ask for realities in poetry; we demand beauty and truth and rather turn up our noses at sentiment. But poetry which answers the call which men make today has that same intangible universality about it which made Will Carlton the beloved of men in his generation. Robert Frost, fortunately, answers that call with real poetry. Will Carlton didn't. Please don't misunderstand and think that I say Mr. Frost is the Will Carlton of this generation.

It will make you wish that you lived in the country, where there is moist black earth to dig around in and where the warmth of spring makes of "dirt" a wonderland of tiny roots and sprouts, to read the books which the public library has chosen for its spring list of gardening and wild flowers. You will stop thinking of whether your new suit shall be blue, black, or gray when you get interested in one of the books on city gardening, books on children's gardens and municipal gardening which will lure you into an investment for seeds and a trowel, even though your back yard is nothing but a window box.

Frank J. Wilstach's "Dictionary of Similes" (Little-Brown) will be brought out in England under the authorship of Frank J. Wilstack. 'Cause why? 'Cause the English won't have anything to do with an author that looks German on the face of his name. As a matter of vital statistics, Mr. Wilstach was born in Indiana, his ancestors were English and Dutch, and he boasts among them a bishop of Liege. It may have happened before, but I don't know anything about any author's having to change his name to get an audience except this compiler of 17,003 (actual count) similes.

"Bushido," the Japanese classic, has been the great success of the year with the Washington Square Players in New York. I saw a dress rehearsal of it, and it was, for sheer beauty of tragedy, for simple exposition of a national trait, incomparable. The moment before the curtain goes down the mother of the boy who has been sacrificed, that his young prince may live, and the father, who has looked upon the severed head of his son and declared it to be the head of the prince, slowly take off their dark kimonos and stand robed in the unrelieved white of formless garments. That moment is one of the most symbolic I have known in a play. "Bushido" is published as "The Pine Tree" (Duffield), and in the volume are included an interesting discussion of the Japanese theater by M. C. Marcus and reproductions from prints taken from the British museum by special permission. It is one of the most interesting books on Japanese literature (which I confess I know too little about) that has come to my notice.

A reader writes that he has been disappointed in finding nothing in the Tabloid about William De Morgan since his death. Fact is that I have been trying to find the foundation of a pleasant little rumor about the writing and publishing of "Joseph Vance," his first novel, but search avails not. The tale goes that he wrote "Joseph Vance" just for fun, and to surprise his wife, and with no thought in the world of publishing it. He took it to a typist who often did work for a publisher. One day the publisher went to her office and found her sobbing over a tragic page. The publisher said he had never seen her cry before, and if a manuscript could bring sobs into her throat it would make others weep. And "Joseph Vance" thus accidentally got itself published. Whether that is actual fact or mere fancy, it is typical of the way in which fame came to William De Morgan—overtook him, in fact. After a lifetime spent in craftswork, much of it with that dauntless spirit of craft art, William Morris; after making luster potteries which are still undulled in their exquisite coloring, after illustrating books with no thought of writing them, at 65 he turned to writing, and for ten years was the marvel and idol of his time. Years before, it seems, his father had told him that literature was his special gift, but it had made little impression upon him. "It is my idea that De Morgan approached closer to the pedestals of Dickens and Thackeray than any other writer before or since," writes the reader. That is undoubtedly true—that he wrote Dickenseesque things. It was a conscious imitation of Dickens which William De Morgan fashioned, and he was always outspoken in declaring it so. Myself, I like him much better than I do Dickens.

When Robert Hichens was in Greece, absorbing atmosphere for "In the Wilderness" (Stokes) at the beginning of the last Balkan war he was arrested on suspicion of being a Turkish spy, found guilty, and sent under guard to Athens, where he finally proved his identity and was set free.

An American publisher who has recently returned from England tells of a talk he had with H. G. Wells, whose "Italy, France, and Britain at War" (Macmillan) is the latest contribution of that great writer to the five foot shelf of war books. "Mr. Wells was talking to me about his two boys who are in a preparatory school. It seems that one of their most important studies is the language and literature of Russia. I asked him if this was a special study which he had desired for these boys and he said that it was now the usual thing in the English schools. All the boys are studying Russian; his boys are. After they leave the preparatory school to go to a technical school in Leeds or Manchester they are to go to Cambridge. After that they are to go into business in Russia. H. G. Wells is spending half his time in London doing propaganda work for the government. His novel 'Mr. Britling Sees It Through' is the book of the season."

The Muses do not declare that "the spring, the spring, the beautiful spring," is the only season for sonneting. Wordsworth, for instance, to wander in the ways of poesy o'ergrown with time, says: "Winter is the season potent to renew . . . the instinctive joys of song." Despite the fact that of the eleven Wordsworth sonnets whose titles bear the month in which they were written one is "June," three are "September," three "October," and four "November," Wordsworth refers in the preface to his "September, 1815," to "the season of frost and snow as more favorable to the Muses than summer itself."

M. Louis Conard of 17 Boulevard de la Madeleine, Paris, in his "Standard Collection of British and American Authors" has literally replaced the inexpensive Tauchnitz edition so dear to the hearts of continental Europe—and its American tourists who "do" a little literature with the cathedrals and galleries. "It took me six months," he says, "to gather in the fold a certain number of authors formerly included in the Tauchnitz edition. I began in 1915, and on the 6th of July of that year I started my collection with 'Bealby,' by H. G. Wells. Since then the number of authors who have signed contracts with me for the duration of the war and for five years after its termination has reached 90 per cent of the total number of authors, alive and available, included in the last Tauchnitz catalog, that for July, 1914. Two works are published monthly, and this will be increased to one a week as soon as hostilities cease. Tauchnitz had no permanent contracts with the authors, but made a separate agreement for each volume so that they had not to break their word to come to us. The Tauchnitz people, we are told, are publishing occasional books in their continental edition—not novels, but books on the war written in English by Germans."

Rudyard Kipling's new book "Sea Warfare" (Doubleday-Page) had just been discussed with the author by a friend of his.

"Why don't you write a book on airmen," the friend asked him, "just as you have done on the commanders and crews of submarines?"

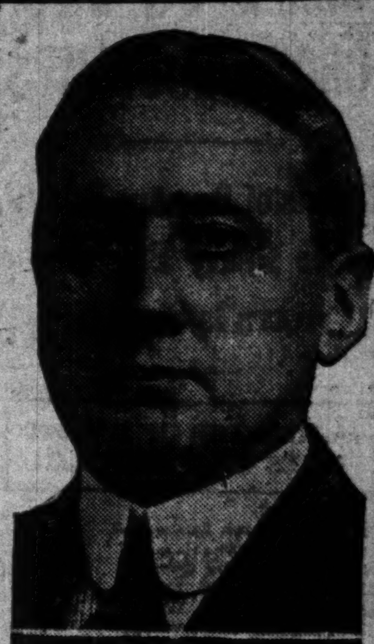
"Perhaps some day," replied Mr. Kipling.

"O, but you must," insisted the friend. "Let's fix up the title now."

"Well," Kipling suggested after thinking a moment, "what do you say to 'Plane Tales from the Sky'?"

THE HELPING HAND

by Robert Herrick



PARIS, France, Jan. 26.—Imagine what it will be like the day when, peace having been made, the exiles from their homes in what for three years has been the front in France and Flanders are permitted to return to the ruins of what was once theirs! Think how you would feel if with a third class ticket and 50 cents in your pocket you were at last set down in your home town or village and wandered up the street from the railroad station, searching maybe for any mark that would tell you where the house you once knew so well stood, in all this desolation of rubbish and scorched and muddled soil! If you were slightly more fortunate, if, for example, instead of returning to what was once Carency and is now a rubbish heap on the map, you were returning to my friend's little village of F. (which is by no means the most desolate type of ruined village), you would find the semblance of the village you knew formerly, a part of the main street—the rest is but a deep trench—and on either side you could make out by the walls still standing your neighbors' houses and perhaps your own.

The walls would be nearly all that you would find at F., the shell of your home and the turned up heaps of earth running through your garden and beneath the very walls of the building in many cases. You would stand outside in the broken road among the mass of debris and look and wonder and see beside the deformed melancholy ruin in front of you the picture you had carried with you for three years of the little gray stone house with its old grapevine running over the front, the rose trees and fruit trees in the garden, its old roof nestling among the other old roofs of your neighbors. You would see where the shells had plowed their way through the corners, the roof, where the destructive shrapnel had burst, pitting the surface of the stone with the marks of the bullets. You would see a windowless, doorless, roofless shell, in part perhaps crumbled to its original materials, which lie in heaps about the doorway. And, wonderingly, with a sick feeling at your heart of despair that this wreck can ever be restored to what it once was—or even shelter you and your family from the elements—you stumble over the debris into the door of your home!

WELL, that is the experience, not in the least exaggerated, that tens of thousands of human beings are shortly going to encounter here in France and in Belgium. They will be women and children, as well as men, old and sick in many instances, who have already withstood the heartbreaking homesickness of a long exile, with the able bodied men of their families in the trenches and now dead, in many, many, cases. . . .

I stood inside such a little home in the deserted village of St. C. the other day and tried to picture to myself that melancholy homecoming of the exiles who once owned what must have been a pleasant little home. The iron gates on the street were closed tight against the wandering soldier, the shutters of the front windows were drawn as if to keep the sight of the misery within from the idle curiosity of the passerby. But once within the door the squalor of the whole gutted inside was visible at a glance. A shell had neatly stripped the roof of its slates, revealing the gray winter sky through the thin rafters. The walls were stained by the fire—probably due to this same shell—and the water of subsequent storms. The wall paper hung in dirty festoons. The rooms still held the rubbish of what had been family possessions, the strings of a piano, chairs, a table, mattresses, etc. Behind the little house stretched a small garden, with graveled paths, rose bushes and fruit trees that had been cut by the hail of missiles which in Emperor William's "sacred fury" had descended upon this guiltless and defenseless village.

ALREADY helping hands have been held out to these pitiful exiles. I think the English Society of Friends has the honor of being the first organization of mercy to undertake the restoration of the ruined homes of France. I remember seeing their little temporary wooden houses being put in the devastated villages of the Marne a year and a half ago. Since then many other agencies have come into active play. One charitable California woman has undertaken to restore an entire village in Lorraine. There are also a number of French societies for helping the returned peasants, such as the "Bon Gite" and the "Armoire de Lorraine," also the "Vestaire de l'Aisne," whose object is to furnish household necessities especially for women and children.

There will, of course, be formed many more such societies to give succor when the war stops and the necessities of the wounded no longer claim first attention. Already some of the American organizations for relief for wounded soldiers are planning to carry on their work after the war by helping to heal the wounds of France in the invaded provinces and on the battle ground itself.

It is clear that all the help that will be given will be needed, and more. And in this work of restoration, of returning the battle ground where the French have struggled heroically for three years in resistance to armed wrong to its former owners and to its peaceful uses, Americans should be the first and the largest helpers. It is not necessary to argue here that a nation founded on the principle of liberty should have been the first to resist the attack on the liberties of the world, should have ranged itself at the side of Canada, Australia, France in the death grapple with militarism for the protection of liberty. It is not necessary to argue the rights and wrongs of the great cause in order to realize the necessity of healing so far as possible the miserable, gaping wound created by this titanic struggle, whose curse has fallen on quite innocent victims—those whose homes happened to lie in the path of the whirlwind. "Even the Germans will want to wipe this scar from the earth!" as that French colonel said to me.

But for Americans, who not only have escaped all the woe and suffering, all the physical penalties of the world martyrdom, but have also made immense sums of money out of the miseries of others less fortunate than they, there is the moral privilege, the moral necessity of giving abundantly to help stanch the wounds of the war. We have given to the sick and the wounded, but what we have done thus far must be but a drop in the bucket that should be poured forth in the work of restoration about to begin. Only in this way can any real meaning be put into President Wilson's fine words of ethical aspiration. And never did words without deeds seem so empty, so futile as at this moment! Let us then improve the one opportunity left us as a people to prove that our good will and our longings for peace have in them something nobler than the wish to save our skins and to improve our opportunities of making money. Let us pay in the only way we can for that peace which we have enjoyed while other peoples have given their best and their all to uphold freedom and liberty. We Americans are morally bound to pay part of the immense bill that this war has cost.

AS for the specific ways in which this work of restoration can be helped, I shall have occasion in other articles to develop my ideas. For the present I will merely throw out one suggestion that might well appeal to the sentiment of Americans. The idea of the marraine (godmother) as applied to the relation between a charitable woman and a lonely, familyless soldier is original with this war. It has had an immense success. Very many French soldiers whose families are shut away from them in the invaded provinces have been helped and comforted by these marraines, who take a kindly solicitude in their welfare, look out for them when they have their week's permission, send them goodies and clothes, write to them. It has had its humorous as well as its shady aspects, but it has been undoubtedly a means of doing a great human good.

It has been suggested that French cities outside the war zone which have been exempt from the more serious trials of the war should undertake a similar relation to the cities that have suffered from invasion and battle. But no French community is in such a position to give aid as our own rich cities and towns. Why should we not ask for the privilege of befriending Reims, Soissons, Verdun, Arras, Ypres, Dixmude, and the thousands of smaller communities that have been crushed by bombardment and battle? Our great cities could take the larger cities under their protection, such as Reims and Soissons, where the destruction covers acres and the numbers of homeless run into hundreds of thousands, while our smaller cities and towns might assume the relation of marraine to the villages and cantons of the country districts.

Such a relation, sentimental on the surface, could easily be made of the greatest possible significance and real usefulness. It involves not merely giving but thought and care. It is a creative work that must continue for years, to be carried out in numberless details. It contains more than ordinary charity, more than sentimentality: it is a symbol of the new world, of the new peace, of the new system, which Americans believe in.

THE French government has for some time been making statistical record of the destruction suffered in the war zone, as far as that can be done with a large part of the invaded territory still in German control, from which only vague reports come across the lines. The whole story, the complete situation, will not be known until the black cloud of invasion and military occupation is finally rolled back. But the data at hand are enormous and will be merely enlarged when the whole truth about the invaded provinces becomes known. Many of the larger communities, such as Reims and Soissons, though within range of German guns, are in French hands. It is not necessary to wait, the French are not waiting, until the country is finally cleared before preparing for the restoration of the stricken towns and villages. Now is the time to begin the good work of peace, to prepare for the rebuilding of ruined homes—and for the homecoming of the dispossessed.

America should be thinking of her part in that great labor—should consider how best, most efficiently, she can help to restore the ravaged homes of France and Belgium.

Sensational crop damage reports were chiefly responsible for further sharp price advances in the wheat market yesterday. There was a big, broad trade with commission houses in general on the buying side, although toward the last there was much realizing. May wheat closed ⅛-¼c higher, after showing 3c gain at one time when it sold within 2c of the best price on the crop. Longs sold the near delivery freely and it also failed to get the support given the new crop months. Latter finished with net advances of 2½@2⅝c. Trading in the distant deliveries was larger as interest is being transferred from the May because of congestion in the latter.

Increased Shipping Expected.

Buying also was encouraged by the advices from Washington indicating that the government intends to take means to hasten the shipments of supplies to the allies. Some further improvement in the railroad situation also was reported, although the car shortage is still serious. Another bullish factor was the report that the Argentine government will prohibit the exportation of grain. Cash wheat held relatively firm. Local shipping sales were 15,000 bu. The seaboard reported that the strength in the wheat market was against export business.

Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 539,000 bu, compared with 374,000 bu a year ago. Broomhall says American clearances of grain keep liberal and that it is expected that shipments will continue to satisfy foreign demand. Primary receipts totaled 820,000 bu, against 1,000,000 bu a year ago.

Corn Makes Further Gain.

Corn continued its advance and again sold to new high levels. Resting spots showed net gains of ⅞@1⅛c, the distant deliveries being relatively stronger than the May. Demand was broad and the volume of trading large. Heavy realizing sales at the outset caused a temporary price depression, but the market quickly rallied. There was also free selling for profit in the last hour, but the offerings were well taken. Shorts were heavy buyers, and many longs reinstated lines recently unloaded. Chief bullish factors were the expected improvement in shipping conditions and the report that the Argentine government would prohibit exports of grain for the season.

Cash corn was ¼@1c higher and sales of No. 2 yellow were made at $1.19, a new high mark. No shipping sales were reported. Seaboard clearances for the day were nothing. Primary receipts totaled 776,000 bu, against 829,000 bu a year ago.

Oats Active and Higher.

Oats displayed much activity and closed ⅛@⅝c higher, May showing greatest gain. Commission houses in general were buying oats, while on the bulge there was a great deal of selling for profits. Much of the buying was on country orders. Demand was stimulated by the fact that oats are relatively cheap as compared to wheat or corn, and by reports of increased consumption on farms as result of the growing scarcity and dearness of corn. Cash corn was ½@1c higher, with local shipping sales 225,000 bu. Clearances for the day were 2,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 720,000 bu, against 683,000 bu a year ago.

Buying of a big line of lard by the Cross-Roy concern was the feature in provisions, and lifted the price of this product to a new high level. The entire list ruled strong, but met with considerable realizing pressure toward the last and lost part of the early advance.

Rye Prices Up Sharply.

Rye was 2c higher, with No. 2 selling at $1.65. Receipts were 5 cars.

Barley ruled strong to 1c higher and coast barley 2c up. Malting was quoted $1.16@1.35 and sold $1.21@1.34; feed and mixing quotable, $1.05@1.17, with a sale at latter figure; screenings were quoted 50c@$1.05, and skimmings, 75@85c. Receipts, 27 cars.

Timothy seed was firm. March, $5.60 bid and $5.90 asked; September, $6.00 bid. Cash lots sold $4.30@5.00. Clover seed ruled easy. Cash lots quoted $12.00@17.00 and spot prime $17.65 nominal.

Flax seed closed 1¼c higher. Cash quoted $2.87¼@2.95¼ nominal. Duluth was irregular, Minneapolis 1¼c higher, and Winnipeg unchanged.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

"The season is still backward, but my advices are sufficiently definite to warrant the statement that wheat in Tennessee and Kentucky is very badly winter killed, in many sections the worst in years, and the condition of what remains is very low," said B. W. Snow. "In Ohio there is only moderate winter loss, and while the prospect is below average the outlook is not alarming. Every report so far received from Indiana shows winter killing much above an average, and a general condition that is low. The Illinois situation is better, with rather moderate winter loss and a condition below average, but improving. Three-fourths of returns so far from Missouri show more than usual winter killing, with plant small, unthrifty and starting slowly. The western two-thirds of Kansas, which includes the great wheat territory, makes a poor showing, with a thin stand, unthrifty plant and some wind damage. This territory is still suffering from dry weather, and if warm weather is experienced before rains come the situation will quickly become serious. In Oklahoma the prospect is fairly satisfactory, with growth begun and generally sufficient moisture for present needs, but no surplus. With the exception of western Kansas recent rains and snows have furnished ample surface moisture for a prompt early growth whenever warm weather shall be experienced."

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 54 cars; corn, 97 cars; oats, 114 cars; rye, 5 cars; barley, 27 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 45,000, and for all next week 155,000 head.

The big demand for spring wheat for seeding all through Nebraska is regarded as indication that the loss in winter wheat has been heavy. Reports to this effect were received by commission houses operating through the west. Crop reports received by Slaughter indicated a low condition of the crop east of the Mississippi with plow up estimated at 10 to 20 per cent.

Foreign advices on oats indicate heavy consumption with moderate arrivals. American offers were firm, with Argentine stocks light. Argentina is making practically no new offers of oats. Liverpool reported corn prices strong on bullish advices from Argentina. Broomhall cabled that the continent was absorbing wheat freely.

The crop report of the Rosenbaum Review indicates the heaviest loss in winter wheat acreage ever known with the exception of 1912. In eleven principal winter wheat states there will be, according to this paper, about 4,885,000 acres plowed up. Indications are that 28 per cent of the Kansas acreage will be plowed up with heavy losses also in Illinois and Indiana.

Shipments of all kinds of grain from Chicago the last week were 3,474,000 bu. The car situation is still unsatisfactory, but some improvement is noted.

Kansas City wired: "Bids on No. 3 corn to arrive 60 days last night were $1.16½."

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 40,000 bu for one day.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Further advances met active realizing in the cotton market today and after selling at 19.10c. May contracts reacted, closing at 18.97c with the general list closing steady at a net advance of 9@15 points. According to a southern statistical authority, prospects now point to an increase of about 7 to about 15 points in the western belt acreage, and from 2 to 5 per cent east of the river. Crop preparations in the eastern belt are said be from one to three weeks late, while 30 per cent of Texas is reported very dry, with 10 per cent in rather better condition, while the balance of that state is reported in good shape. Sales of print cloths at Fall River for the week amounted to 400,000 pieces, against 300,000 for the same week last year. Port receipts today, 12,210 bales, for the season, 6,134,603; exports today, 50; for the season, 4,261,436; stock, 1,227. Futures:

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 24.—Rains in the eastern belt stimulated cotton buying today and in the face of considerable week end realizing from holders of long contracts, prices at one period were lifted 19@27 points. An unconfirmed report that an American passenger steamship had sunk a German submarine had a bullish effect and increased the pressure to buy around the opening. Late in the session the market fell off somewhat under the liquidation and last prices were at a net gain of 9@12 points. Futures:

RAILS FEATURE SESSION.

New York, March 24.—Rails were the absorbing features of today's brief but active session, that division, for the most part, adding to its belated advance of the preceding day, presumably on the prospects of higher freight and passenger rates.

Buying converged around coalers, Reading, Norfolk and Western, Lehigh Valley, Baltimore and Ohio, and Erie advancing 1 to 2 points. Gains in other rails, notably St. Paul, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, New York Central, Chicago and Northwestern, Illinois Central, Colorado Southern, and the preferred shares of the Missouri Pacific, Wabash, and Southern roads, attained similar proportions.

United States Steel was variable, rising and falling within a point of yesterday's final price, but Bethlehem Steels, shippings, and motors were moderately reactionary, with Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific.

Coppers in Demand.

Coppers were in steady demand at gains of 1 to almost 2 points, Utah proving the exception, falling back under pressure, but making full recovery later. Baldwin Locomotive was strongest of the equipments, rising 3 points to 60⅛.

Among the less active industrials and specialties strength was shown by Malting common and preferred, Hide and Leather preferred, and Gulf States Steel at gains of 1 to 3 points. Wilson Packing added four points to yesterday's material rise, making a record at 74⅛, and Virginia Iron and Coal rose 6 to 71. Realizing for profits caused a general shading of prices later, but the market closed with a strong tone.

Bonds were generally higher today on an expansion of dealings. United States coupon 4s rose ⅛ per cent on call during the week and coupon 3s declined ½ per cent.

Effect of War on Investments.

What will be the effect on investments of war between this country and Germany?

The immediate result of the opening of hostilities would be to put property on the Atlantic coast in danger of bombardment and destruction by German submarines. The seacoast defenses of the United States are out of date and poorly manned. Further, they exist at only a few important points, and there are billions of dollars' worth of property wholly undefended. The gulf coast is not exempt from the same danger.

Suppose that, after bombardment had been going on intermittently for a few weeks or months, the German navy, aided by its big flotilla of submarines, should destroy the British fleet. Of course, this is not expected, but it may happen. If it should come to pass there would be nothing whatever to prevent the landing of a German army on our coast.

An army once landed could proceed as far inland as it deemed best, being limited only by the size of the force that might be provided for keeping open its lines of communication and policing the country behind it. Industrial plants and mines would be seized and their output appropriated to the uses of the invader. Heavy tribute would be levied on all cities, as was done in Belgium, and corporations in the occupied territory would be forced to bear part of this burden. Evidently dividend and interest payments would cease during the occupation and business would be so disorganized that it could not recover for years. The payment of an enormous indemnity by the government might finally end the occupation. This would bear heavily on investments in all parts of the country.

The United States has abundant man power and is literally rolling in wealth. With a year or two of preparation it could put in the field an army capable of crushing any force that Germany could send. Without preparation man power is helpless and money is merely a temptation to attack.

Twin City Rapid Transit.

F. J. T., Clarinda, Ia.—The Twin City Rapid Transit company has made increasing earnings for years. Gross in 1916 was $10,188,054, an increase of 7⅝ per cent, and net after taxes was $3,225,313, an increase of 19 per cent. The earnings figure out at 9.22 per cent on the $22,000,000 of common stock after paying 7 per cent on the $3,000,000 preferred. This compares with 6.83 per cent earning in 1915. Dividends of 6 per cent a year are paid on common. There are $20,263,000 of bonds outstanding. Of these $5,000,000, secured on the Minneapolis street railway, mature Jan. 15, 1919. The present Minneapolis franchise runs till 1923 and the company has been negotiating recently for a new one running to 1953.

Brief Answers.

D. H.—Stock of the Midway Chief Oil company was alleged by the government to be worthless two years ago, and an indictment was returned against the broker who had been selling it. The stock is worth no more now than it was then.

L. L. H., Farina, Ill.—The $24,929,000 4s of 1953 of the Illinois Central are secured by deposit of all the bonds of the Louisville, New Orleans, and Texas, 789 miles in length. They are a well secured investment and are selling at a price to yield 4⅝ per cent.

Hog receipts of 11,000 head at Chicago yesterday made steady to 5c higher prices, topping at $15.15, with the bulk at $14.90@15.05. Shippers bought 2,500 head, and there was a good demand from packers, all of the local killers being in the trade. Offerings were well cleared and the market closed strong.

Final prices made hogs largely 10c higher than a week ago, while pigs were unchanged for the best and 25@50c lower for common light and underweights. The average price of all hogs here this week was placed at $15.00, a new high record, and compared with $14.75 last week. Receipts for six days were only 110,071, compared with 172,995 last week and 152,000 a year ago. Shipments, however, were increased to 34,100, against 27,100 the previous week and 22,902 a year ago.

CATTLE.

Beef cattle values finished the week at a sharp slump from high levels recently reached, but showing little change from last week's close. Receipts the first part of the week fell far short of requirements and highest prices on record were made. Settlement of rail difficulties was followed by a freer movement of supplies from producing centers, however, and packers had little trouble in reducing values, as consumptive needs were not voluminous. Calves sol dand closed 50@75c higher than a week ago.

SHEEP.

New high record marks were made in the market for sheep and lambs at Chicago this week and prices closed at a substantial gain for the week, although showing a reaction from the high point. Receipts showed a decrease, while the demand was of good volume nd urgent character. Lambs topped the week at $15.35 and sheep reached $12.75. Western yearlings sold up to $14.10 and ewes up to $12.50.

OKMULGEE
Producing & Refining Company

THIS Company is the consolidation of seven established, dividend paying interests. Its holdings consist of over 10,000 acres of oil and gas leases in prolific fields of Oklahoma and Kansas. At the present time 53 wells are producing 1,500 barrels a day and the refining capacity is 1,000 barrels a day, which represents daily earnings of $3,050, based on the current price of oil. This is equivalent to $1,127,850.00 a year. The present dividend requirements call for distribution of 2½% quarterly on the outstanding shares. * * * * *

NEW WELLS are being added each month and, as only 2% of the Company's property has been developed to date, the earnings should show a steady increase.

AT THE PRESENT PRICE OF $6.00, we consider this stock an exceptional investment opportunity. The stock is soon to be listed on New York and Boston Curbs. Write, call or 'phone for descriptive booklet which gives full information on this issue.

REYNOLDS FIGHTS CONSCRIPTION OF PRIVATE INCOMES

Calls the War Proposal Unnecessary in View of U. S. Wealth.

Concerning the plan of the Washington administration to raise war funds by conscripting individual incomes in excess of $100,000, and taxing those between $50,000 and $100,000 50 per cent, George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National bank, holds the following view:

"I cannot believe the proponents of the proposed tax can be serious. I am opposed to it, for it is un-American, unnecessary, and would savor of class legislation bordering on socialistic. The bonded debt of the United States is the smallest of any important country of the world, while its credit is the best and its wealth the greatest. Possessing as we do approximately 40 per cent of the banking power of the world as well as 40 per cent of the world's supply of gold, there is neither reason nor excuse for confiscation of property by the government.

Would Work Irreparable Injury.

"The proper method of raising funds is by the issue and sale of bonds in sufficient amounts to meet government requirements for funds to properly prepare for war and even to carry on war should it become necessary. Should this method of financing ultimately result in the issue of securities large enough to impair our credit or make it difficult to procure funds, taxation equivalent to confiscation in that emergency might be defended.

"But, in my opinion, it would do irreparable injury to inaugurate such a drastic plan now, when credit and money are the cheapest they have ever been in the United States. Furthermore, much of the benefit of money expended now will benefit posterity, which should assist in paying the cost. Still further to enact class legislation by placing under a tax burden a few where the benefit would be for all would be, in my opinion, a serious mistake."

Decrease in Banks' Reserve.

The New York bank statement showed a decrease of over $21,000,000 in the excess reserve. This was due largely to a decrease of $19,677,000 in cash. The deposit gain was $7,797,000. The figures:

In Foreign Stock Markets.

LONDON, March 24.—Gilt edged securities continued to sag on the stock exchange today, but little stock changed hands. The downward tendency was due to the prospective treasury bill issue and the beginning of dealings in the new war loan Monday. Rubber shares were firm features and American securities reflected the advance in Wall street, but only now price shares changed hands. Russian issues were in good request, while Brazilians and Grand Trunks were flat.

Money conditions were easy, but discount rates were harder on the official announcement of an early issue of treasury bills. Bar silver, 35¾d per ounce; money, 3¾ per cent; discount rates, short bills, 4⅝ per cent; three months, 4⅝ per cent.

PARIS, March 24.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Rentes, 61f 50c. Exchange on London, 27f 82c. Five per cent loan, 8?f 25c.

LAST week's real estate market gave unmistakable evidence of the disturbing influence of the war crisis. In common with many other lines of business it has suffered for some time from this cause, but in a more intensified form last week, coincident with the growing gravity of the situation.

There was a fairly good movement of the cheaper grades of property, but a noticeable scarcity of transactions of any particular magnitude. It always is the person with large means who is more timid in an investment way in times like these than the person with comparatively small means, and, according to reports from brokers, a number of important transactions either have been held up or abandoned altogether because of the present complications.

See Boom Ahead.

While some view the impending war with Germany as a grave menace to future business conditions, there are, on the other hand, many, and their number is steadily increasing, who are of the opinion, that after the first disturbing excitement has passed there will follow a period of great activity in all lines of business, and particularly real estate, which is yet to feel the stimulating effect of the great prosperity which the country has enjoyed the last year and a half.

In view of the healthy value conditions which prevail in most of the large cities, and particularly Chicago, it is believed that real estate should come in for a period of great activity, if this general business activity materializes.

The week's market was not only shy of large transactions, but was also along narrow lines, with the chief feature being apartment deals of which there was an unusual number of important transactions.

Activity in Subdivisons.

A particularly interesting feature of the market just now is the rather surprising activity which has developed in subdivision property in certain of the outlying sections around the city, where an active industrial development is taking place. This is particularly true in the Calumet district, so-called.

Thus, it is said that the Greater Chicago subdivision, comprising the old Pullman tract between Ninety-eighth and One Hundred and Third streets, and between Indiana and Cottage Grove avenues, which is being put on the market by Frederick H. Bartlett & Co., is being sold at the rate of $150,000 a week.

Two other subdivisions in the same district, located between Cottage Grove and South Park avenues, and running from Ninety-first to Ninety-seventh street, are reported as having practically been sold out since last fall. The improvements are substantial, consisting mostly of brick dwellings and two and three flat buildings.

Activity in Parkholme.

Much activity also is reported in a west side industrial section near Twenty-second street and Forty-eighth avenue. In this section there are several large industries, including the big plant of the Western Electric company. William H. Brittigan & Co., the sales agents of "Parkholme," the new big subdivision they have put on the market in that vicinity, report that their sales have been in excess of $100,000 a week.

E. A. Cummings & Co. report much activity in their Mont Clair subdivision, while on the northwest side Thomasson & White, pioneer operators in Albany Park, are placing an attractive subdivision on the market at Kedzie and Balmoral avenues. Considerable activity is also reported on Forty-eighth avenue and in the Higgins Ridge district, west of Milwaukee avenue. It is estimated that the sales of subdivision property are running in the neighborhood of a half a million dollars a week.

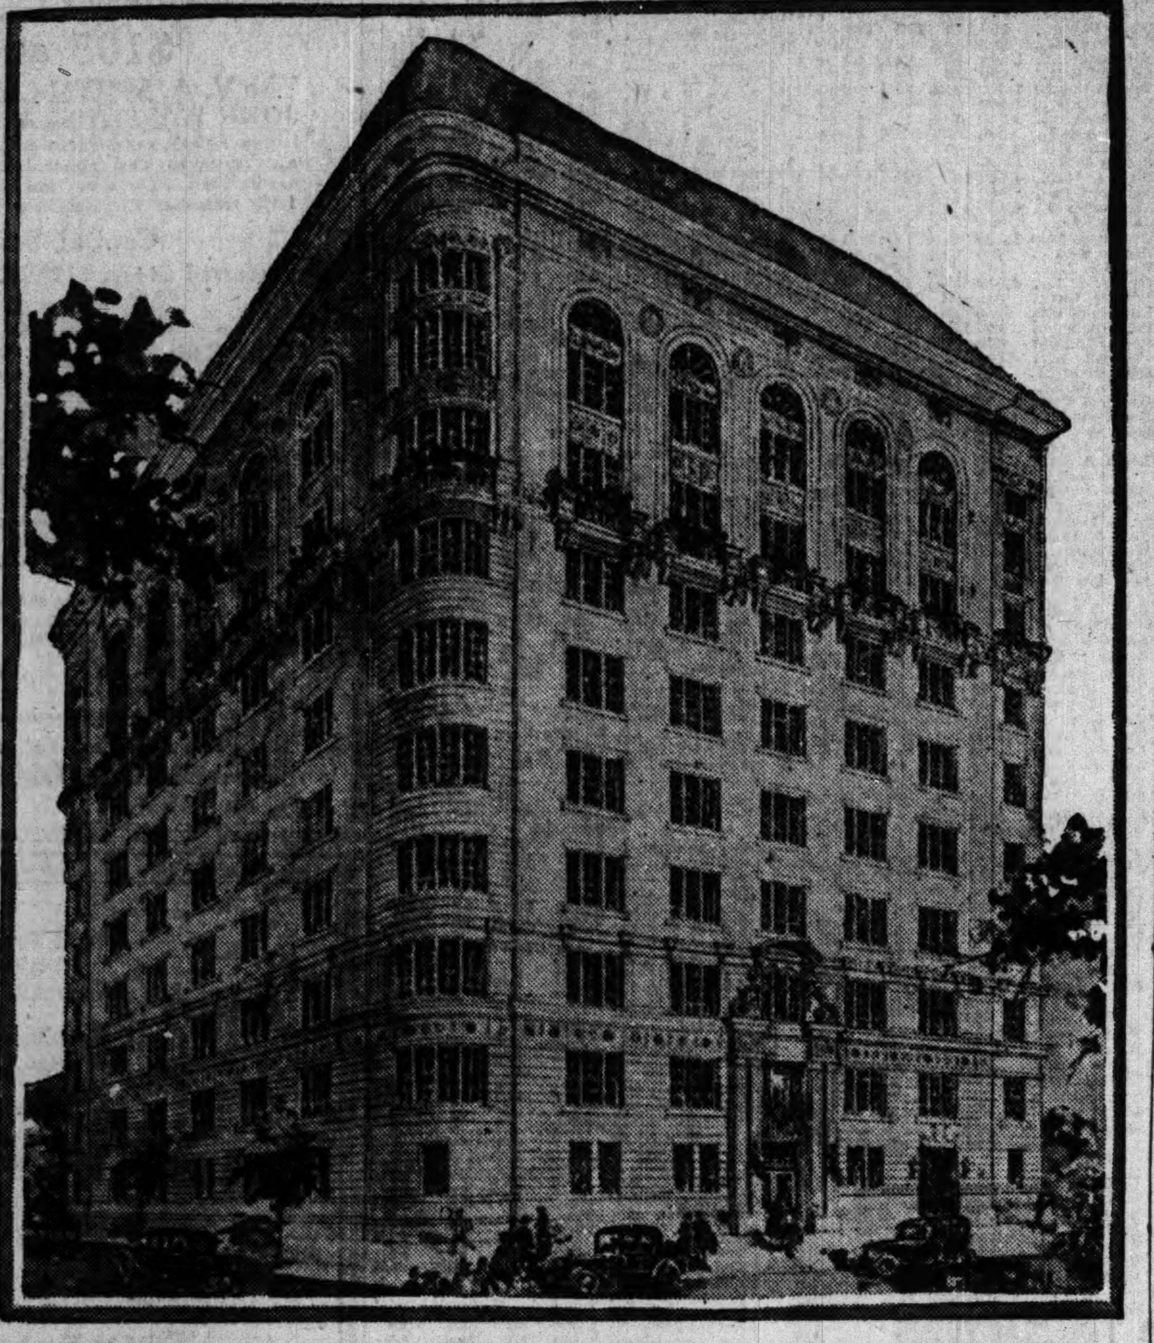
HUBBARD WOODS RESIDENCE SOLD

An interesting transaction in high class Hubbard Woods residence property was the sale by C. Percival Hodgson, secretary of A. G. Morse & Co., confections, to Chester Hogle, a sugar broker, of the property at 1192 Ashland avenue, for an expressed consideration of $36,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,500. The property comprises about three acres fronting on Ashland avenue and Hampton Dale road and is improved with a ten room brick and stucco residence.

In this connection Mr. Hogle conveyed to Mr. Hodgson the residence property at the southwest corner of Central and Fourth avenues, Wilmette, at a valuation of $16,000. The lot is 110x112 feet and is improved with an eleven room dwelling, and formerly was the residence of Emil Schlessinger. Paul Schroeder & Co. were the brokers.

IN STREETERVILLE

New High Grade Apartment Building to Be Erected in "Cap'n's" Domain.



And still another big high grade fireproof apartment building is planned for the "Streeterville" district. It will be known as "250 East Chestnut street," and will be located at the northeast corner of Chestnut street and De Witt court. It will be erected by Albert L. Mulke, after plans by David Robertson and Robert Leroy Kane, will be eight stories and English basement, and will cost about $300,000. It will occupy a lot 110x100 feet, and will contain sixteen apartments of ten and twelve rooms. There will be three maids' rooms and five bathrooms in each apartment, besides extra rooms for servants on the first floor. It is stated the apartments are expected to rent at $5,000 to $6,000 a year. The first floor will contain a large and ornate lobby and an entrance for motors. There will be two large sun rooms in each of the twelve room apartments, and one in eachof the ten room apartments. Laundries will be on the mezzanine floor. A. J. Pardridge and Harold Bradley will have the management of the building.

SHERIDAN ROAD VACANT BRINGS RECORD PRICE

A record price is said to have been paid for Sheridan road vacant at the corner of Pratt boulevard in a transaction reported during the week. It was the sale by Mrs. Elsie M. Hughes to B. L. Behr of the property at the northeast corner of the streets named, having a frontage of 139 feet on the road and 150 feet on Pratt boulevard. While the actual price is not disclosed, the property is said to have been on the market at $350 a front foot and it is intimated the sale was on about this basis.

The purchase was a speculative one on the part of Mr. Behr, who is said to have no plans looking to the improvement of the property. The transaction was negotiated by J. E. Ehrenhalt, Jacob Berman being associated.

In this connection Mr. Behr purchased through the same brokers from Helen Frances Cady the property adjoining, with a frontage of fifty feet, at 6315-17 Sheridan road, for a reported consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $17,000. The property is improved with a high grade six apartment building of six rooms, sun parlors, and two baths.

Arnold Will Discuss the Traction Problem

Tuesday's luncheon of the Cook county real estate board at the Hotel Sherman promises to be of an unusually interesting character, as the speaker will be Bion J. Arnold, chairman of the board of supervising engineers, Chicago traction, and his subject will be "The Chicago Traction and Subway Commission and the Traction Problem n General."

The Chicago board also has a treat in store for its members in the fact that Judge Landis will be the speaker at Thursday's luncheon at the Hotel La Salle.

Sheridan Road Corner at Briar Place Sold

Record was also made of the conveyance by David A. Dunbar to Frank D. Stout of the property at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Briar place, 125x225 feet, consideration nominal. The deed was executed in 1912 and the lot has since been improved with a handsome residence by Mr. Stout, the permit taken out last year giving the cost at $100,000.

DR. BILLINGS BUYS BOWMAN PLACE AS GIFT

Probably the most important and certainly the most interesting transaction of the week was the closing of the deal in which Dr. Frank Billings purchased the Ernest M. Bowman place in Lake Forest as a gift to his daughter, Mrs. George P. Nichols Jr. The property, which is one of the most attractive in Lake Forest, is on the east side of Green Bay road, just south of the Edward S. Moore place. It comprises twenty-seven acres and is improved with two dwellings, one a frame and the other a stucco. It is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Nichols plan to live in the stucco residence during the coming summer, but later on will tear down the frame dwelling and erect a handsome modern house, which they will occupy as a summer home. The price paid for the property by Dr. Billings was not disclosed in the deed, but it is understood the purchase price was about $110,000. The contract for the purchase of the property was executed some time ago, but the closing of the transaction had to wait on the return of Mr. Bowman from Florida, where he passed the winter.

John Griffith & Son of Lake Forest were the brokers in the transaction. Mr. and Mrs. Nichols were married June 3, 1916, and reside at present with Dr. Frank Billings at 242 East Walton place.

BARNETT BROS. BUY ACRE TRACT ON KEDZIE AVE.

An interesting transaction in southwest side acres was the purchase by Barnett Bros., builders and subdividers, from Orville H. Root and Margaret R. Claflin of Hillsboro, N. H., of a tract of ten acres between Fifty-seventh and Fifty-ninth streets, on Kedzie avenue, extended east two blocks, for a reported $22,500, all cash.

It is to be subdivided into sixty residence lots, 30x125 feet, and twenty-four business lots, 25x125 feet, the latter on Kedzie avenue. They plan to improve at once with fifteen brick bungalows to cost from $4,500 to $5,500, and with ten two flat buildings, to cost from $7,000 to $7,500

The property adjoins the subdivision of Barnett Bros. on Kedzie avenue now about sold out. Malcolm C. Harper was the broker.

PROJECTS HOTEL ON SOUTH SIDE

Sherman T. Cooper, the builder, is said to have under consideration the construction of an eleven story hotel on 175x143 feet of ground at the southeast corner of Hyde Park boulevard and Fifty-third street, to cost about $1,250,000. Tentative plans are said to have been prepared by Architect Henry L. Newhouse.

District Managers Sell 44,000 Square Feet

Charles R. Kappes and Louis B. Beardslee, managers of the Division street manufacturing district, have sold for the trustees of the district to Morris Kroot, who took title for the Lorenz company, a tract of 44,000 square feet fronting on Division street at the head of Krall avenue with a south frontage of 123.4 feet on Division street. The company will improve with an office and shop building, the initial improvements to cost about $15,000. The consideration is not disclosed, but is said to have been in the neighborhood of $17,000. The property will be served by a grade switch track of the Northwestern road.

ACTIVE TRADING IN APARTMENTS DURING WEEK

Business Shows Favorable Contrast with Preceding 7 Days.

Apartment property furnished the most active feature of the week's business, the showing contrasting most favorably with that of the previous week, when there was little of importance doing. Last week's business included several large transactions, as well as a good run of medium sized to the cheaper sort.

Ray P. Tennes, son of Mont Tennes, appeared as the purchaser in a series of north side deals with an aggregate consideration around $175,000. He has taken title from Henry C. Eckelbrecht to three apartment buildings on Arthur avenue and to four six apartment buildings on Glenwood avenue in the vicinity of Albion avenue. The three apartment buildings are at the southwest corner of Arthur and Magnolia avenues, lot 40x125 feet, which was conveyed for a reported consideration of $18,000, subject to $8,500 incumbrance; the property thirty-eight feet east of Lakewood avenue, lot 32x125 feet; the property 268 feet west of Sheridan road, lot 33x124 feet. The latter two are said to have been conveyed for about $11,500, subject to $6,000 in each instance.

Mortgages of $17,000.

The six apartment buildings were conveyed for a reported consideration of $31,000 to $32,000, each being subject to $17,000 incumbrance. One is on Glenwood avenue, 59 feet south of Albion avenue, on 50x140 feet of ground, west front; one 109 feet south of Albion, 50x140 feet; one 51 feet south of Albion, 52x122 feet, east front, and the other 100 feet south of Albion, 50x122 feet, east front.

Another big north side transaction was the sale by David Angus and John Cameron, the builders, to Henry and Marie Lemke of Milwaukee, Wis., of the high grade thirty apartment building at 1106-18 Pratt boulevard, about 215 feet from the lake, for a reported consideration of $140,000, subject to $90,000 incumbrance. It occupies a lot 140x176 feet, and is said to have a gross anual rental of $20,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment the six flat building at 3621-23 Sheffield avenue, 60x124 feet, for a reported $20,000, subject to $5,000, also the clear three flat building lot 30x124 feet, at 3625 Sheffield avenue, for a reported $10,000. John W. Dunklau of R. G. Ludwig & Co. represented both parties. The Lemkes subsequently sold the thirty apartment building through the same broker to Frederick G. Ruff for a reported consideration of $140,000, subject to an incumbrance of $112,000.

Deal in Evanston.

A noteworthy transaction in Evanston apartment property was the sale by Floyd L. Bateman to Axel H. Johnson of the eighteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Judson avenue and Lee street for a reported consideration of $70,000, subject to an incumbrance of $49,500. The purchaser conveyed in part payment the vacant at the southeast corner of Delaware and De Witt places, 95x109 feet, at a reported valuation of $47,500, subject to an incumbrance of $27,000. Mr. Johnson purchased this Streeterville corner, with the fifty-five feet adjoining, last month, the latter being retained by him, which he is about to improve with a ten story fireproof apartment building. William H. Mellin of J. H. McCortney & Co. represented both parties to the transaction.

An important transaction in north side flat property was the sale by Charles H. Kusel and P. A. Harris of the eighteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Jarvis and Ashland avenues to James B. Carter for a reported consideration of $70,000, subject to $35,000 incumbrance. In part payment Mr. Carter conveyed the property at 6161-65 Broadway, lot 75x100 feet, improved with a two story brick building, at a reported valuation of $35,000. Stafford & Trankle were the brokers.

William H. Banford of H. H. Banford & Co. has sold to J. M. Eckert the high grade twelve apartment building at the northeast corner of Lakewood and Hood avenues, lot 57x125 feet, for a reported consideration of $56,000, subject to an incumbrance of $28,000. The apartments contain four and five rooms with sun parlors, and in part payment Mr. Eckert conveyed the property at 3147-49 North Clark street at a reported valuation of $18,000. J. E. Ehrenhalt was the broker in the deal.

On North Dearborn.

W. J. MacDonald has purchased from the trustees of the estate of Silas Hubbell the high grade eight apartment building at 1423-25 North Dearborn street, lot 50x135 feet. The building is said to have a gross annual rental of $5,800, and the property was sold for a reported consideration of $42,000. S. A. Crowe Jr. of Crowe Bros. & Co. was the broker. This is the third apartment building sold by this firm on this street since March 1.

Leases and Loans.

THERE was not much doing of an important character in leases and loans last week, the showing comparing poorly with that of the previous week. The most important of the leases reported covered the four story and basement building at 6 to 8 West Lake street, which was leased by the Adolph Market company from Eddy Eugene Hoadley, trustee of the estate of Mary M. Corthell, for a term of twenty-five years from May 1, 1917, at a net annual rental of $6,000, or $150,000 for the term. The premises adjoin the northwest corner of the two streets, the four story building on which recently was leased by the Adolph Market company from the First Trust and Savings bank, trustee of the estate of Otto Young, for a term of twenty-five years at a net term rental of $250,000, or at the rate of $10,000 a year.

Willis & Frankenstein have leased for the Washington Shirt company to Robert H. Anderson, Axel L. Thorsen, and L. B. Peterson the store in the Powers building at 62 East Monroe street for a term rent from May 1 of $24,000. The lessees, who formerly were connected with C. Jevne & Co., will occupy the premises with a high grade grocery store.

Paul C. Loeber & Co. have leased for James W. Fernald to the Consumers Linen Manufacturing company the three story and basement building at 54-56 West Grand avenue for a term of years at an aggregate rent of $35,000. The lessees will take possession May 1 and will use the premises for the linen business and laundry purposes.

Record was made of the lease by Mary A. S. Nelson to the federal government of the one story building at 1207-11 West Madison street, north front, between Racine avenue and Throop street, 72x114 feet, for ten years from Feb. 1 last at an annual rental of $7,500.

Two good sized loans were filed for record late in the week.

One of these was a trust deed given by Richard Ostenreider, Herman Wolenberger, and Paul A. Wendland to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure an additional loan of $250,000 eight years at 6 per cent in connection with the construction of the Breakers hotel, at the southwest corner of Fifty-fifth street and South Shore drive.

The same trust company is trustee in a loan of $150,000 three years at 6 per cent to Charles B. Willey on property in Robey street 641 feet south of Blue Island avenue, 1,700x243 feet, east front.

The trust company is trustee in a loan of $58,000 seven years at 6 per cent on the property at the southwest corner of Winona street and Southport avenue.

—changing conditions demand more liquid capital

These are days of bigger business concerns—about five times as big as formerly, on the average, and presenting problems increasingly intense.

As the margin of profit grows constantly thinner in many lines, necessity of a larger volume increases. To meet these new conditions, the most successful concerns are setting aside precedent, often to the extent of adopting new methods of financing.

No such method has been more promptly and widely appreciated than our plan of buying accounts receivable, whereby our customers collect these accounts without disturbing their debtors. In five years, our business has grown to $35,001,972.59 in 1916—three-fourths with concerns rated $35,000 to $1,000,000.

Our customers are growing, too—27.4% of them have had their ratings increased since they began business with us. We seek the patronage of progressive, wide-awake manufacturers and wholesalers worth $20,000 and over. Send for our detailed folder, or our nearest representative would appreciate a request to call.

Do you realize that if your accounts average paid in 60 days, and we give you 80% cash when shipped, balance as you collect the accounts, you can do four times as much business without adding a dollar to your capital?

APARTMENTS TO BE ERECTED ON DUNHAM TRACT

One to Front on Park and the Other on Boulevard.

A transaction involving an important building project on Hyde Park boulevard between Dorchester and Kenwood avenues was closed during the week by the purchase by Hans A. Leafgreen, the builder, from Dean R. Phillips of the 100x145 feet on the north side of the boulevard, 200 feet west of Dorchester avenue. The consideration is withheld, but the sale is said to have been on the basis of about $225 a front foot.

The interesting part of the transaction is that it marks another important improvement in the old Dunham tract on the north side of the boulevard between Dorchester and Woodlawn avenues, which for years was made unsightly by the old board fence, known to the old timers as Dunham's "spite fence." One high grade apartment building is now in course of construction at the corner of Woodlawn avenue and another is about completed 300 feet east of Woodlawn avenue.

One Facing Madison Park.

Mr. Leafgreen's proposed buildings are opposite the high grade buildings erected by him at the southeast corner of Kenwood avenue. One will have a north front, facing Madison park, and the other will face south on the boulevard. Each will occupy 90 feet frontage, with a depth of 42 feet, and will contain eleven rooms, including two sun parlors and three baths, and will cost in the neighborhood of $60,000 each. The apartments are expected to rent at $300 a month.

Another important south side improvement is involved in connection with the purchase by Harold E. Hammond from Abe S. Davis of the De Vora apartments at 4549-57 Michigan boulevard, near Forty-sixth street. It is an eighteen apartment building of two, three, and four rooms, with sun parlors and baths, on a lot 67x161 feet, and was conveyed for a reported consideration of $70,000, subject to an incumbrance of $42,500.

Annual Rental of $10,000.

It has an annual rental of about $10,000 and in part payment Mr. Hammond conveyed the property at the southeast corner of Drexel boulevard and Forty-third street at a reported valuation of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. The lot fronts 99½ feet on the boulevard and 180 feet on Forty-third street, the improvements comprising an old building mostly one story high, with two stories in a part of the building occupied with stores and a photograph gallery.

It is stated that Mr. Davis plans to raze the present building and improve with a modern three story structure with stores on the ground floor and offices and apartments on the upper floors. It is expected to cost in excess of $100,000. R. O. Emmel of McKey & Poague represented both parties to the transaction.

One Time Calumet Club Property Sold for $100,000

Record was made of the transfer by master's deed by the Calumet club Building association to the First Trust and Savings bank of the property of the one time club at the northeast corner of Michigan avenue and Twentieth street for an expressed consideration of $100,000. It is a formal transaction and without any market significance.

The club was disbanded several years ago and the property was bid in by a committee of the bondholders of a bond issue loan on the property. The present transfer, which is made by Ralph C. Otis, Landon C. Rose, and John M. Moorhead, trustees, is simply for the purpose of vesting the title in the trust company and ivolves no sale of the property.

FAIR SHOWING IN BUSINESS SITES IN WEEK'S TRADE

Downtown District Represented in Small Transactions.

Business property made a fair showing in the week's business, although hardly up to that of hte previous week. The downtown district was represented by one transaction, but it was of a comparatively insignificant character. It was the purchase by the Wells-Fargo company from Mrs. Charlotte C. [illegible] of 20x106 feet, east front, in Sherman street, 199 feet south of Polk street, directly across the alley from the company's warehouse. It will be used to give additional alley space for the wagons of the company.

A noteworthy west side transaction was the sale by Charles N. Conrad to August Rieke of the property at the northeast corner of Washington boulevard and Cicero avenue. The lot is [illegible] 180 feet and is improved with one and two story buildings containing [illegible] stores and twelve offices. The property sold for a reported consideration of $[illegible],000, subject to an incumbrance of $[illegible].

In this connection Mr. Conrad, designated as a bachelor, and Esther D. [illegible], a widow, in a deed filed for record [illegible] acquired from Howard G. Grey of Evanston the property at the southeast corner of Fullerton avenue and Humboldt boulevard, lot 150x51 feet, north front, improved with one and two story buildings containing seven stores and four offices, for an expressed consideration of $35,000.

A notable north side deal was the sale by Dr. Paul Krye to Etta Strauss of the property at the southeast corner of Broadway and Ardmore avenue. The lot fronts 50 feet with a depth of [illegible] feet, and is improved with a three story brick building containing two stores and sixteen apartments.

The property was sold for a reported consideration of $50,000, clear, and in part payment the purchaser conveyed the six apartment building at [illegible] Byron street, between Sheridan road and Osgood street, on a lot 50x125 feet, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. Sidney L. Stein & Co. and A. H. Hobbs of W. K. Young & Bro. were the brokers in the transaction.

"Welcome home, Daddy"

Woolly as little Teddy Bears!

How sweet they look to Father—warm and laughing in their fuzzy, soft woolens.

You love to have them look cunning—feel "comfy"—in their flannel night things. Yet it seems so impossible to keep the woolens nice. The rubbing of any cake soap on the wool fabric, and more rubbing to get the dirt out, makes the garments harsh—makes them shrink and turn yellow.

You will be amazed

With Lux you can keep all the children's woolens like new.

You will be amazed to find how easy it is. No rubbing is necessary. Dance the woolens up and down in the rich, frothy lather and the dirt dissolves instantly.

Lux will leave your downiest woolens like new. Use it for anything that can be washed in water.

Your grocer has Lux, and all department stores. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

How to wash woolens

Whisk the Lux flakes into a lather in boiling or very hot water. Put in your woolens and let them soak until the water is comfortable for the hands. Then work them about in the suds, but do not rub. Rinse in three waters the same temperature as that in which you washed them. Dissolve a little Lux in the last rinsing water; this leaves the woolens softer and fluffier. Squeeze the water out without twisting. Dry in the sun (colored woolens in the shade).

Spend five minutes this way tonight

Follow faithfully each step of the famous skin treatment described below & you can begin to give your skin the charm you have longed for

Never for an instant think that you must go through life with an unattractive complexion because it happens to be that way now. There's no girl on earth who can't have a prettier skin by trying!

This is your opportunity

Use this treatment once a day. Dip a cloth in warm water and hold it to the face until the skin is damp.

Now take a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap, dip it in water and go over your face with the cake itself just as a man does with a shaving stick. Then dip your hands in warm water and with the tips of your fingers work up a lather from the soap left on your face. Rub this cleansing lather into the pores of your skin, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse very thoroughly with warm water, then with cold. Unless your skin is sensitive, rub your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice.

The first time you use this treatment you will realize the change it is going to make in your skin! Use it persistently and in ten days or two weeks your skin should show a marked improvement—a promise of that freshness and charm which the daily use of Woodbury's will bring.

Keep floors free from infectious dirt

As a housewife, you use every precaution to destroy the menace of disease that dust from the street brings into your home. In the cracks of the floors and woodwork, street-dust leaves contagion to breed. You know that mere soap or cleaning preparations make floors and woodwork clean only to the eye.

Do not expose children who play on the floor to the contagion that lurks in cracks and crannies.

Protect the health of your family

Fight disease with Sylpho-Nathol, the sure disinfectant for waste-pipes, garbage-cans and scrubbing. In your mopping and scrubbing always put a tablespoonful of this powerful disinfectant in the pail.

Take no chances in choosing your disinfectant. U. S. Government Bulletin No. 82 points out that many widely sold disinfectants have no more germ-killing value than water.

Use Sylpho-Nathol. It is a germ-killer three and a half times stronger than the U. S. Public Health Service standard. It is entirely safe. New England housewives have been using it for more than thirty years.

The great hospitals of New England use it constantly. Let your home profit by their choice.

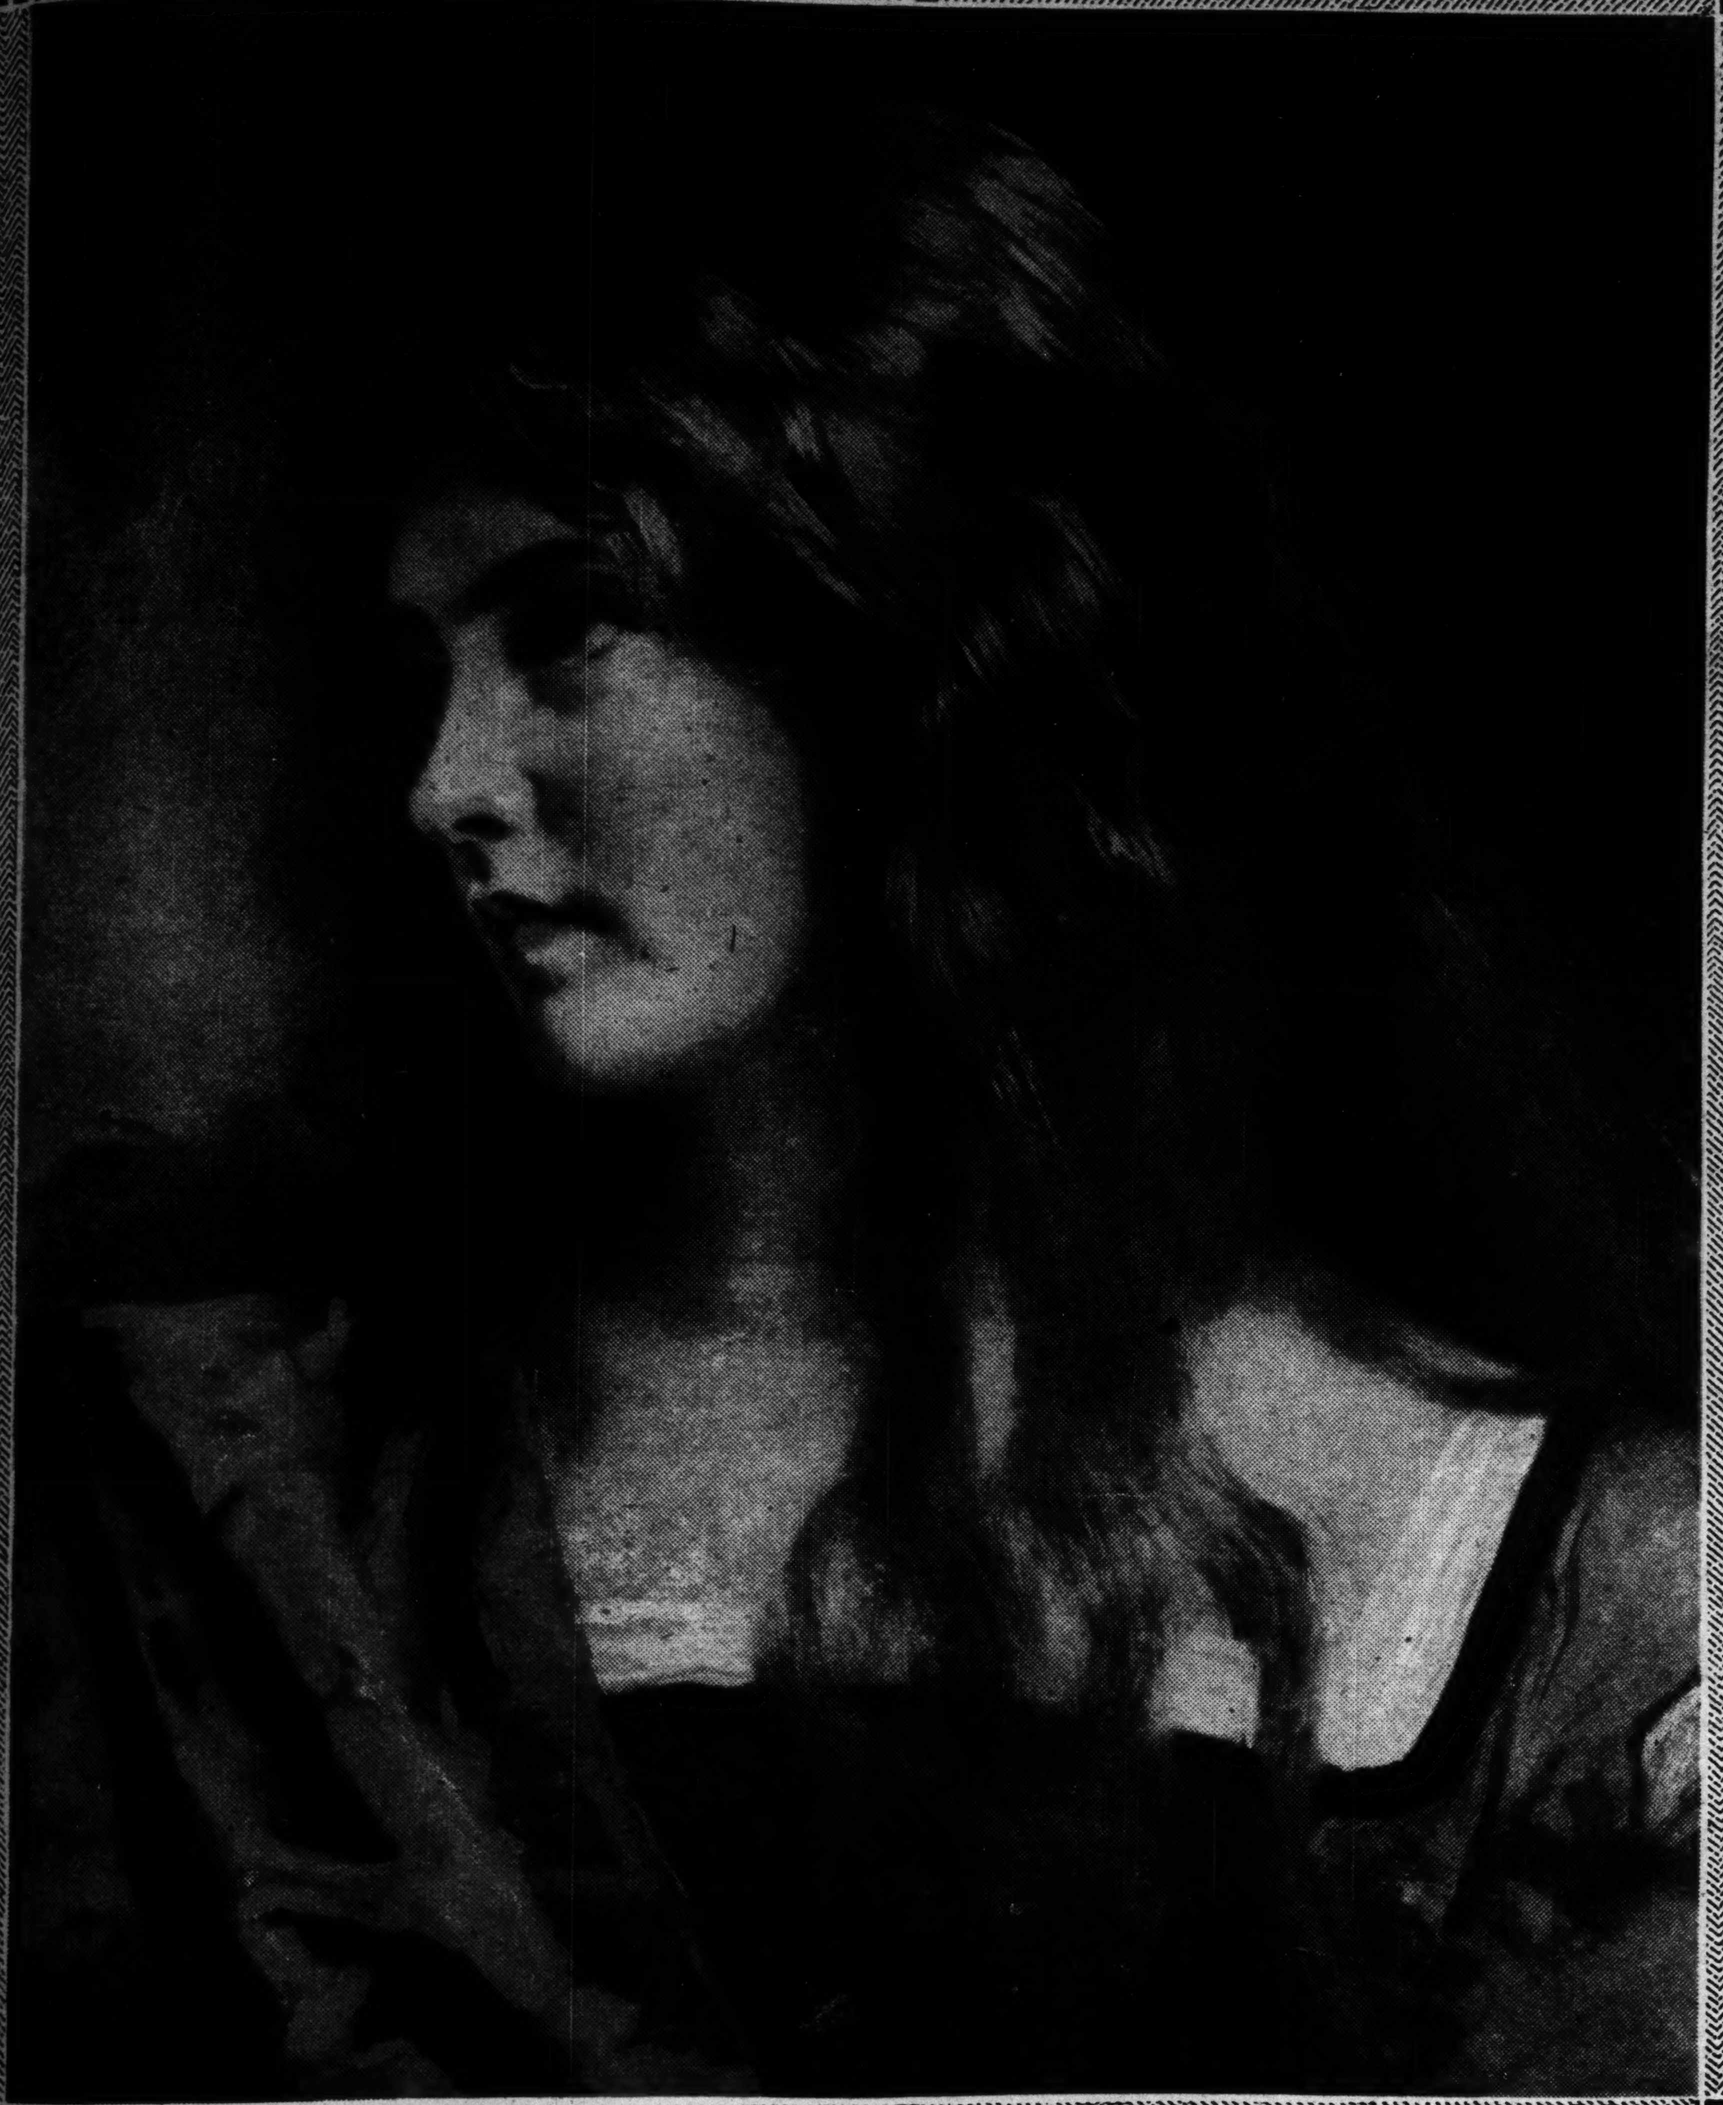
"Young Woman" ✖ ✖ ✖ ✖ BY JEAN · GUSTAVE · JACQUET



BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"Young Woman," by Jean G. Jacquet. Hanging in the Nickerson Collection of Modern Oil Paintings, Art Institute of Chicago. (1846-1909), 13x10 inches.

IN russet and gold, masterfully simple, Jacquet has pictured here a girl whose face charmingly defines a mobile, dainty, natural type. If it is destitute of much feeling, youth offers the excuse, and the years alone can measure the soul in the eyes and reveal the gamut of its possibilities.

There are no decorations, no dramatic adornments, nothing save the marvelous wealth of the hair and the vivid freshness of the flesh. Chastely fascinating, she charms through the natural gifts of beauty bequeathed her, and, like most of Jacquet's women, pleases rather than dazzles.

The image of woman always occupied an important place in this artist's work. He traveled the wide world over and painted scenes of battles in which he participated and stirring historical events in which he too played a part. But the pictures in which he excelled were his pictures of women, and he embellished them all with the graces his fancy imagined.

In his painting "Jeanne d' Arc Praying for France," which he exhibited in Paris in 1878, he struck the high water mark of his popularity, although later critics have preferred other paintings and the public of today pays greater prices for his portrait pieces.

This picture of the "Young Woman" has always been a favorite with the Art institute visitors. Copies of it have sold widely and may be had in different sizes. The 25 cent size is the most popular, and the vivid coloring of the original painting is excellently reproduced.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

CAPTIVATING MARY CARSTAIRS

SYNOPSIS.

Elbert Carstairs, capitalist, estranged from his wife in his old age, longs for the companionship of his daughter Mary, who lives with Mrs. Carstairs at Hunston-on-the-Hudson. The child refuses to come and visit him. Mrs. Carstairs refuses to force her to do so, and hence old Carstairs engages Larry Varney to take the Carstairs yacht up the Hudson and kidnap Mary, who Varney believes is but 12. Varney gets the help of Peter Maginnis in the venture. Three days after the start is made. On the way up the river the name of the yacht, Cypriani, is erased to throw reporters off the track. Arriving at Hunston, the two ally themselves with Hare, a campaigner for reform against the dictatorship of Boss Ryan. Ryan so completely dominates the town that the reform people are denied the use of public halls. Varney is accused by Coligny Smith, owner of the Gazette, which is under Ryan's thumb, of being Ferris Stanhope, author of pink tea literature, and is advised to leave town unless he wants trouble. The same evening Varney, fleeing from a heavy rainstorm, takes shelter in a cottage—and finds a strange young woman there. She proves to be Mary Carstairs. Further, she accuses him of being Stanhope. Varney learns through a magazine article the reason why he is accused of being Stanhope. It seems from the article that Stanhope is about to return to Hunston, from which he had fled months before after escapades with several girls. Maginnis has also found adventure plotting to "steal" Boss Ryan's big political meeting and turn it to one for Hare and reform. Varney and Maginnis become aware of a mysterious stranger who followed them when they first came to town, and who is continually on their trail. They suspect him of being a secret spy of Boss Ryan. Varney is accused again of being Stanhope, and advised to leave town. Maginnis, true to his promise, steals Boss Ryan's meeting after first kidnaping Ryan. Varney gets Mary Carstair's promise that she will dine on the Cypriani the following Thursday.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

THE FIGHT BEGINS.

TWO hours later Varney rose from his seat, at once marveling over the splendor of Peter's coup and bewildered by the blaze of publicity which it had turned upon his comrade and co-schemer. The well laid plans had carried through to brilliant success, and Ryan's meeting had been converted into a triumph for Ryan's deadly enemy J. Pinkney Hare.

The candidate had sat unobtrusively down in the audience with his friend Miss Carstairs and the child Jenny—spectators all: that was the way they had arranged it. Peter, on the contrary, sat in the great white light of a front seat on the stage, where he had masterfully intruded himself in the galaxy of "other prominent citizens." And sure enough, when the set speeches were over, it was the honorable chairman who presented "a Mr. Maginnis of New York" to the meeting, doubtless having been satisfactorily convinced beforehand that it was to his advantage to do so. But, doubtless also convinced that there would be an accounting to his master for this night's work, he rose to his duty only after Mr. Maginnis had glared at him through a noticeable stage wait, and then made the introduction as prejudicial as he dared.

Mr. Maginnis did not appear disconcerted in the least. He began speaking with a pertinence and ease which rather surprised his friend Varney down in the audience, and with words which instantly let the dullest know that something unusual was taking place. However, he had not proceeded far when, the house having become very still, he was suddenly interrupted by a sharp hiss from the rear of the hall and a raucous voice which shouted:

"Sit down, you! Nobody wants yer!"

Laughter followed and various murmurs, some approving, a few protesting. Ryan's good and faithful servants were evidently settling down to work.

Peter's eye roved over the audience, seemed to catch something, and lit up with a faint signal.

"The gentleman who made that remark," he said in tones of great gentleness, "will kindly leave the hall at once."

A ripple of merriment ran through the crowd, breaking in many places into ostentatious guffaws. To those who knew the underside of those meetings the mild request appeared so ineffectual as to be merely ridiculous. The honorable chairman, on the stage, hid a sinister smile behind his hand.

Then a strange thing happened. Four "ushers" moved silently down the side aisle, halted at the end of the sixth row from the rear, laid hands upon an angry and wriggling little man who screamed to high heaven that he hadn't done nothing, and dropped him out of the open window, which was just five feet above the ground.

It was rather a clean cut piece of work, the moral effect of which was in no wise weakened by the strong probability that they had ejected the wrong man. It proved the turning point in the evening's proceedings. Ryanism seemed paralyzed by the mysterious absence of its chief, and a few further essays by the faithful, more and more half hearted in their nature, made it plain that the control of that meeting had passed into other hands. Peter, apologizing for the little interruption, told simply but vividly how, coming to Hunston a stranger, he had instantly seen that something was badly wrong with the town; how he had looked about at the dirty streets, the dead business, the empty stores, the good men idling, the good wives suffering for the money that streamed into the big red saloon——

"That's right!" called a shrill, scared woman's voice. "That's right, mister!"

"No!" Peter answered steadily. "It's the wrongest thing that ever was—God help you poor women!"

Then a burst of hand clapping, unforced by the faithful hirelings from New York, ran unexpectedly through the house.

Peter told how easy it had been to find out what was choking the life out of Hunston. His open countenance, democratic manners, and pungent speech produced a most favorable impression, and it was undeniable that, for the moment at least, he had the house with him when he swung into his peroration.

"You know we are told," he said, "that it is the truth that makes us free. Well, you are going to hear the truth tonight at last. There is a man listening to me at this moment who knows everything there is to be known. Like me, he has no ax to grind, no special interest to promote, no ambition but the manly wish to loose this town from the bonds with which a dishonest boss has shackled it. He has sacrificed much to the hope that he might help you, and for months he has been fighting against big odds, just to get a chance to tell you the facts. Tonight he has got his chance, and you may be very sure that he will make the most of it.

"Relieving your honorable chairman of the trouble of rising for the purpose, I take pleasure in introducing to you Mr. J. Pinkney Hare, who is, with your consent, the next mayor of Hunston."

Back in the center of the house a foot scraped upon the floor, and there was J. Pinkney Hare standing out in the aisle, his little black bag stuffed with documents swinging in his hand. And then there arose, to the surprise of everybody (barring those good fellows who had been well paid for their work and were earnestly determined to earn it) a deafening roar of applause, starting in the rear of the house, taken up at certain definite points all through it, and gradually spreading almost everywhere, many people joining in because they liked Peter greatly and others without having any idea why. The roar subsided a little as Hare drew near to the stage, mounted it, and deposited his little bag upon the table. Then it broke again, more loudly, as he came forward a step, looking out upon the crowded house—he who could not hire a hall for himself—a little pale, a little awed by the bigness of his chance, but with neither tremor nor uncertainty on his small, cool face. . . .

Hare spoke for an hour and a half, and not a soul left the hall. It was impossible to call him off or cry him down: the plain sentiment of the house was, "Give the little man his show." Afterward Chairman Bates had made a desperate effort to overcome the damning effects of that address, calling on various Ryanites of aggressive manners, and making a second speech himself, but with little avail. Even the free fight which broke out during the distribution of the ice cream of the Neapolitans (the announcement of which addition to the regular menu evoked the loudest spontaneous applause of the evening) resulted, until the police checked it, decidedly in favor of the strangers from New York.

This part of the evening's pleasures Varney did not see. He rose with many others when the published tidings of refreshment gave notice that the speechmaking was over and turned his face toward the door against a stream of ushers entering with alluring trays. Already all sense of the daring brilliance of Peter's stroke had faded and dropped from his mind. His own concerns crowded instantly upon his attention, and all his thought was of finding Mary Carstairs immediately and compelling her to recognize him for the man he was.

She, too, had risen to leave the hall. While he listened to the fierce philippic of J. Pinkney Hare Varney's eye had carefully marked her seat: it was empty now. Once, as he pushed his way slowly toward the door, he caught a brief glimpse of her over in the other aisle, some distance ahead of him, but he hardly saw her before she was lost to him again, swallowed up in the jostling throng. The theater was in an uproar: all was noise and bustle and movement. And the wide lobby, when at length he reached it, was no better; it looked scarcely more promising to his quest than the traditional haystack to the searcher of needles.

Here were set the ice cream freezers and the other paraphernalia of delight, and about them was a struggling mob. Varney circled the throng with a roving eye. Of the lady he saw no sign anywhere. But presently, on the outer fringe of the cohorts which stormed the freezers, he came upon the child Jenny, and knew that he had found a guide according to his heart's desire.

He touched her on the elbow. "Do you want to get some ice cream?"

She turned her homely little face up toward him and said shyly:

"Yes, sir. But they won't let me get near. And they say the chocolate is going fast."

"They'll let me get near," said Varney heartily. "Chocolate is it, then? Lemonade, of course. And a thought of the cake with icing, shall we say? Good But you're not here alone, are you?"

"No, sir. I'm here with Miss Mary—over there in that corner."

"Well, you just run over there with her and wait. Trust everything here to me."

He emerged from the ruck a few moments later, disheveled but triumphant. Hat under his arm and both hands heavily laden, he made a gingerly progress to the place of his tryst, a comparatively unpopulated corner near the door. And there she stood, her comely youth brought into sharp relief by her surroundings, side by side with the living hunger and thirst of Jenny, whose yearning eyes summoned the young man like a beacon.

Miss Carstairs happened to be looking in another direction. Varney standing before her, calmly took up their acquaintance where he had left it last night at her mother's gate.

"Good evening, Miss Carstairs. I bear refreshment for your little friend. What a magnificent evening for Hare and reform, isn't it?"

She turned, startled at the sound of his voice, looked at him, and looked at once away.

"O . . . yes, indeed. I—am waiting for Mr. Hare now. Jenny, are you sure you haven't seen him come out?"

"Yessum," said Jenny, her eyes all for the tall stranger. Unable to resist their imploring appeal, he turned at once and delivered his burden.

"Ice cream—lemonade—," he made inventory—"cake with icing—tin spoon—paper napkin in my pocket. Is there anything else?"

"I think," said Jenny, conscientiously, "there's figs."

"You do not wish any figs tonight, Jenny," declared Miss Carstairs, rather more severely than mere figs seemed to warrant.

"No'm! I thought maybe he might want some."

"I doubt if I'll take any figs tonight either," laughed Varney. "But mayn't I get something for you, Miss Carstairs? I'm happy to say that the chocolate is holding out better than we feared."

"Thank you," she said, apparently addressing the child, "I don't believe I wish anything."

Jenny here produced and handed around a small, rather dangerous looking paper bag, which proved, upon investigation, to contain marshmallows. Miss Carstairs declined. Varney, to show how unimpeachable he considered his standing with the party, gratefully accepted.

"I'm afraid," he said, looking at Miss Carstairs, "that Mr. Hare's admirers are likely to detain him some time. If you don't care to wait so long, perhaps you would again give me the pleasure of supplanting him and taking you home—you and Miss—Miss Jenny."

"No, thank you—I am sure he will be out soon. . . . You look awfully trampled on and—mashed, Jenny," she continued, twitching the child's hat on straight. "And my dear! Don't eat so fast."

Despite himself, Varney felt his blood rising a little. "Miss Carstairs," he said slowly, "I must tell you that I came with Miss Jenny on purpose to see you. There is something that I wanted to say."

She raised her eyes then, and, though their look was very young and embarrassed, he felt himself lose something of his composure under it.

"You wanted to say something—to me?"

"A good deal. I have an explanation to make—"

"I'm afraid that I have not time to listen—Mr. Hare—"

"You must listen—to be fair," he said slowly. "I have to blame myself for it, but you are doing me an injustice at this moment. I am not—that man."

She made no answer. Beside them, Miss Jenny ate ice cream succulently. All around them were people jostling this way and that, laughing, shouting: but they might have been alone on a mountain top for all either was aware of them.

"Since I have been in Hunston—just a day," Varney said easily, "I seem to have done nothing but explain over and over that I am not Mr. Stanhope. I got awfully tired of it, Miss Carstairs, it seemed so horribly useless. Like the others, you insisted that I was he. You candidly didn't believe me—"

"No," she said, "that is true."

"I shall make you believe me now," said Varney.

A great hullabaloo suddenly arose around them. Four or five men broke pellmell, and for the most part backwards, out of the swing doors, evidently ejected from within. A lonely looking policeman, on guard at the entrance, charged them. The lobby was already thronged; now people retreating before that violent infusion of arms and legs crowded them close.

Varney, standing in front of Miss Carstairs, shielded her from the press, her capable buffer. Soon he noticed that that part of the wall upon which she leaned was not a wall, but a door. He reached past her, turned the knob, revealed a brilliantly lit little room.

"Ah! . . . A haven, Miss Carstairs."

She stepped backward, into the tiny box office where Ryan had stood two hours before and cynically waited for his sport to begin. It was empty now, offering a perfect refuge. Varney followed and stood with his hand on the knob just inside the door.

"Thank you," said Miss Carstairs, breathing a little rapidly. "The meetings have never been as bad as this before. But—I must not lose sight of Jenny."

"I'm here, Miss Mary," gurgled an ice creamy voice at the door.

"I think I had better wait outside after all," said Mary. "Mr. Hare will hardly know where to look for me."

"Miss Jenny will be his clew; he couldn't miss her," said Varney. "Let me go on, while I have time. Miss Carstairs, it is not fair to either of us to let matters stay like this. In the cottage last night you forced me to let you think I was—another man—"

"That is absurd," she said. "How could I possibly force you to say what was not—the fact?"

"Did I really say anything that was not—the fact? I tried particularly not to. But I did let you deceive yourself about it: that is quite true and I'm sorry. I did it because—well, because if I hadn't done it, you were not going to let me walk home with you."

She leaned against the little desk at which the academy man sat to sell tickets and hesitated, almost imperceptibly. "Then why," she asked, "should you wish to undeceive me now?"

"You know why," he answered. "If I don't, something tells me that you are not going to speak to me any more."

Her silence conceded the truth of this. It began to be evident how difficult he had made matters for himself.

Varney laughed. "I am determined to make you believe me, yet just how am I to go about it? It's rather an absurd position when you come to think of it—this arguing with somebody as to who one is. Suppose I were that fellow, Miss Carstairs. How could I possibly hope to come back to my old home town and persuade people to believe that I am somebody else?"

Her eyes had wandered out through the little grated window and she made no reply. "You see how preposterous that would be. A mere resemblance is not enough to condemn a man upon, Miss Carstairs."

She turned her head with a sudden gesture of annoyance. "What difference can it possibly make whether I speak to you or not, Mr. St—"

"Don't!" he interrupted swiftly. "You know my name. You shall not call me by that one."

Hare's neat pink face appeared at the ticket window, for all the world like a belated theatergoer, anxious for several in the orchestra.

"Ah, Mary! There you are! Whenever you are ready—"

"I have been waiting for you a long time," said Miss Carstairs. "It was so splendid, Mr. Hare! Is Jenny there? We'll go at once."

She turned to Varney, cool as a dewy rose, and came forward a short step. "I—I must say this before I go: has no one told you that you are in danger here?"

Under her tone and her look his plan of being the easy master of the situation grew increasingly difficult. "Everybody has told me," he said rather shortly. "It's gotten to be a bore."

"Then—won't you—won't you please go away before—anything happens?"

"I am going on Thursday afternoon," he answered, stung by her beauty, which was so remote, and by the sudden compassion in her voice. "My engagements will keep me here till that day, you remember? I promise you, since you are so good as to interest yourself in the matter, that I shall leave Hunston directly after that—"

"Your engagements on Thursday?" she repeated, looking away. "Are—you speaking of—"

"The luncheon on my yacht. We are inviting Mr. Hare and his sister to meet you."

"I am sorry," began Miss Carstairs, not looking at him, "but—I—I find that I shall n—"

"Er—Mary?" said the candidate's voice through the window.

She turned toward the door at once, as though welcoming a summons which so opportunely relieved her from embarrassing explanations: but Varney, who happened to have duties to her father to discharge, stood before her, not moving.

"Just now in the theater," he said pleasantly, "you cut me. That was for him. I understood. But is there any valid reason why you should not stay on speaking terms with—Laurence Varney?"

To his surprise a vivid red swept up her face from throat to hair and her eyes fluttered and fell.

"Please," she said, "don't ask me to discuss this any more."

Varney stood aside, bowing, to let her pass out.

"I shall bring you proofs of my identity tomorrow, since that seems necessary," he said with a laugh. "You won't refuse to see me, if you care anything about being fair. But shall I tell you something, Miss Carstairs? In your heart you believe me now!"

At the outer door Varney all but collided with a man listlessly entering, and, glancing up, saw that it was the pale young editor, Coligny Smith.

"I hope you enjoyed the meeting," flung out Varney in passing.

"Why, greetings—greetings!" said Mr. Smith, a mocking smile on his thin lips. "I've just been out to buy your picture, Beany."

With which singular rejoinder he slipped by into the lobby.

J. Pinkney Hare lingered some time in the theater after Miss Carstairs joined him, enveloped in a heartening whirl of new popularity. To the candidate it seemed that his star had changed with stunning swiftness. His advance to the door had been a Roman progress; and when he finally reached the lobby he was still the focus of a coterie of enthusiasts who would not be shaken off. Here a new halt was made; new people surrounded him; more hand shakings and back slappings took place, and everything seemed merry as a marriage bell.

But Peter, coming out of the hall a moment after Varney had left, saw hovering about this intimate circle an elderly man of a faded exterior and shabby clothes, who wore a black felt hat pulled down over wary looking eyes. Even at that moment of splendid triumph Peter was annoyed to recognize in him the man Higginson, of whose too friendly interest in the candidate's doings he had complained to Varney a few hours earlier. Whether he was, in truth, the man who had followed them on the street the night before, he was not ready to make affidavit. But undoubtedly there was something furtive in the man's appearance and manner; and Peter, watching him from the door, was highly irritated to see Hare present the fellow to Miss Carstairs, who smiled on him as upon one or her friend's good friends.

"The sneak!" thought Peter. "I'll just drop him a quiet hint to butt out before he gets hurt."

But his "head usher" due to vanish back to New York by the ten forty-five claimed him just then for a business talk and when Peter had time to think of Mr. Higginson again he found that the man had disappeared.

Varney slept badly. The night was long, like art and the lanes that have no turning; and interludes punctuated it, now and again, when he lay wide eyed in his bunk, staring into the darkness. At these times without exception he thought how, early in the morning, he would climb the hill to the white house, blandly proffering letters to show that he was no cad, no cur, but Laurence Varney, whom ladies need not flee from as from the plague; suavely putting Uncle Elbert's daughter so utterly in the wrong that he himself would grow merciful toward her abashment, and sorry.

He fell asleep, woke again, rehearsed once more what he would say to her. At last he saw the dawn break along the horizon and the gray of a new day meet and mingle with the receding darkness. It was Wednesday. Tomorrow would be Thursday, and he could go away, his business done. The prospect was rich recompense for everything. It came to him, suddenly and for the first time, that he hated his mission in Hunston with a disheartening and sickening hatred. And formulating his thought, polishing it to aphorism and sharpening it to epigram, he slumbered and slept for the last time that night.

But on the heels of the morning came Peter, bursting in in his bath robe, a newspaper flaunting in his hand.

"O, you're awake, are you?" said he, looking very keen and wide awake himself. "Good! You'd hardly want to be dead to the world while this kind of thing is going on."

Varney, on an elbow, sleepily surprised at this vehemence, said: "What's up?"

"The jig!" cried Peter succinctly. "At least it looks that way. It's that rascal Smith."

"Please," she said, "don't ask me to discuss it any more."

He sat down on the edge of Varney's bunk, the folded newspaper in his hand, and continued: "I ran out before I was dressed to look at this contemptible Gazette, because I wanted to see how they handled the meeting last night. But the minute I picked it up I saw this, and—well, by George! Look at it!"

He whipped open the Gazette with a movement which all but shredded it and thrust it into Varney's hand. Varney sat up in bed and smoothed it out upon the coverlet.

Coligny Smith was clever and his eye ranged wide. He saw all the chances that there were, and what he saw he made the most of. For his front page "picture feature" that morning he had selected a two column half tone of a good looking, though not altogether pleasant faced, young man; and beneath it had indited in bold capitals which the most casual eye could not miss: "Mr. Ferris Stanhope, Author and Former Hunstonian, Who Has Just Arrived in Town."

"I see," said Varney, slowly. "Meaning me."

Beside the portrait ran a "story" which said in part:

"It leaked out yesterday that the 'mysterious stranger' who suddenly appeared off Hunston in an elegant private yacht on Monday night is none other than Ferris Stanhope, well known author of novels of the pink tea type. . . .

"Mr. Stanhope is a native of Hunston, and is well remembered here. As the result of certain escapades which need not be detailed in a home paper like the Gazette he left town, somewhat hurriedly, one night twelve years ago. Until Monday he has never been back since. The news of his arrival has not been received with general expressions of pleasure. Predictions were freely made about the streets yesterday that if certain old and respected citizens of Hunston should chance to meet the author trouble is sure to arise.

"Why Mr. Stanhope should have elected to come back to Hunston has not yet been ascertained. Some say that it is the result of a bet, friends having wagered that he would not venture to return for a month's stay here. These declare that he is using the yacht as base of operations to reconnoiter and determine whether it is safe to land. Color is lent to this theory by the pains which the distinguished author is taking to conceal his identity. The name of the yacht has been carefully erased, and he is using, it is said, an assumed name.

"The secret of Mr. Stanhope's identity came out too late last night for the Gazette to obtain an interview. With him on the yacht is a 'Mr. Maginnis,' representing himself as a wealthy New Yorker and a 'student of government.' Both gentlemen, it is said, are claimed as allies by Hunston's new 'reform party.'"

Peter broke out the moment Varney laid down the paper, but Varney, staring absently out of the porthole, did not listen. This, then, was the meaning of the pale young editor's enigmatical remark last night. Here was no idle malice. Diabolically resourceful and without shame, young Mr. Smith had circulated this lie to discredit reform and drive off its new champion. And this was the way that he, Varney, had kept the coming of the Cypriani quiet in Hunston!

"And think of the cursed bull luck of it!" cried Peter. "The most the rascal hoped to do was to ruin my plans for helping Hare by these dirty hints about both of us—at the best to scare us away from Hunston. He never dreamed that he was knocking the bottom out of any private plans of yours!"

Varney stretched and yawned. "Well, he isn't."

"Doubtless I am a stupid ass and all that," said Peter, staring, "but with the Gazette publishing it about the countryside that you are a yellow dog of the worst nature I don't grasp how you expect Miss Carstairs to come on this yacht and lunch with you."

A knock sounded on the stateroom door, and McTosh entered, announcing two telegrams for Mr. Varney.

Varney, wondering a little who had known his whereabouts, took the yellow envelopes, nodded to the steward not to wait, broke them open, read the typewritten words within, read them again.

Then he looked up and found Peter gazing at him more or less expectantly.

Varney laughed. "Do you remember that night at the club my saying to you, as a great inducement: 'Suppose the New York papers get on to this'?"

Peter nodded.

Varney handed him the yellow slips; then he arose and pushed the service button.

"McTosh," he said, "send to town at once and get me copies of the Sun, the Times, the Daily, and the Herald—all the New York papers. No, go yourself, and don't stay longer than is absolutely necessary."

Peter meantime, with a heart beating as it had not beat the night before when he had overthrown Ryan and stolen his meeting, was reading the following:

"Daily story has got us all guessing. If it's really you, what the devil are you up to, anyway? R. E. TOWNES."

The other was in a similar vein:

"Alarming story in Daily today. Absolute secrecy a prerequisite as explained. Reporters tried to reach me tonight. Trust you fully, but implore you to proceed with utmost caution. ELBERT CARSTAIRS."

"The plot thickens," said Peter when Varney turned back, "till I, for one, can't see the drift. However—you've sent for the Daily?"

Varney nodded. "I told him to get three or four others, too, for a blind."

"Politics," said Peter, in his calmest fighting manner, "is all off. I'm not the least interested in it. We'll give the morning to studying yellow journalism. But about Miss Carstairs. How can you possibly——"

"By heaven," said Varney, with a sudden burst of anger, "I'll make her know who I am if I have to drag in her own mother to introduce me."

The WIFE OF A KING by Jack London

"One Rifle, One Blanket, Twenty Bottles of Hooch. Rifle Broke"—That Was the Purchase Price of This Princess Whose Husband Had to Be Taught Her Value.

ONCE, when the northland was very young, the social and civic virtues were remarkable alike for their paucity and their simplicity. When the burden of domestic duties grew grievous, and the fireside mood expanded to a constant protest against its bleak loneliness, the adventurers from the southland, in lieu of better, paid the stipulated prices and took unto themselves native wives. It was a foretaste of paradise to the women, for it must be confessed that the white rovers gave far better care and treatment to them than did their Indian copartners. Of course, the white men themselves were satisfied with such deals, as were also the Indian men, for that matter. Having sold their daughters and sisters for cotton blankets and obsolete rifles, and traded their warm furs for flimsy calico and bad whisky, the sons of the soil promptly and cheerfully succumbed to quick consumption and other swift diseases correlated with the blessings of a superior civilization.

It was in these days of Arcadian simplicity that Cal Galbraith journeyed through the land and fell sick on the lower river. It was a refreshing advent in the lives of the good Sisters of the Holy Cross, who gave him shelter and medicine; though they little dreamed of the hot elixir infused into his veins by the touch of their soft hands and their gentle ministrations. Cal Galbraith became troubled with strange thoughts, which clamored for attention till he laid eyes on the mission girl, Madeline. Yet he gave no sign, biding his time patiently. He strengthened with the coming spring, and when the sun rode the heavens in a golden circle, and the joy and throb of life were in all the land, he gathered his still weak body together and departed.

Now, Madeline, the mission girl, was an orphan. Her white father had failed to give a bald faced grizzly the trail one day, and had died quickly. Then her Indian mother, having no man to fill the winter cache, had tried the hazardous experiment of waiting till the salmon run on fifty pounds of flour and half as many of bacon. After that the baby, Chook-ra, went to live with the good sisters, and to be thenceforth known by another name.

But Madeline still had kinsfolk, the nearest being a dissolute uncle who outraged his vitals with inordinate quantities of the white man's whisky. He strove daily to walk with the gods, and incidentally his feet sought shorter trails to the grave. When sober he suffered exquisite torture. He had no conscience. To this ancient vagabond Cal Galbraith duly presented himself, and they consumed many words and much tobacco in the conversation that followed. Promises were also made; and in the end the old heathen took a few pounds of dried salmon and his birch bark canoe and paddled away to the Mission of the Holy Cross.

It is not given the world to know what promises he made and what lies he told—the sisters never gossip; but when he returned upon his swarthy chest there was a brass crucifix, and in his canoe his niece Madeline. That night there was a grand wedding and a potlach; so that for two days to follow there was no fishing done by the village. But in the morning Madeline shook the dust of the lower river from her moccasins, and with her husband, in a poling boat, went to live on the upper river in a place known as the lower country. And in the years which followed she was a good wife, sharing her husband's hardships and cooking his food. And she kept him in straight trails, till he learned to save his dust and to work mightily. In the end he struck it rich and built a cabin in Circle City; and his happiness was such that men who came to visit him in his home circle became restless at the sight of it and envied him greatly.

But the northland began to mature, and social amenities to make their appearance. Hitherto, the southland had sent forth its sons; but it now belched forth a new exodus, this time of its daughters. Sisters and wives they were not; but they did not fail to put new ideas in the heads of the men, and to elevate the tone of things in ways peculiarly their own. No more did the squaws gather at the dances, go roaring down the center in the good old Virginia reels, or make merry with jolly "Dan Tucker." They fell back on their native stoicism, and uncomplainingly watched the rule of their white sisters from the cabins.

Then another exodus came over the mountains from the prolific southland. This time it was of women that became mighty in the land. Their word was law; their law was steel. They frowned upon the Indian wives, while the other women became mild and walked humbly. There were cowards who became ashamed of their ancient covenants with the daughters of the soil, who looked with a new distaste upon their dark skinned children; but there were also others—men—who remained true and proud of their aboriginal vows. When it became the fashion to divorce the native wives Cal Galbraith retained his manhood, and in so doing felt the heavy hand of the women who had come last, knew least, but who ruled the land.

One day the upper country, which lies far above Circle City, was pronounced rich. Dog teams carried the news to salt water; golden argosies freighted the lure across the north Pacific; wires and cables sang with the tidings; and the world heard for the first time of the Klondike river and the Yukon country.

Cal Galbraith had lived the years quietly. He had been a good husband to Madeline, and she had blessed him. But somehow discontent fell upon him; he felt vague yearnings for his own kind, for the life he had been shut out from—a general sort of desire, which men sometimes feel, to break out and taste the prime of living. Besides, there drifted down the river wild rumors of the wonderful Eldorado, glowing descriptions of the city of logs and tents, and ludicrous accounts of the che-cha-quas who had rushed in and were stampeding the whole country. Circle City was dead. The world had moved on up river and become a new and most marvelous world.

Cal Galbraith grew restless on the edge of things, and wished to see with his own eyes. So, after the washup, he weighed in a couple of hundred pounds of dust on the company's big scales, and took a draft for the same on Dawson. Then he put Tom Dixon in charge of his mines, kissed Madeline good-by, promised to be back before the first mush ice ran, and took passage on an up river steamer.

Madeline waited—waited through all the three months of daylight. She fed the dogs, gave much of her time to young Cal, watched the short summer fade away and the sun begin its long journey to the south. And she prayed much in the manner of the Sisters of the Holy Cross. The fall came, and with it there was mush ice on the Yukon, and Circle City kings returning to the winter's work at their mines, but no Cal Galbraith. Tom Dixon received a letter, however, for his men sledded up her winter's supply of dry pine. The company received a letter, for its dog teams filled her cache with their best provisions, and she was told that her credit was limitless.

Through all the ages man has been held the chief instigator of the woes of woman; but in this case the men held their tongues and swore harshly at one of their number who was away, while the women failed utterly to emulate them. So, without needless delay, Madeline heard strange tales of Cal Galbraith's doings; also of a certain Greek dancer who played with men as children did with bubbles. Now, Madeline was an Indian woman, and, further, she had no woman friend to whom to go for wise counsel. She prayed and planned by turns, and that night, being quick of resolve and action, she harnessed the dogs, and, with young Cal securely lashed to the sled, stole away.

Though the Yukon still ran free, the eddying ice was growing, and each day saw the river dwindling to a slushy thread. Save him who has done the like, no man may know what she endured in traveling a hundred miles on the rim ice; nor may they understand the toil and hardship of breaking the two hundred miles of packed ice which remained after the river froze for good. But Madeline was an Indian woman, so she did these things, and one night there came a knock at Malemute Kid's door. Thereat he fed a team of starving dogs, put a healthy youngster to bed, and turned his attention to an exhausted woman. He removed her ice bound moccasins while he listened to her tale, and stuck the point of his knife into her feet, that he might see how far they were frozen.

Despite his tremendous virility, Malemute Kid was possessed of a softer, womanly element which could win the confidence of a snarling wolf dog or draw confessions from the most wintry heart. Nor did he seek them. Hearts opened to him as spontaneously as flowers to the sun. Even the priest, Father Roubeau, had been known to confess to him, while the men and women of the northland were ever knocking at his door—a door from which the latchstring hung always out. To Madeline he could do no wrong, make no mistake. She had known him from the time she first cast her lot among the people of her father's race; and to her half barbaric mind it seemed that in him was centered the wisdom of the ages, that between his vision and the future there could be no intervening veil.

There were false ideals in the land. The social strictures of Dawson were not synonymous with those of the previous era, and the swift maturity of the northland involved much wrong. Malemute Kid was aware of this, and he had Cal Galbraith's measure accurately. He knew a hasty word was the father of much evil; besides, he was minded to teach a great lesson and bring shame upon the man. So Stanley Prince, the young mining expert, was called into the conference the following night, as was also Lucky Jack Harrington and his violin. That same night Bettles, who owed a great debt to Malemute Kid, harnessed up Cal Galbraith's dogs, lashed Cal Galbraith Jr. to the sled, and slipped away in the dark for Stuart river.

II.

"So; one—two—three, one—two—three. Now reverse! No, no! Start up again, Jack. See—this way." Prince executed the movement as one should who has led the cotillon.

"Now; one—two—three, one—two—three. Reverse! Ah! that's better. Try it again. I say, you know, you mustn't look at your feet. One—two—three, one—two—three. Shorter steps! You are not hanging to the gee pole just now. Try it over. There! that's the way. One—two—three, one—two—three."

Round and round went Prince and Madeline in an interminable waltz. The table and stools had been shoved over against the wall to increase the room. Malemute Kid sat on the bunk, chin to knees, greatly interested. Jack Harrington sat beside him, scraping away on his violin and following the dancers.

It was a unique situation, the undertaking of these three men with the woman. The most pathetic part, perhaps, was the businesslike way in which they went about it. No athlete was ever trained more rigidly for a coming contest, nor wolf dog for the harness, than was she. But they had good material, for Madeline, unlike most women of her race, in her childhood had escaped the carrying of heavy burdens and the toil of the trail. Besides, she was a clean limbed, willowy creature, possessed of much grace which had not hitherto been realized. It was this grace which the men strove to bring out and knock into shape.

"Trouble with her, she learned to dance all wrong," Prince remarked to the bunk, after having deposited his breathless pupil on the table. "She's quick at picking up; yet I could do better had she never danced a step. But say, Kid, I can't understand this." Prince imitated a peculiar movement of the shoulders and head—a weakness Madeline suffered from in walking.

"Lucky for her she was raised in the mission," Malemute Kid answered. "Packing, you know—the head strap. Other Indian women have it bad, but she didn't do any packing till after she married, and then only at first. Saw hard lines with that husband of hers. They went through the Forty Mile famine together."

"But can we break it?"

"Don't know. Perhaps long walks with her trainers will make the riffle. Anyway, they'll take it out some, won't they, Madeline?"

The girl nodded assent. If Malemute Kid, who knew all things, said so, why, it was so. That was all there was about it.

She had come over to them, anxious to begin again. Harrington surveyed her in quest of her points, much in the same manner men do horses. It certainly was not disappointing, for he asked with sudden interest, "What did that beggarly uncle of yours get, anyway?"

"One rifle, one blanket, twenty bottles of hooch. Rifle broke." She said this last scornfully, as though disgusted at how low her maiden value had been rated.

She spoke fair English, with many peculiarities of her husband's speech, but there was still perceptible the Indian accent, the traditional groping after strange gutturals. Even this her instructors had taken in hand, and with no small success, too.

At the next intermission Prince discovered a new predicament.

"I say, Kid," he said, "we're wrong, all wrong. She can't learn in moccasins. Put her feet into slippers, and then on to that waxed floor—phew!"

Madeline raised a foot and regarded her shapeless house moccasin dubiously. In previous winters, both at Circle City and Forty Mile, she had danced many a night away with similar footgear, and there had been nothing the matter. But now—well, if there was anything wrong, it was for Malemute Kid to know, not her.

But Malemute Kid did know, and he had a good eye for measures; so he put on his cap and mittens and went down the hill to pay Mrs. Eppingwell a call. Her husband, Clove Eppingwell, was prominent in the community as one of the great government officials. The Kid had noted her slender little foot one night at the governor's ball. And as he also knew her to be as sensible as she was pretty, it was no task to ask of her a certain small favor.

On his return, Madeline withdrew for a moment to the inner room. When she reappeared Prince was startled.

"By Jove!" he gasped. "Who'd 'a' thought it! The little witch! Why, my sister——"

"Is an English girl," interrupted Malemute Kid, "with an English foot. This girl comes of a small footed race. Moccasins just broadened her feet healthily, while she did not misshape them by running with the dogs in her childhood."

But this explanation failed utterly to allay Prince's admiration. Harrington's commercial instinct was touched, and as he looked upon the exquisitely turned foot and ankle there ran through his mind the sordid list—"one rifle, one blanket, twenty bottles of hooch."

Madeline was the wife of a king, a king whose yellow treasure could buy outright a score of fashion's puppets; yet in all her life her feet had known no gear save red tanned moose hide. At first she looked in awe at the tiny white satin slippers; but she quickly understood the admiration which shone, manlike, in the eyes of the men. Her face flushed with pride. For the moment she was drunken with her woman's loveliness; then she murmured, with increased scorn, "And one rifle, broke!"

So the training went on. Every day Malemute Kid led the girl out on long walks devoted to the correction of her carriage and the shortening of her stride. There was little likelihood of her identity being discovered, for Cal Galbraith and the rest of the old timers were like lost children among the many strangers who had rushed into the land. Besides, the frost of the north has a bitter tongue, and the tender women of the south, to shield their cheeks from its biting caresses, were prone to the use of canvas masks. With faces obscured and bodies lost in squirrel skin parkas, a mother and a daughter, meeting on trail, would pass as strangers.

The coaching progressed rapidly. At first it had been slow, but later a sudden acceleration had manifested itself. This began from the moment Madeline tried on the white satin slippers, and in so doing found herself. The pride of her renegade father, apart from any natural self-esteem she might possess, at that instant received its birth.

Hitherto she had deemed herself a woman of an alien breed, of inferior stock, purchased by her lord's favor. Her husband had seemed to her a god who had lifted her, through no essential virtues on her part, to his own godlike level. But she had never forgotten, even when young Cal was born, that she was not of his people. As he had been a god, so had his womankind been goddesses. She might have contrasted herself with them, but she had never compared. It might have been that familiarity bred contempt; however, be that as it may, she had ultimately come to understand these roving white men, and to weigh them. True, her mind was dark to deliberate analysis, but she yet possessed her woman's clarity of vision in such matters.

On the night of the slippers she had measured the bold, open admiration of her three man friends; and for the first time comparison had suggested itself. It was only a foot and an ankle, but—but comparison could not, in the nature of things, cease at that point. She judged herself by their standards till the divinity of her white sisters was shattered. After all, they were only women, and why should she not exalt herself to their place? In doing these things she learned where she lacked, and with the knowledge of her weakness came her strength. And so mightily did she strive that her three trainers often marveled late into the night over the eternal mystery of woman.

In this way Thanksgiving night drew near. At irregular intervals Bettles sent word down from Stuart river regarding the welfare of young Cal. The time of their return was approaching. More than once a casual caller, hearing dance music and the rhythmic pulse of feet, entered, only to find Harrington scraping away and the other two beating time or arguing noisily over a moot step. Madeline was never in evidence, having precipitately fled to the inner room.

On one of these nights Cal Galbraith dropped in. Encouraging news had just come down from Stuart river, and Madeline had surpassed herself—not in walk alone, and carriage and grace, but in womanly roguishness. They had indulged in sharp repartee, and she had defended herself brilliantly; and then, yielding to the intoxication of the moment, and of her own power, she had bullied, and mastered, and wheedled, and patronized them with most astonishing success. And instinctively, involuntarily, they had bowed, not to her beauty, her wisdom, her wit,—but to that indefinable something in woman to which man yields yet cannot name. The room was dizzy with sheer delight as she and Prince whirled through the last dance of the evening. Harrington was throwing in inconceivable flourishes, while Malemute Kid, utterly abandoned, had seized the broom and was executing mad gyrations on his own account.

At this instant the door shook with a heavy rap-rap, and their quick glances noted the lifting of the latch. But they had survived similar situations before. Harrington never broke a note. Madeline shot through the waiting door to the inner room. The broom went hurtling under the bunk, and by the time Cal Galbraith and Louis Savoy got their heads in Malemute Kid and Prince were in each other's arms, wildly schottisching down the room.

As a rule, Indian women do not make a practice of fainting on provocation, but Madeline came as near to it as she ever had in her life. For an hour she crouched on the floor, listening to the heavy voices of the men rumbling up and down in mimic thunder. Like familiar chords of childhood melodies, every intonation, every trick of her husband's voice, swept in upon her, fluttering her heart and weakening her knees till she lay half fainting against the door. It was well she could neither see nor hear when he took his departure.

"When do you expect to go back to Circle City?" Malemute Kid asked simply.

"Haven't thought much about it," he replied. "Don't think till after the ice breaks."

"And Madeline?"

He flushed at the question, and there was a quick droop to his eyes. Malemute Kid could have despised him for that, had he known men less. As it was, his gorge rose against the wives and daughters who had come into the land, and, not satisfied with usurping the place of the native women, had put unclean thoughts in the heads of the men and made them ashamed.

"I guess she's all right," the Circle City king answered hastily and in an apologetic manner. "Tom Dixon's got charge of my interests, you know, and he sees to it that she has everything she wants."

Malemute Kid laid hand upon his arm and hushed him suddenly. They had stepped without. Overhead the aurora, a gorgeous wanton, flaunted miracles of color; beneath lay the sleeping town. Far below a solitary dog gave tongue. The king again began to speak, but the Kid pressed his hand for silence. The sound multiplied. Dog after dog took up the strain till the full throated chorus swayed the night. To him who hears for the first time this weird song is told the first and greatest secret of the northland; to him who has heard it often it is the solemn knell of lost endeavor. It is the plaint of tortured souls, for in it is invested the heritage of the north, the suffering of countless generations—the warning and the requiem to the world's estrays.

"They had danced all night with a tabooed native woman."

Cal Galbraith shivered slightly as it died away in half caught sobs. The Kid read his thoughts openly, and wandered back with him through all the weary days of famine and disease; and with him was also the patient Madeline, sharing his pains and perils, never doubting, never complaining. His mind's retina vibrated to a score of pictures, stern, clear cut, and the hand of the Past drew back with heavy fingers on his heart. It was the psychological moment. Malemute Kid was half tempted to play his reserve card and win the game; but the lesson was too mild as yet, and he let it pass. The next instant they had gripped hands, and the king's beaded moccasins were drawing protests from the outraged snow as he crunched down the hill.

Madeline in collapse was another woman to the mischievous creature of an hour before, whose laughter had been so infectious and whose heightened color and flashing eyes had made her teachers for the while forget. Weak and nerveless, she sat in the chair just as she had been dropped there by Prince and Harrington. Malemute Kid frowned. This would never do. When the time of meeting her husband came to hand she must carry things off with high handed imperiousness. It was very necessary she should do it after the manner of white women, else the victory would be no victory at all. So he talked to her, sternly, without mincing of words, and initiated her into the weaknesses of his own sex, till she came to understand what simpletons men were, after all, and why the word of their women was law.

A few days before Thanksgiving night Malemute Kid made another call on Mrs. Eppingwell. She promptly overhauled her feminine fripperies, paid a protracted visit to the dry goods department of the P. C. company, and returned with the Kid to make Madeline's acquaintance. After that came a period such as the cabin had never seen before, and what with cutting, and fitting, and basting, and stitching, and numerous other wonderful and unknowable things, the male conspirators were more often banished the premises than not. At such times the opera house opened its double storm doors to them. So often did they put their heads together, and so deeply did they drink to curious toasts, that the loungers scented unknown creeks of incalculable richness, and it is known that several che-cha-quas and at least one old timer kept their stampeding packs stored behind the bar, ready to hit the trail at a moment's notice.

Mrs. Eppingwell was a woman of capacity; so when she turned Madeline over to her training on Thanksgiving night she was so transformed that they were almost afraid of her. Prince wrapped a Hudson bay blanket about her with a mock reverence more real than feigned, while Malemute Kid, whose arm she had taken, found it a severe trial to resume his wonted mentorship. Harrington, with the list of purchase still running through his head, dragged along in the rear, nor opened his mouth once all the way down into the town. When they came to the back door of the opera house they took the blanket from Madeline's shoulders and spread it on the snow. Slipping out of Prince's moccasins, she stepped upon it in new satin slippers. The masquerade was at its height. She hesitated, but they jerked open the door and shoved her in. Then they ran around to come in by the front entrance.

III.

"Where is Freda?" the old timers questioned, while the che-cha-quas were equally energetic in asking who Freda was. The ballroom buzzed with her name. It was on everybody's lips. Grizzled "sour dough boys," day laborers at the mines but proud of their degree, either patronized the spruce looking tenderfeet and lied eloquently—the "sour dough boys" being specially created to toy with truth—or gave them savage looks of indignation because of their ignorance.

Perhaps forty kings of the upper and lower countries were on the floor, each deeming himself hot on the trail and sturdily backing his judgment with the yellow dust of the realm. An assistant was sent to the man at the scales, upon whom had fallen the burden of weighing up the sacks, while several of the gamblers, with the rules of chance at their finger ends, made up alluring books on the field and favorites.

Which was Freda? Time and again the Greek dancer was thought to have been discovered, but each discovery brought panic to the betting ring and a frantic registering of new wagers by those who wished to hedge. Malemute Kid took an interest in the hunt, his advent being hailed uproariously by the revelers, who knew him to a man. The Kid had a good eye for the trick of a step, and ear for the lilt of a voice, and his private choice was a marvelous creature who scintillated as the "Aurora Borealis." But the Greek dancer was too subtle for even his penetration. The majority of the gold hunters seemed to have centered their verdict on the "Russian Princess," who was the most graceful in the room, and hence could be no other than Freda Moloof.

During a quadrille a roar of satisfaction went up. She was discovered. At previous balls, in the figure "all hands round," Freda had displayed an inimitable step and variation peculiarly her own. As the figure was called the "Russian Princess" gave the unique rhythm to limb and body. A chorus of "I told you so's" shook the squared roof beams, when lo! it was noticed that the "Aurora Borealis" and another mask, the "Spirit of the Pole," were performing the same trick equally well. Then when two twin "Sun Dogs" and a "Frost Queen" followed suit a second assistant was dispatched to the aid of the man at the scales.

Bettles came off trail in the midst of the excitement, descending upon them in a hurricane of frost. His rimed brows turned to cataracts as he whirled about; his mustache, still frozen, seemed gemmed with diamonds and turned the light in varicolored rays; while the flying feet slipped on the chunks of ice which rattled from his moccasins and German socks.

A northland dance is quite an informal affair, the men of the creeks and trails having lost whatever fastidiousness they may have at one time possessed; and only in the high official circles are conventions at all observed. Here, caste carried no significance. Millionaires and paupers, dog drivers and mounted policemen, joined hands with "ladies in the center," and swept around the circle, performing most remarkable capers. Primitive in their pleasures, boisterous and rough, they displayed no rudeness, but rather a crude chivalry as genuine as the most polished courtesy.

In his quest for the Greek dancer Cal Galbraith managed to get into the same set with the "Russian Princess," toward whom popular suspicion had turned. But by the time he had guided her through one dance he was willing not only to stake his millions that she was not Freda, but that he had had his arm about her waist before. When or where he could not tell, but the puzzling sense of familiarity so wrought upon him that he turned his attention to the discovery of her identity.

Malemute Kid might have aided him instead of occasionally taking the "Princess" for a few turns and talking earnestly to her in low tones. But it was Jack Harrington who paid the "Russian Princess" the most assiduous court. Once he drew Cal Galbraith aside and hazarded wild guesses as to who she was, and explained to him that he was going in to win. This rankled the Circle City king, for man is not by nature monogamic, and he forgot both Madeline and Freda in the new quest.

It was soon noised about that the "Russian Princess" was not Freda Moloof. Interest deepened. Here was a fresh enigma. They knew Freda, though they could not find her, but here was somebody they had found and did not know. Even the women could not place her, and they knew every good dancer in the camp. Many took her for one of the official clique, indulging in a silly escapade. Not a few asserted she would disappear before the unmasking. Others were equally positive that she was the woman reporter of the Kansas City Star, come to write them up at $90 a column. And the men at the scales worked busily.

At 1 o'clock every couple took to the floor. The unmasking began amid laughter and delight like that of care free children. There was no end of O's and Ah's as mask after mask was lifted. The scintillating "Aurora Borealis" became the brawny Negrees whose income from washing the community's clothes ran at about five hundred a month. The twin "Sun Dogs" discovered mustaches on their upper lips, and were recognized as brother fraction kings of Eldorado.

In one of the most prominent sets, and the slowest in uncovering, was Cal Galbraith with the "Spirit of the Pole." Opposite him was Jack Harrington and the "Russian Princess." The rest had discovered themselves, yet the Greek dancer was still missing. All eyes were upon the group. Cal Galbraith, in response to their cries, lifted his partner's mask. Freda's wonderful face and brilliant eyes flashed out upon them. A roar went up, to be hushed suddenly in the new and absorbing mystery of the "Russian Princess." Her face was still hidden, and Jack Harrington was struggling with her. The dancers tittered on the tiptoes of expectancy. He crushed her dainty costume roughly, and then—and then the revelers exploded. The joke was on them. They had danced all night with a tabooed native woman.

But those that knew, and they were many, ceased abruptly, and a hush fell upon the room. Cal Galbraith crossed over with great strides, angrily, and spoke to Madeline in polyglot Chinook. But she retained her composure, apparently oblivious to the fact that she was the cynosure of all eyes, and answered him in English. She showed neither fright nor anger, and Malemute Kid chuckled at her well bred equanimity. The king felt baffled, defeated; his common Siwash wife had passed beyond him.

"Come!" he said finally. "Come on home."

"I beg pardon," she replied; "I have agreed to go to supper with Mr. Harrington. Besides, there's no end of dances promised."

Harrington extended his arm to lead her away. He evinced not the slightest disinclination toward showing his back, but Malemute Kid had by this time edged in closer. The Circle City king was stunned. Twice his hand dropped to his belt, and twice the Kid gathered himself to spring; but the retreating couple passed safely through the supper room door, where canned oysters were spread at $5 the plate. The crowd sighed audibly, broke up into couples, and followed them. Freda pouted and went in with Cal Galbraith; but she had a good heart and a sure tongue, and she spoiled his oysters for him. What she said is of no importance, but his face went red and white at intervals, and he swore repeatedly and savagely at himself.

The supper room was filled with a pandemonium of voices, which ceased suddenly as Cal Galbraith stepped over to his wife's table. Since the unmasking considerable weights of dust had been placed as to the outcome. Everybody watched with breathless interest. Harrington's blue eyes were steady, but under the overhanging table cloth a Smith & Wesson balanced on his knee. Madeline looked up, casually, with little interest.

"May—may I have the next round dance with you?" the king stuttered.

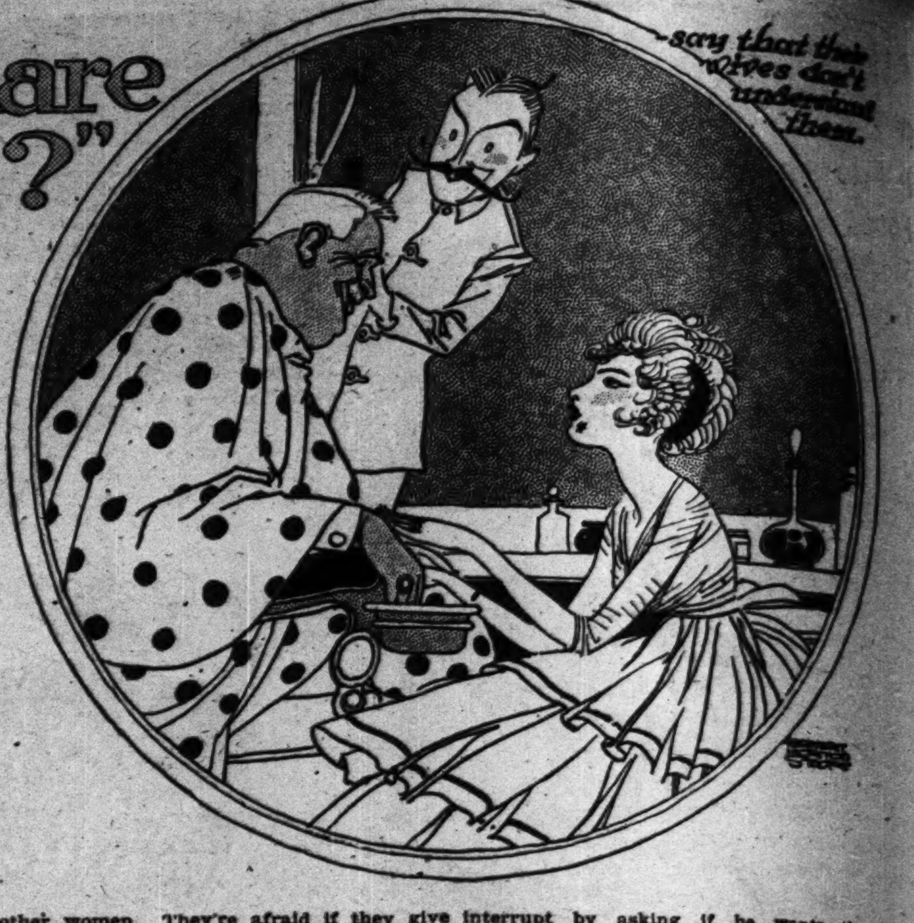
“You Want Them Square or Round?”

There is such a thing as a Manicurist working too hard to please

by ONEY FRED SWEET



say that their wives don't understand them.

COMPETITION may be the life of trade, but it's a discouraging thing, too, sometimes. It seemed to me that I had stood it just as long as I could. First I began dabbing the corners of my eyes with my handkerchief, then my lips began to quiver, and finally I gave up completely and dropped my head to my arm that lay across the table, my shoulders heaving with stifled sobs.

“There! There!” It was Mrs. Myer speaking. She was the other manicurist in the barber shop. She had come over from her table to comfort me. “There! There!” she soothed. “You just forget your work a while and come back here behind this screen and dry your eyes. You'll ruin your looks crying that way. Just come back here with me where everybody won't be staring and tell me all about it.”

No one coming into the barber shop would have taken her for a “Mrs.” She didn't dress or look like one; I could hardly believe it myself when she confided she had three kids at home. She had a way about her. She wore a waist that was of soft pink, delicate material. She had a posed, mysterious expression.

“I haven't had any work to forget; you know that, Mrs. Myer,” I sobbed as we seated ourselves behind the screen and the interrupted razors and shears out in front began snipping and scraping once more. “That's just what I'm crying about. No one seemed interested in giving me a trial. There I've sat at that table all morning and watched you get every customer that's come into the joint. They've even waited for you when you were busy. And it's not because I can't swing a file successfully, because none of them took the trouble to find out whether I could or not. O, I ought to have gone some place where I would have been the only one in the shop; I can see that now.”

Mrs. Myer didn't say anything for a minute. Presently she cleared her throat. “Have you tried housework?” she asked; “general housework, something for which you might be more fitted? There's always an opportunity in that line, no matter how you look. Manicuring—well, manicuring requires a whole lot. I've been at it for three years.”

Sympathy had dried my tears. All morning I had been half sore at Mrs. Myer, watching her busily holding hands and putting over a line of talk and collecting tips while all I could do was sit and watch the chair across the table from me remain unoccupied. Mrs. Myer could afford to be nice to me, since she had no occasion to be jealous.

“There's a lot of things I can post you about if you insist on staying in the work,” went on the old timer, lifting my head from her shoulder.

“I know,” I enthused, brightening up. “I want to soak the fingers thoroughly before starting in with the emery board and the orangewood stick. My outfit's professional, isn't it, Mrs. Myer? It seems to me I've got a whole lot of stuff for just fussing around a little finger nail with—almost a lumber yard, a drug store, and a foundry spread out there on my table.”

“Of course there are manicures and manicures,” Mrs. Myer interrupted, apparently ignoring what I had burst in to say. “No two places are alike, I suppose. I am merely speaking out of my own personal experience. From where you were sitting you could overhear Joe and the other barbers talking to the men in the chairs while they lathered and sprinkled tonic, couldn't you?”

“I could,” I gushed, “and it was perfectly wonderful how Joe can talk about submarines and batting averages, and he always seemed to agree with the man who was getting his face laundered. Where did Joe get all that stuff about diplomatic relations and the Belgians being a ‘wonderful little people’? And you and your customers were all the time carrying on a line of talk, too; but you talked so low I couldn't hear you.”

“Well,” assured the veteran, “we weren't talking about submarines or batting averages. Matters of national importance and interest aren't settled at the manicure table. I had six customers this morning, and if you could have caught each of their conversations in a phonograph you could have spoiled five of the records and not lost a remark. They all had the same line of dope.”

“As you will notice,” she went on, “I am a blonde. It takes quite a bit of pains to stay as blonde as I am, but the fact that I am always produces the same opening remarks. The first man whose hand I held this morning said something about my being a blonde. If I had seen you last night I could have bet all my tips for the next six months that that would be just what he would do. What's the difference? It takes up part of the twenty minutes. You'd be surprised how much men like to kid somebody and be kidded back. No one but a manicurist knows how really lonely men are.”

“Only twenty minutes to a job?” I gasped. “Twenty minutes, at 5 cents a nail, besides the tips, and then you wonder why I don't try general housework!”

“Of course,” she agreed, “I'll admit it's much easier to work for men than it is for women; any working girl knows that. Women don't know how to get work out of other women. They're afraid if they give a little praise you'll lay down on the job, and the men hand out a little flattery, with the result that you work just twice as hard to please. And married men—you can pick them out every time—are always much nicer to you than single men; they're more considerate.

“I can stand for almost any man except the ones who say that somehow their wives don't understand them. I wonder who originated that line. I have an idea that their wives do understand them like a book. I sometimes wonder, too, if Adam pulled that one of looking at his watch and remarking that it was almost lunch time and that he knew a swell place to eat. Men aren't the least bit original about such things. And it's funny, but one man can say something and it doesn't make you start to look haughty at all, while another man can say almost exactly the same thing to you and it almost makes you sick. You can tell any man that you've got another engagement at lunch time and he'll believe you.

“But I'm not pessimistic about men. Naturally, you don't know who's going to be ‘next,’ and you've got to take them as they come. All you've got to do is let what they say go in one ear and out the other. If your customer gets too personal interrupt by asking if he wants them ‘square or round.’ If he starts to tell you a ‘good story’ he's ‘just heard’ suggest that he ‘let the other one soak.’ That's all there is to it. The only climax necessary is, ‘I've got another customer waiting. So long! Here's your check.’ He's had his 50 cents' worth. Now you just dry those tears. I'll see that you get a customer. I'll turn my next one over to you.”

When we came out from behind the screen I was all smiles again, even if Gus, the Negro porter, who was using a long handled brush on the floor, did pause, look up at me, and shake his head mournfully.

“Now, you just keep up your courage, dearie,” Mrs. Myer whispered with a parting pat. “Joe's got a man in his chair now who wants a manicure. Go and start right in before he has a chance to look you over.”

I gathered up all my tools and, bringing them over to the chair, seated myself at the feet of the loophound who was about to be hair-toniced. When he looked up to see who had grabbed hold of his mitt he seemed inclined at first to remonstrate. He looked around appealingly toward Mrs. Myer, but I hung on to his hand good and tight.

I knew it was my opportunity. If anybody ever tried to make good on a manicure job, I certainly did. Perhaps I tried too hard. Maybe I was too strenuous. But I made up my mind I would scrape and file a full 50 cents' worth.

At first he was smiling and pleasant, but pretty soon he began to complain.

“It don't do you any good to say I'm too rough,” I warned. “Mrs. Myer told me about that. She said it was only a kick made for the purpose of having the job drag along. I'm watching the clock, and I'm going to be through in exactly twenty minutes.”

“You don't need to file off the sides of my fingers,” he scowled.

“It'll all be over in no time,” I patronized, “and inside of half an hour you'll never know it hurt. Mrs. Myer says that, without asking, she can always tell by the looks of a man how he wants his nails fixed. She says she can judge health and a whole lot of things by the nails, too. Now, just hold real still while I use the scissors. How long has it been since you cleaned your finger nails last? O, my; you ought——”

It was just a teeny slip. I didn't cut into the quick more than an eighth of an inch, but you would have thought I'd half murdered him. In trying to jerk his hand away he pulled me clear out of my chair. I tried to argue, but it was no use.

Mrs. Myer helped me on with my hat and coat when the commotion, in which Joe, finally ceasing to be neutral, took part, had died down.

“He was really nice about it, dearie,” she solaced. “He didn't say anything so very bad, only—only that he'd asked for a manicure, not a blacksmith.”

“You can tell any man that you've got another engagement at lunch time and he'll believe you.”

FIXING IT WITH FATHER

By Berton Braley

It Was Easy After Father Found There Was Shamrock on the Family Tree.

THERE was always a flutter and a little gasp of delight and wonder in the Forum theater when the spotlight swung to the tall column at the back of the stage from behind which Romani made his entrance. Gasp and flutter both came from the feminine portion of the audience, though after Romani tucked his violin under his chin and swept his bow across the strings even the men admitted that he was "some fiddler."

Romani's brows were black and heavy, his eyes were lustrous black as well, and the great mane of hair which hung down almost to his shoulders was thick and blue black, and, considered of itself, beautiful. Only, most men expressed the thought that he needed a hair cut.

Florence Riordan, however, represented the women's view of Romani when she said that he was perfectly lovely and that his hair was the most wonderful thing about him, except his playing. Striking a nice balance between the masculine and feminine opinion, we find the exact truth to be that Romani was a remarkably handsome young man whose hair was not according to the conventional standard and who knew how to manipulate a bow.

Florence had been a Romani fan long before he came to the Forum. She had heard him in small time vaudeville and predicted that he would be playing in the Majestic before long. She had found her prophesy come true when he stepped out from the wings in the Majestic a few months later and made that vaudeville audience swallow classic stuff and like it, and then turned to rag for an encore and set every shoulder swinging and every foot in the audience to tapping with his syncopation. And she had rejoiced vastly when the Forum, a huge motion picture house, with its orchestra of sixty pieces, had secured Romani at an enormous salary, duly advertised, to fill in between feature films. So many other girls had rejoiced with her that Romani's original four weeks' engagement seemed likely to stretch to forty. He drew as powerfully as a Douglas Fairbanks five reeler or the best of the thrillers in which Theda Bara vamped so viperishly.

This will explain why, when the Forum engagement decided that Romani ought to hold a reception for the Forum patrons, it was necessary to call out the reserves to handle the crowd—the almost wholly feminine crowd—which stormed the hall that had been hired for the occasion. Eventually ticket holders were admitted and those who had tried to "beat the rules" left clamoring outside, unhappily wishing that they had saved the necessary number of ticket stubs required by the canny management before a card of admission was granted.

The violinist stood smiling and bowing as the procession of young women passed him, each one who wanted to linger urged onward by the pressure behind her. He did not shake hands with the guests because he had to play again that evening.

Faces were rapidly becoming a meaningless blur to him, when across the room he caught a glimpse of a slim, gold haired girl with brilliant blue eyes and a complexion so peach blossomy that Romani thought it artificial, until the girl caught his eyes on her and flushed. Then he knew it was real.

Romani suddenly stepped out of the place where he had been perfunctorily greeting the line of admirers and made his way swiftly over to the girl with the gold hair. He bowed low and extended his hand.

"The senora," he said, "did not join the procession."

"No," agreed Miss Riordan, "I never was much for parades."

"Ah," the musician exclaimed, "but the senora need not fret, wherever she was would be the head of the procession."

His big black eyes were taking in every detail of her face, figure, and costume but Florence could not stand that sort of scrutiny. On the fifteen a week she earned as a milliner she managed to pay six to her mother and father for board, and with what was left dressed with a style, taste, and individuality which a Michigan avenue debutante could better only in quality, not in effect.

By this time the procession had followed Romani, and Miss Riordan, who had stayed out of it because she knew it would make her more noticeable, nodded at the waiting line.

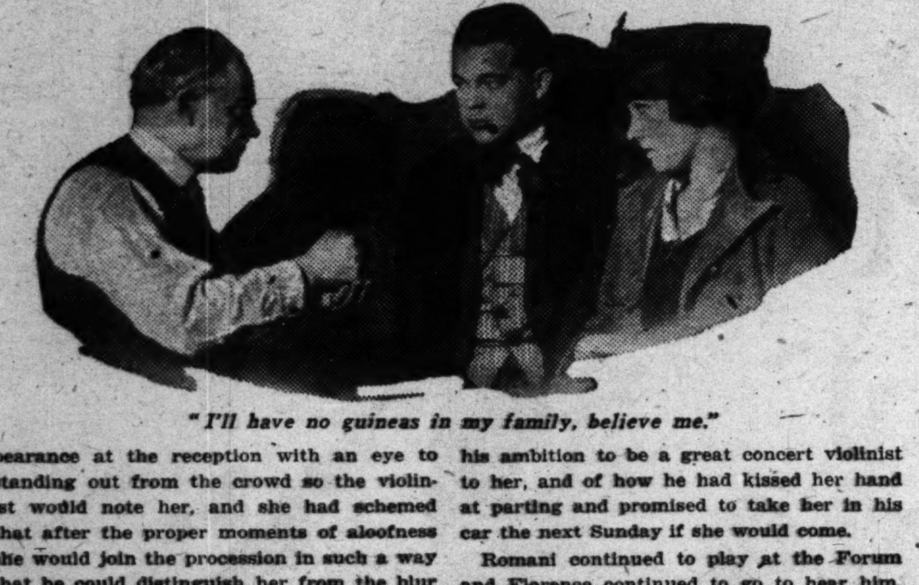
"Line forms to the left, take your turn," she said in an undertone to the violinist, "you'd better go back to the brigade or there will be a riot."

Romani shrugged his shoulders. "Apart from the crowd," he replied, "I found you. Apart from the crowd you stand, always. Women, most women, bore me. You—I like. How shall I see you again?"

"Pop," she informed him, "hasn't any use for wo—for foreigners, or I'd tell you to come to the flat. But he'd make such a row that——"

"Perhaps you could lunch with me, at Lane's tomorrow?" queried the musician, sweeping the hair from his eyes, "at 1? We can meet in the waiting room. Yes?"

If Romani was a great musician, Florence had the makings of a great actress. For she had planned every detail of her appearance at the reception with an eye to standing out from the crowd so the violinist would note her, and she had schemed that after the proper moments of aloofness she would join the procession in such a way that he could distinguish her from the blur of passing faces; but while she had plotted all this carefully enough, she had not expected him so suddenly to pick her out of the mob, nor to leave his place and seek her. Yet, except for that first flush when his eyes met hers across the room, she had carried off her part as calmly and easily as a society queen, though all the time her heart was beating "juba" frantically against her breast.



"I'll have no guineas in my family, believe me."

Now, in her manner as she answered his suggestion, there was the attitude of one to whom invitations to lunch from virtuosos were daily occurrences. "Let me see," she said, with finger on lip, "what have I tomorrow? Yes, I guess I can make it. Thank you."

With a bow and a pleased smile the violinist went back to his procession, while Miss Florence Riordan departed homeward. She would be docked for the afternoon, but she had actually met Romani and was to have lunch with him the next day. And if, being a magazine reader and a movie patron, Florence remembered the terrible things which happened to girls who went to lunch with bold black eyed artists or musicians, it did not detract from the delightful savor of the coming adventure. For Florence knew her way about, and what was life, anyhow, unless you took a chance now and then?

Florence didn't get back to the milliner's following that luncheon until 3 o'clock and knew she would be docked again. But she didn't care. Not even the call-down she got from the forewoman for trimming a seven-fifty hat with trimming meant for a twenty-five dollar creation disturbed her much. You can't stop a chariot of dreams by throwing tacks on the road.

Hats were very little in her young life that afternoon. Forewomen were even less. Luckily for the shop, she kept her experience to herself, for had she breathed the tale into the ears of the other girls there would have been demoralization. Not one girl there but knew of Romani, not one but thought him "perfectly lovely" and the handsomest thing!

Therefore, it was only Florence who mused over two hours spent with genius—genius rich of voice, expressive of face, and warm and compelling of eye. It was only Florence who smiled tenderly over the moving story of Romani's past, of his days on the streets of Genoa, a little, wistful, big eyed boy, playing with his father for what lira they might obtain; of the times when they had not enough to eat, and of the wonderful day when a rich American lady heard him and declared he must be educated to be a great musician. It was only Florence whose eyes grew bright over the story that when his "rich lady" died the little violinist and his violin stowed away on a fruit steamer and reached America, and, after playing in a little Italian restaurant, gradually reached the small time vaudeville houses and so acquired his present vogue. And it was only Florence who glowed as she recalled how he had confided his ambition to be a great concert violinist to her, and of how he had kissed her hand at parting and promised to take her in his car the next Sunday if she would come.

Romani continued to play at the Forum and Florence continued to go to hear him. And after the performance nearly every evening they went together, in the violinist's long black car, on long rides through Elysium—which means any road, anywhere, that lovers drive.

When a girl is as wildly in love as Florence she usually betrays it in a hundred ways, and these were not missing in her demeanor at home. Her brother chaffed her unmercifully, and her mother watched her and questioned her with a worried look, but there were two reasons why Florence said nothing. One was because her father's dislike of "foreigners" amounted almost to a mania, and the other was because no diamond solitaire sparkled on her ring finger. It should have been there, as Florence knew, and always she hoped that he would speak of marriage, but he had not done so.

Then came the night when her brother saw Florence get into the auto with Romani and brought home the news. The Riordan family, like many another American family, was not overapprehensive about its members, and so long as Florence returned in good season no one questioned her minutely as to where she had been. But on this night Florence kissed her lover good night two blocks from her home, as usual, and came into the flat to find her father walking up and down the floor muttering and her mother weeping.

"O," said Riordan, as she came in, "so that's where ye've been spending yer nights at, is ut. Wid a wop fiddler, scallyraggin' about th' city in an nautymobile and runnin' from one roadhouse to another wid him. A domn foreigner, too, and a felly wid long hair like a girl, whin there are plenty of good Americans like McCarty and Gilhooley's boy, and Millarkey and thim that wud take ye around and glad to. But ye have to go fall fer a foreigner. I'll not have it, I'll not.

"Out wid ye," he said, "out wid ye. I'll have ye in the streets before any dago fiddler will marry into this family. Out wid ye——"

"But father—" began the girl, pleadingly, "I can't—I haven't——"

"Señor," said a suave voice from the doorway, "perhaps you have made a little mistake. The senorita, your daughter, she is very dear to me, and I have not harm her. I have not ask her to marry me because I have wish to test her faith in me. It is a very great thing, señor, that the woman you love have faith in you. But tonight, so soon I leave your daughter, I say to myself, 'It is not fair, it is too much you ask, Romani. You shall go now to her father and say "I have desire of your daughter for my wife."' So I have come. And when no one answer my knock I have walk in."

The face of Florence grew radiant, and she moved toward him; the features of Mrs. Riordan showed vast relief and motherly tenderness, but the countenace of Mr. Riordan seemed to grow darker.

"You've got a nerve," he said, "comin' around here wid yer long hair and yer wop talk an' expectin' me to take ye fer a son-in-law. I'll have no guineas in my family, believe me."

"Father," protested Florence, "don't be an old grouch. Alberto is a great violinist, a fine artist, a genius—and I love him. And if you won't have him in the family—then I'll get out of the family and marry him anyhow."

"Yes, father, can the proud and haughty stuff," said Romani, shaking his hair back from his brow, "and don't worry about foreigners in the family."

The old man gasped, the mother gasped, and Florence gave a little shriek of amazement.

"Because my real name is Moriarity," continued Romani, with a twinkle in those lustrous black eyes and an expression on his countenance that only an Irishman could produce, "and I was born on Clark street. And that stuff I told you about Italy and me doing the troubadour act in Genoa," he turned to Florence, "forget it. Just press agent bunk. I learned the violin from a good man right here in town, but nobody wanted an Irish violinist with a name like Moriarity, except in an orchestra, and I was out for the solo game. So I took the tip of an actor friend of mine and let the mane grow and came around to one of the restaurants, mysterious dago genius and all that. Bite? They bit right off the reel and after that I went right up to where I am now. Five hundred a week—and more to come!"

"Five hundred a week!" exclaimed old man Riordan, his face beaming. "Mr. Moriarity, I'm proud to meet ye this day. You remember, mother," he turned to his wife, "I was sayin' to ye only a few days gone, mother, that Romani doesn't look much to me like a wop—I thought there was a bit of the shamrock on his family tree, all right, all right."

Florence, who had been listening to all this with amazement and dismay, interrupted her father.

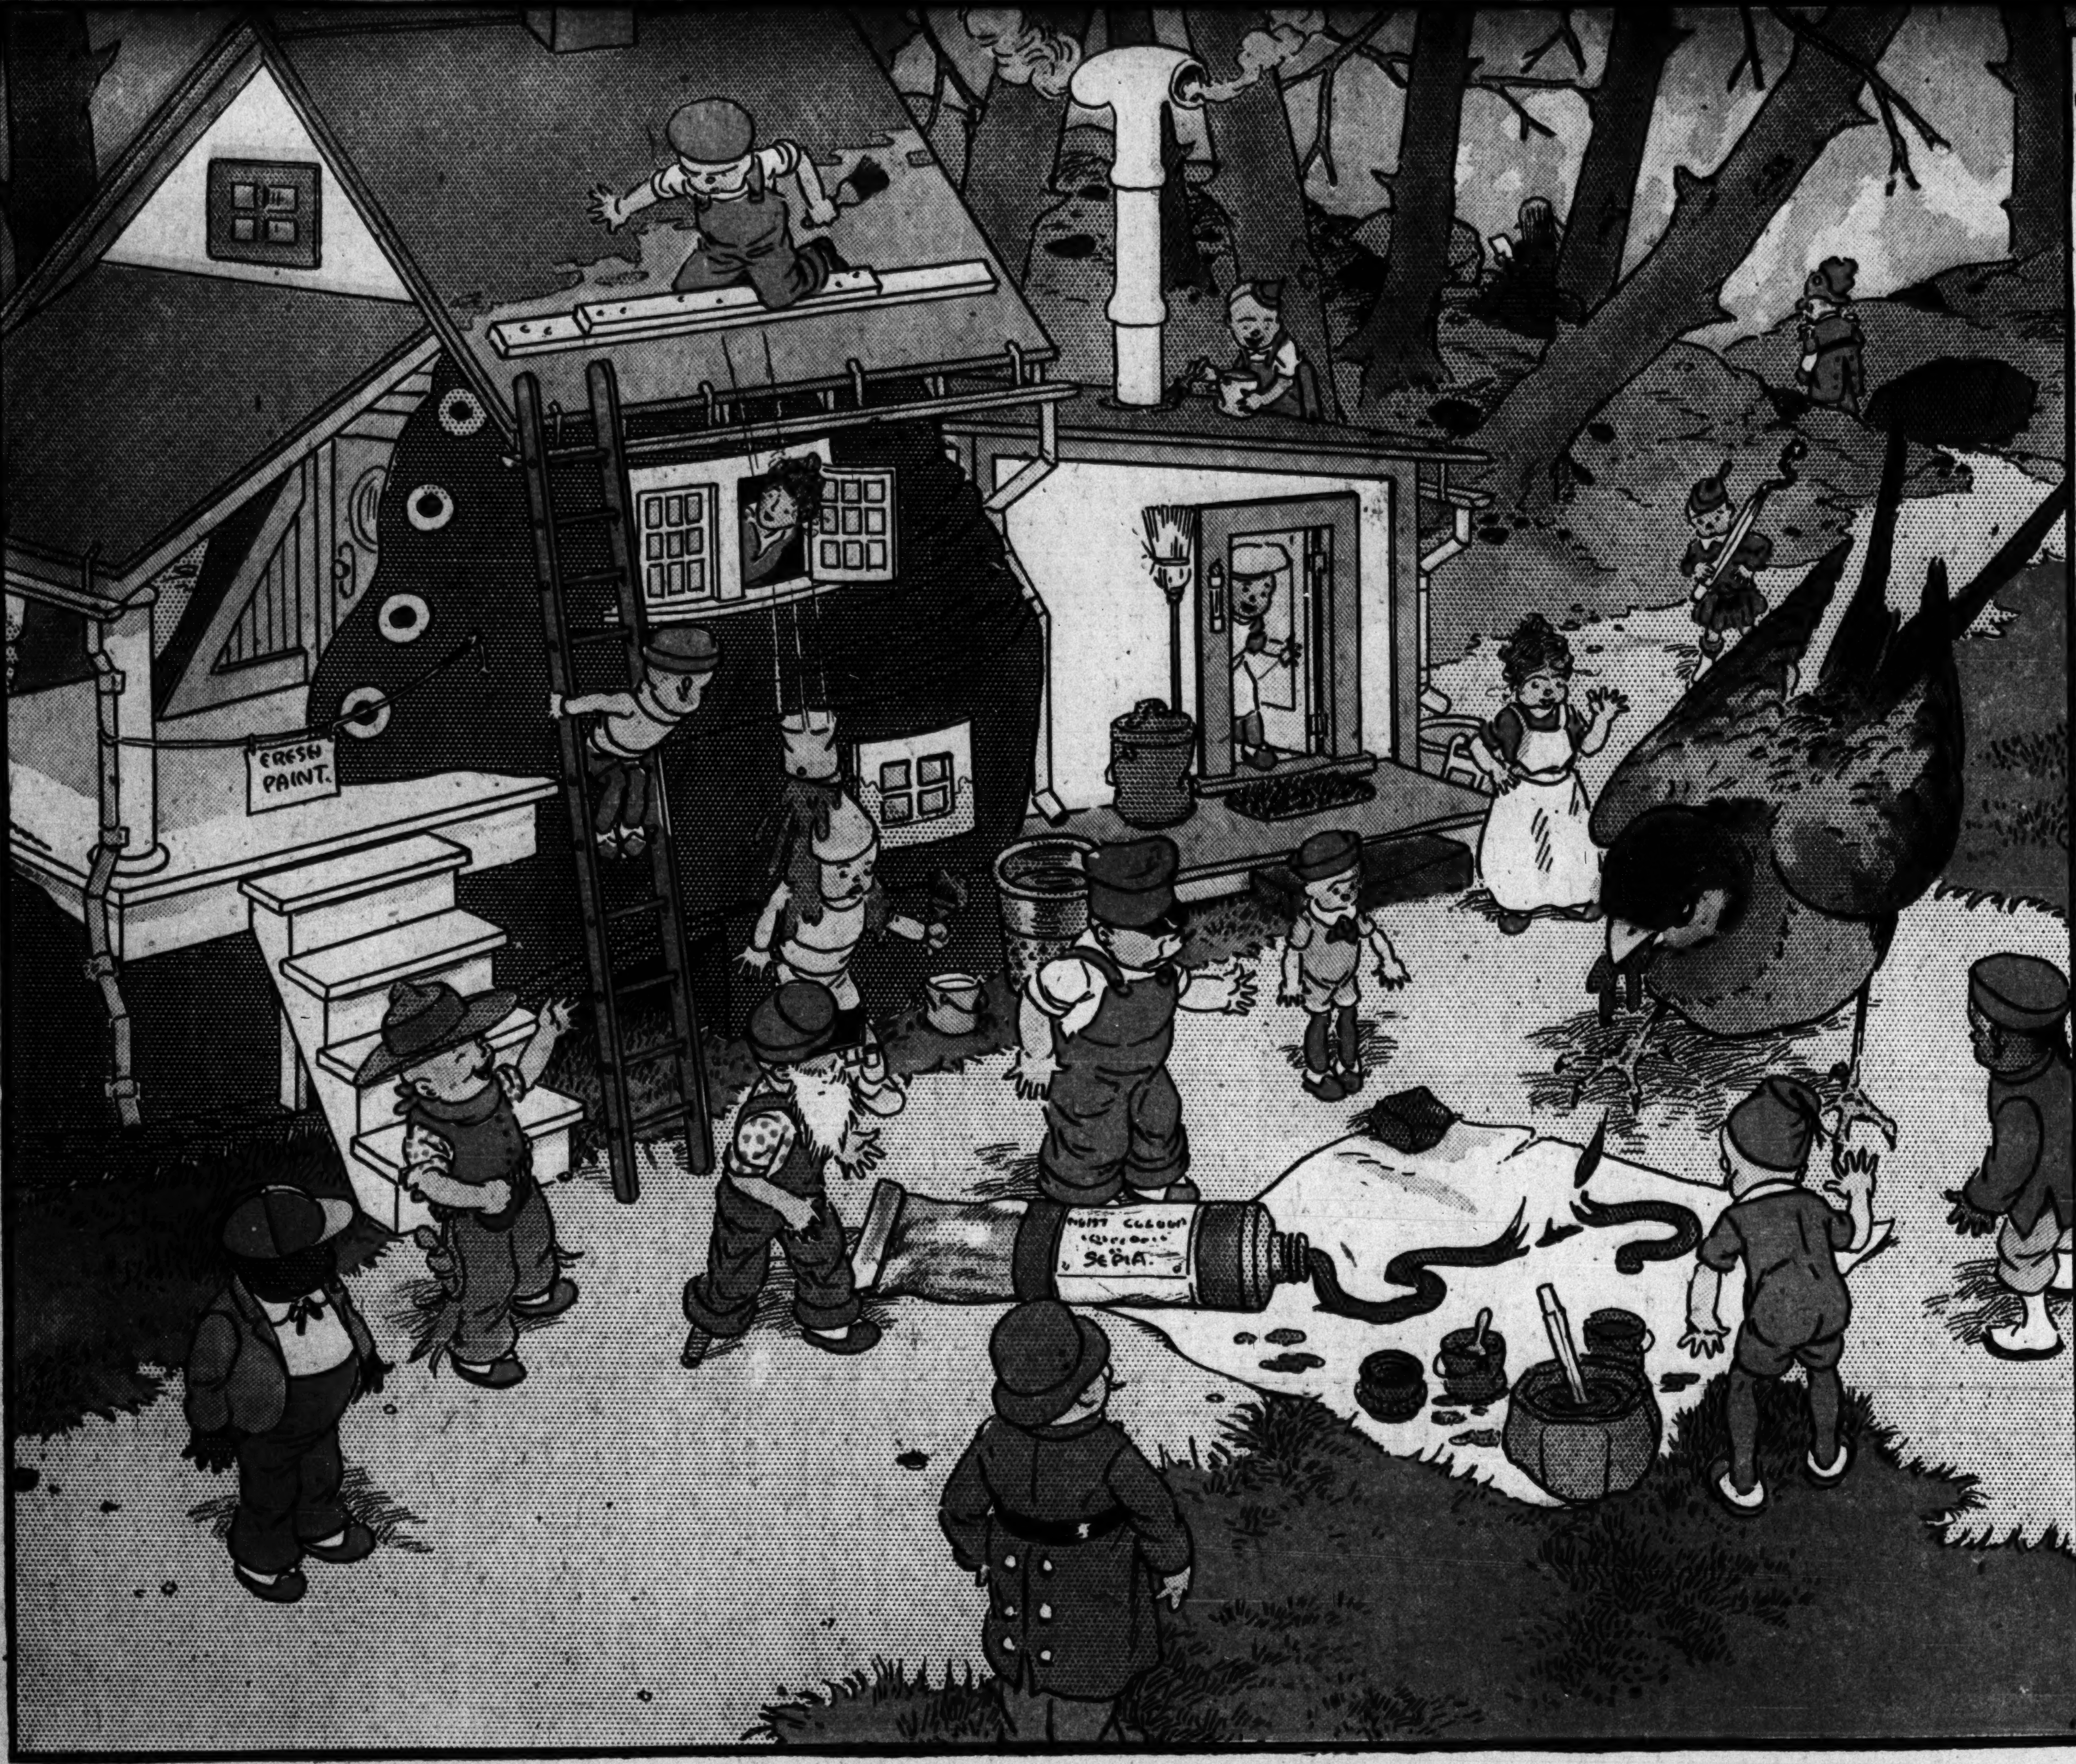
"Mike Moriarity!" she exclaimed; "not an Italian violinist, but an Irish fiddler! Why," she turned to the musician, "you've lied to me, you've pretended all through, you've made love—like—like a p-p-passionate Venician, and—and you were born on Clark street. How could you, how could you?"

Two big tears rolled down her cheeks and her voice broke.

"How could I be born on Clark street?" asked Romani with a grin. "I suppose because my mother was there at the time. As to the rest, senorita," he said, with a return to his Italian manner, "Alberto Romani has for you a great love that will not die. You are my very life, bellissima. And Mike Moriarity"—suddenly he was all Irish—"Mike Moriarity thinks you are a grand colleen and loves you with all the heart and soul of him. Don't ye love him, too?"

Florence looked a moment into his eyes, wiped away the tears, smiled tenderly, and reached her arms to him.

"Shure and I do," she said.



THE TEENIE WEENIES

PAINT THE SHOE HOUSE.

By WM. DONAHEY.

"COOK," announced the General one evening after dinner as he settled down in his easy chair beside the tiny fireplace, "we'll have an early breakfast in the morning, for I'd like to start getting things ready to paint the house tomorrow and we ought to be at work by six o'clock at the very latest."

"All right, sir," answered the Cook, "I'll put a raisin to soak and grind up a grain of corn so we can have hot corn cakes with raisin sauce."

"Jinks! I wish we could have breakfast right now!" cried the greedy Dunce, who was always ready to eat.

After a hearty meal the next morning the little people set about getting things ready to give the shoe house a fresh coat of paint. First, brushes had to be made. The Old Soldier cut the brush handles from an old match, while the Clown and the Dutchman fastened mouse hairs on to them with bands of tin and glue. Several other Teenie Weenies carried the tube of paint which had been given them out into the front yard, where they laid it on a piece of paper to keep it clean. It was about all the Dutchman and the Turk could do to lift the tube and squeeze out the paint on to the paper.

"Schiminy, but dot vas some bretty hard vork!" sighed the Dutchman, mopping his round bald head.

"I think that tube of paint weighed at least two hundred Teenie Weenie pounds," said the Turk. "It's almost as—" but the little fellow never finished the sentence, for at that moment a bird flew down in front of the astonished Teenie Weenies and grabbed up a beakful of the soft paint.

The Sailor, who was painting the roof, was so startled at the bird's appearance that he dropped his bucket of paint and it fell upside down on top of the Dunce's hat, spilling the paint all over the poor fellow's clothes.

The bird was as much surprised as the Teenie Weenies when he tasted the paint, and, hopping on to the grass, he frantically wiped his beak all over the lawn, shouting at the top of his voice: "I'm poisoned! I'm poisoned!"

"It won't hurt you," shouted the Cook, running up to the bird and wiping off his bill with a rag. "But what in the name of common sense did you want to eat that paint for?"

"Why, w-h-y, I thought it was a worm," gasped the bird, looking about foolishly at the laughing Teenie Weenies.

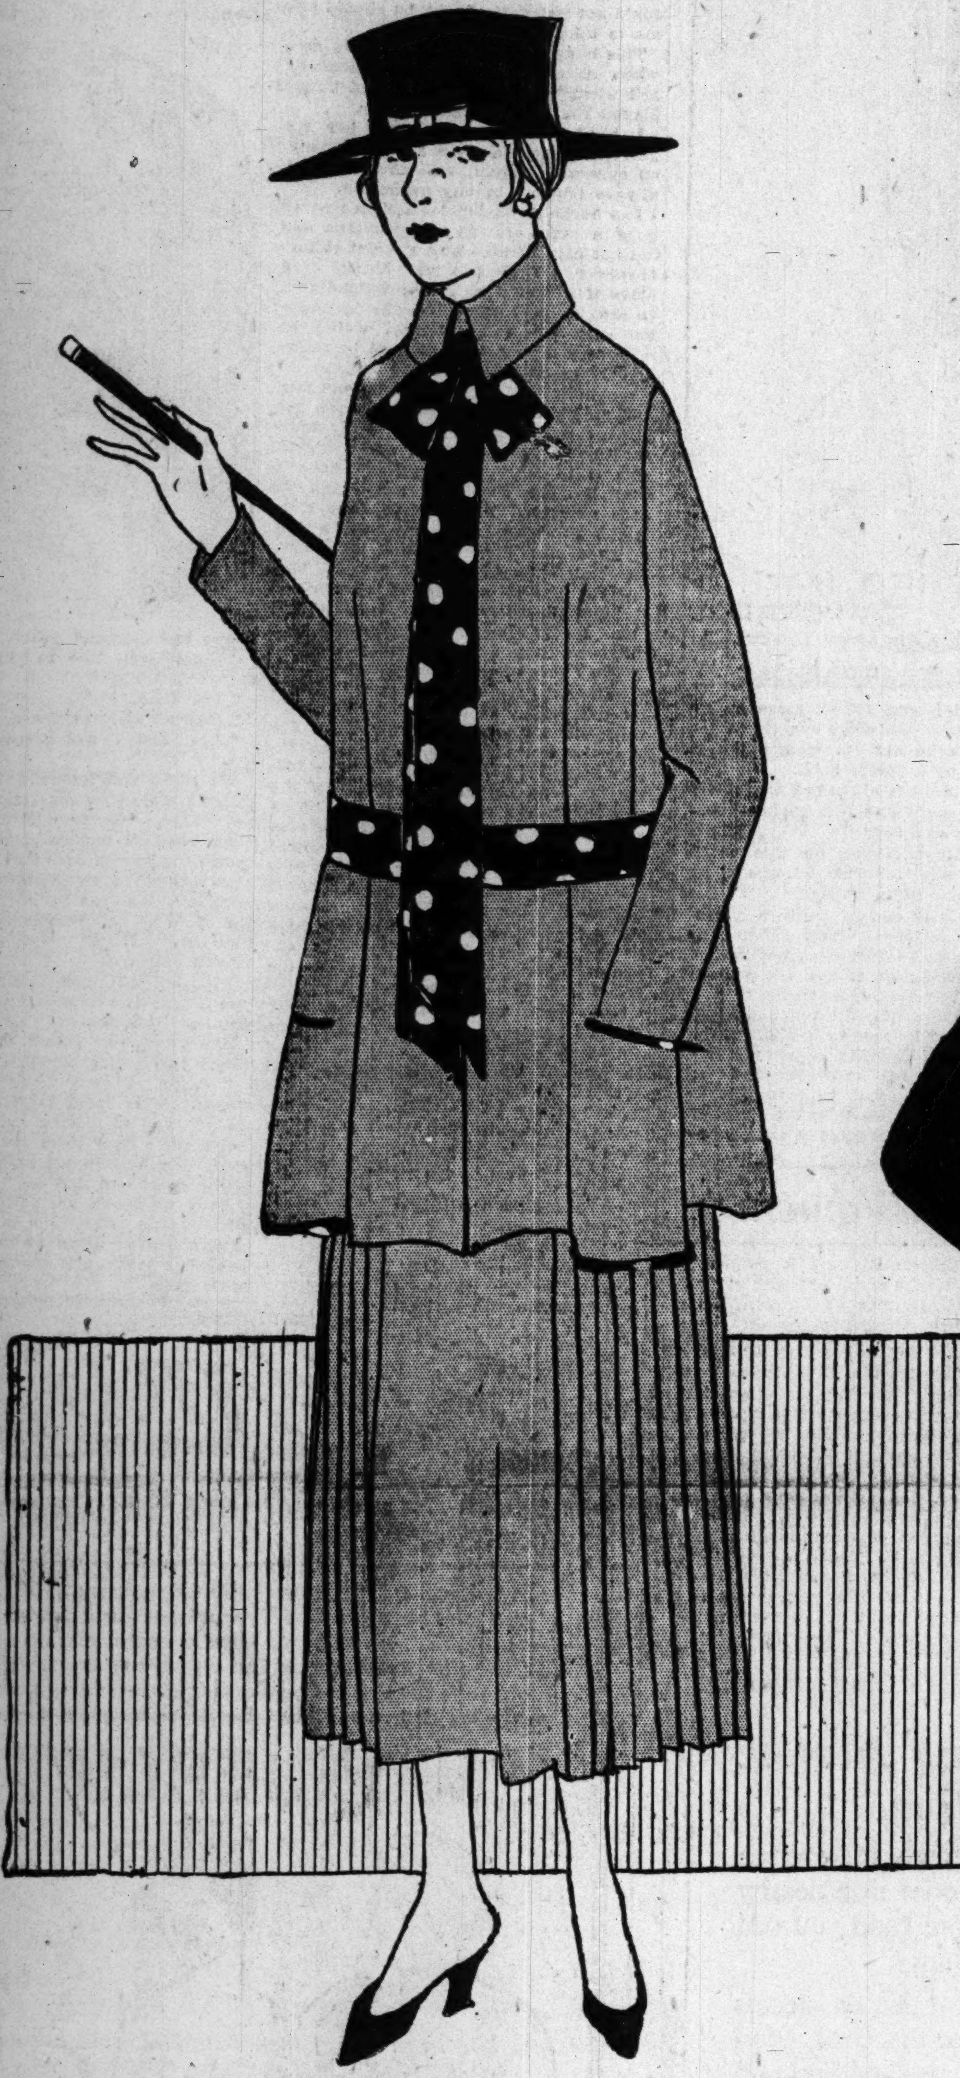
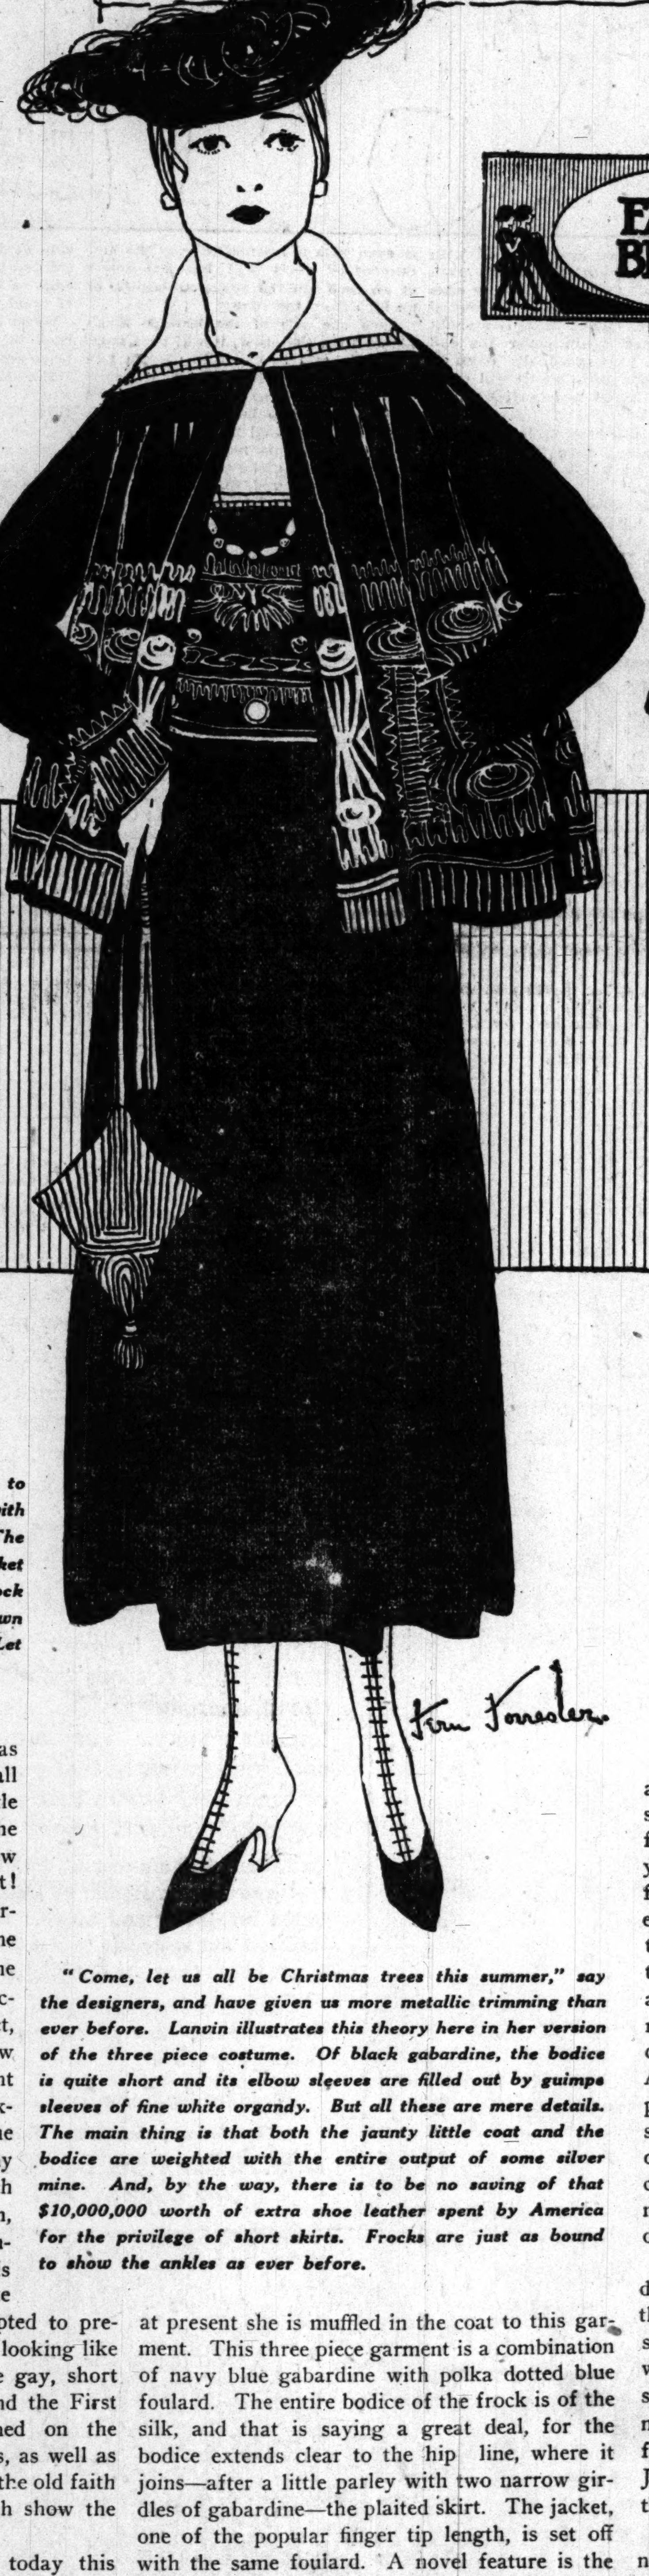
SHORT WAISTS? NO!

By CORINNE LOWE

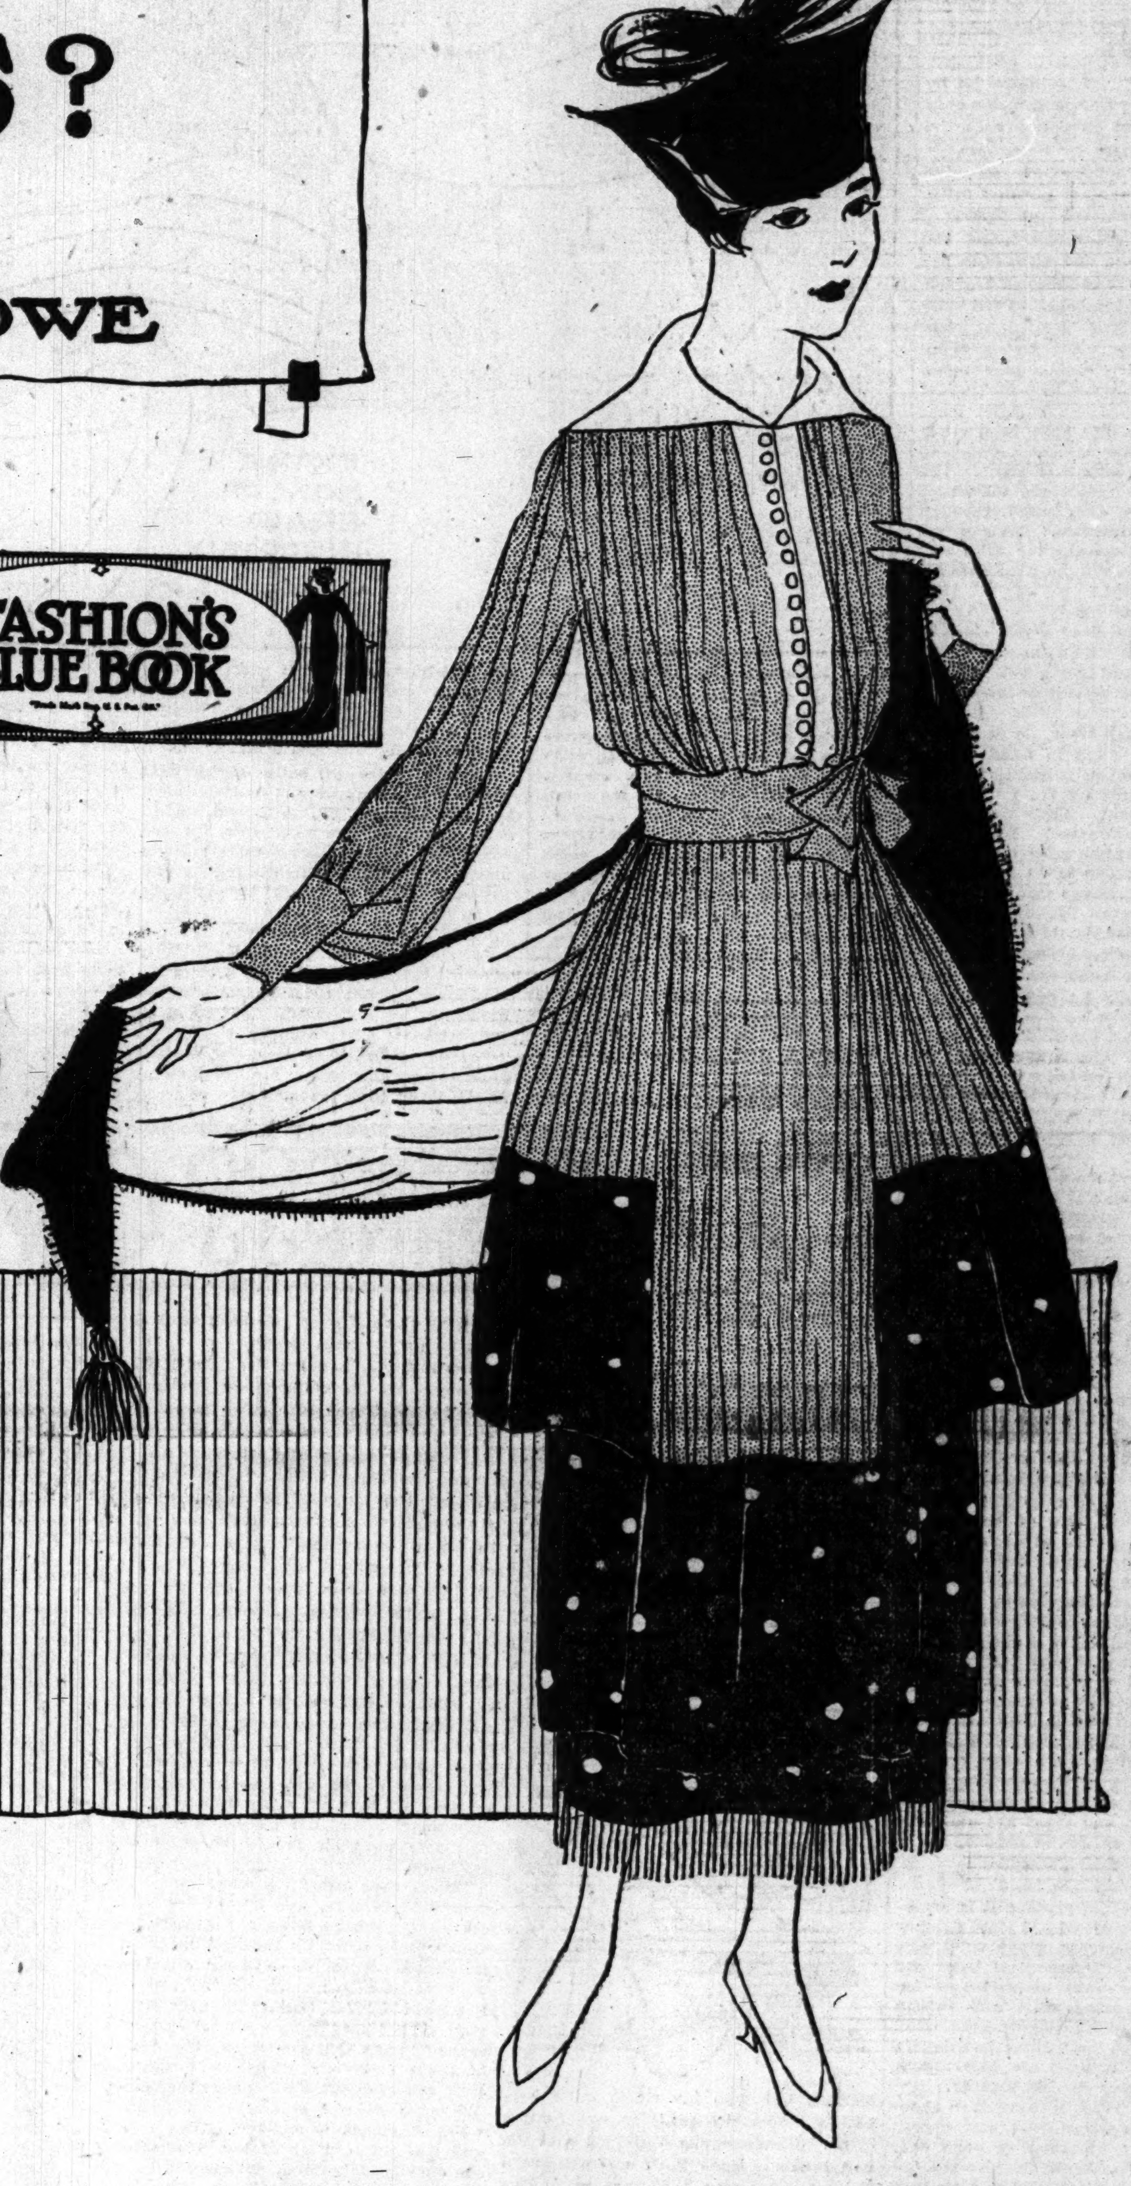
FASHION'S BLUE BOOK



Fie! Let any defenseless little frock be seen without its proper duenna of wrap to match? We should say not, scowl the French dressmakers. Here Jenny presents us with her famous three piece costume of navy gabardine trimmed with coin dotted foulard. The coat is lined with this foulard and is so boastful about it that it shows an inch of pocket lining beneath the hem of the jacket. It is the least it can do to atone for hiding a frock bodice made of foulard and extending clear to the hips. Slim and swinging straight down from shoulder to hem, Madamoiselle Jenny says in this costume, Begone, Directoire! Let us have the svelte Egyptian silhouette.



"Come, let us all be Christmas trees this summer," say the designers, and have given us more metallic trimming than ever before. Lanvin illustrates this theory here in her version of the three piece costume. Of black gabardine, the bodice is quite short and its elbow sleeves are filled out by guimpe sleeves of fine white organdy. But all these are mere details. The main thing is that both the jaunty little coat and the bodice are weighted with the entire output of some silver mine. And, by the way, there is to be no saving of that $10,000,000 worth of extra shoe leather spent by America for the privilege of short skirts. Frocks are just as bound to show the ankles as ever before.



Foulard and foulard and foulard, tinkle the fashion bells. Drecoll makes use of this material here in a brown check, alternating with a tan check and then dotted for full foulard measure. The entire frock is of this material draped above with chiffon of tete de negre shade.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Latest Spring Fashions Just Here from Paris Show Comparatively Little of the Directoire Emphasis.

NEW YORK—(Special correspondence.)—La Touraine had docked on Saturday morning. On Saturday afternoon the French models, just fresh from the big Paris openings, had gone through the customs. On Monday afternoon sixty of them, actually mussed and wrinkled from their long voyage, were ranged around the walls of the importer's rooms.

What a great moment it is when we get our first sniff of the flower bed of French fashions! This year, too, great international complications had given these blooms from the ateliers of Jenny and Paquin, Drecol and Lanvin, a new flavor. The buyer who had brought them over from Paris had worn a life belt every moment of that perilous journey. No wonder he looked at the models for which he had practically risked his life with the same tender light in his eyes that a shepherd gives to his flock! No wonder that there was a kind of granulated quality to his voice as he said to one of the inquisitive manufacturers of ready to wear, "Mr. Perlmutter, please do not touch that Jenny gown!"

As for us fashion writers, great tears of joy beaded down our worn faces. No wonder! For the last few weeks things have been rather dull for the poor fashion writer. It was between seasons time and we had all been working hard to make a little grass of fashion come up from the Gibraltar of absolute dullness. Now here was something to write about!

In looking through these first offerings of the spring fashion season one was immediately impressed by the comparatively small number of Directoire gowns. As a matter of fact, Jenny, who has, during the last few years, swung up to the highest point of authority, has gone to the other extreme. She has actually lowered the waist line and has given us, in many instance, a long, slim garment which falls straight from shoulder to hem, with only a perfunctory and unconfining girdle about the hips. It is more like the Egyptian silhouette than the mediaeval and one is tempted to predict that we shall all be going about looking like the priestess of Isis rather than the gay, short waisted woman of the Directoire and the First Empire. Paquin, too, has frowned on the raised waist line and in his creations, as well as those of Drecoll, one sees a return to the old faith of the physiology text books. Both show the natural waist map.

In two of the creations drawn today this tendency is well illustrated. The woman at the left is wearing a three piece suit of Jenny's. Just at present she is muffled in the coat to this garment. This three piece garment is a combination of navy blue gabardine with polka dotted blue foulard. The entire bodice of the frock is of the silk, and that is saying a great deal, for the bodice extends clear to the hip line, where it joins—after a little parley with two narrow girdles of gabardine—the plaited skirt. The jacket, one of the popular finger tip length, is set off with the same foulard. A novel feature is the projection of the foulard pocket lining an inch or so below the coat.

Either with or without the wrap, this frock is an excellent example of the long, straight lines sponsored by Jenny. We have the companion frock by Drecoll at the right. Foulard again, you ask? Most certainly, yes. Every time the fashion bell rings this year in trimming it chimes either metallic embroidery or foulard. This particular frock is made of a new design to which the artist has not done justice. Instead of being a plain color with white coin dots, the wily fabric maker has been greedy to get in every point of style and so has combined checks with dots. As a result we have that versatile thing—a plaided, polka dotted foulard. We found this same pattern in many of the late models worked out in a variety of colors. Here dark brown checks alternate with light brown checks that melt into the tete de negre of the chiffon overdress.

Although not shown here, the chiffon is draped over an entire foulard frock and below the chiffon sleeves smolder elbow length silk sleeves finished with the same brown fringe which appears on the hem of the frock. And, speaking of sleeves, the proper ceremonial connected with these accessories seems to be long for suits and short for afternoon frocks. Also, Jenny and Paquin have introduced a novelty in the form of a long sleeve widened at the wrist.

As a rule when "gentle spring, ethereal mildness," comes, we molt all those metallic embroideries of our winter fineries. Not so this year, however! Shades of Ali Baba and his treasure house, but we never have seen so many different kinds of metallic trimmings—often, in fact, three or four sorts of metal combined to make one ornament. Sometimes a new whimsy occurs for showing the core of the thread as a spiral.

A woman who has hung herself from bough to bough with glitter is the fashion person in the center of the page. She is wearing, this fashion person, a suit from Lanvin, who always gets more of the spirit of youth into her clothes than any other of the great Paris group.

Like the costume by Jenny, shown on this page, Lanvin's frock of black gabardine has a coat to match. The fact of it is that no little garment is allowed this season to catch cold by going out without a coat or cape to match. Here the bodice partially hidden by the wrap is a ducky little one which buttons to the skirt. Rather shorter than the waist line of the other two costumes shown today, this bodice hikes up in the back and is snipped here and there in the cutest way. The sleeves of the bodice are elbow length and are supplemented by the long sleeves of an exquisite organdy guimpe, the collar of which shows here over the jacket.

Both bodice and coat provide, however, only an admirable excuse for the rich embroidery of silver. This silver embroidery, togther with the cut of the wrap, recall those picturesque little coats which the Greek guards wear with their white kilted skirts. It all goes to show that in finding a new style the designers have roamed from Patagonia to Bagdad.

The SUCCESSFUL HOME GARDEN

This department appears daily and Sunday in "The Tribune." Inquiries from readers desiring through neighborhood and back yard gardens to decrease the cost of living should be addressed to The Garden Editor.

PRUNING FRUIT TREES AND VINES.

THE necessity of pruning is no longer in dispute. It remains only to familiarize ourselves with the proper time and methods. The object of pruning trees, on the whole, similar to that of pruning ornamental shrubs, explained last Sunday.

Six principal factors determine the fruitfulness of trees and vines—the parent stock, climatic conditions, the unnatural atmospheric conditions of industrial centers, tilling, fertilizing, and pruning and spraying. Disregarding any of these points results in stunted, misshapen growth and a reduced harvest of inferior fruit.

Trees and vines that have been much neglected will need radical pruning to give them new thrift and vigor. The reduced top will receive the allowance of sap formerly distributed through more numerous branches. The sap formerly needed to sustain the excess of wood and foliage will be available for more and better fruit.

First cut out the dead wood, close to the limb or trunk. Then cut away such wood as throws the tree out of balance and remove the imperfect or interfering branches.

In pruning young trees, do so with a definite ultimate form in mind. Have three to five principal branches with no two of them branching from the trunk at the same height. Thus weakening crotches are eliminated. In making large cuts, the branch must be removed as closely as possible to its parent that the wood may heal over readily. Painting the wound even in large amputations is not advisable; it merely tends to retard the healing process.

If the gardener understands the position of fruit buds he can reduce the tree without sacrificing desirable wood. For instance, the peach fruits mostly on last season's long shoots, while the pear fruits largely on old spurs. If it is desired to induce outward spread trim to an outside bud; if upward growth, to an inside bud. As a rule, the former is the best practice.

The lightest and most convenient ladder for tree pruning is of bamboo, with a wide base and pointed at the top. For the rest a pruning saw, a pair of lop shears, and the small one hand shears mentioned last Sunday, are the most necessary tools.

To understand clearly the reason for the approved modern methods of pruning grape vines it must be borne in mind that the fruit will issue from wood to be grown this year, which will spring from wood grown last year. Hence there must be buds left on last year's growth for the coming sprouts.

The trunk is grown to the desired height, leaving a cane of last year's growth on either side at each wire in the trellis. Each such cane should have three or four buds and should not be allowed to cling to the wire by means of the tendrils. Every part of the wood not necessary to insure a succession of 1 year old canes, as near the trunk as possible, should be removed and burned at once. Indeed, the prunings from all trees and shrubs should be promptly destroyed in this manner, to minimize the danger of infecting the healthy growth.

The indications are that there will still be much frost in the ground. Hence both fruit trees and vines are still dormant and may safely be pruned, but it should be done without delay.

Immediately after pruning it is necessary to spray now with a lime sulphur solution all fruit trees, grape vines, and fruiting shrubs. Ornamental trees and shrubs that show any indication of San José scale or other scale and fungus diseases must be thoroughly gone over. It will be found that elms, hawthorns, crab apples, and lilacs are particularly apt to be infested in this vicinity.

When the buds begin to swell in about two weeks, the same trees, and shrubs should again be thoroughly gone over with lime-sulphur spray to give the finishing stroke to the insects as may then be still able to issue from their hiding places. The lime-sulphur solution, in concentrated form, may be purchased at the larger seed stores in cans containing one quart and upward. It is inexpensive, and is diluted with water in the proportion which should be indicated on the can. As sprayers, those recommended for Bordeaux mixture in THE TRIBUNE of March 20 will prove entirely serviceable.

NEWEST HATS AND HOW TO MAKE THEM.

FINISHED HAT WITH TAILORED ORNAMENT OF FAILLE RIBBON.

Now that every woman is supremely interested in the question of hats, this department is to be devoted entirely to millinery for the next few weeks. Various hats will be shown with adequate and detailed instructions as to how to make them and in what manner to trim them. Later on, the embroidery designs and needlework articles of various sorts for spring and summer use will appear again.

THE little hat shown today is a modification of the familiar tricorne—a conservative, close fitting model, becoming to almost all faces.

A smooth braid one inch wide is used, and one-quarter yard of satin for the top of the crown. The crown and brim are in two separate pieces, and before beginning the work the stitching should be ripped and crown and brim separated.

Allow a piece of satin about 9x11 inches and a piece of soft material such as canton flannel, outing flannel, or old soft muslin of the same size for the top of the crown. Using an interlining under the satin softens the effect and prevents frame showing through the satin.

These two pieces of material are put on at the same time, stretched smoothly over the top, and sewed down around the side crown about three-quarters of an inch from the top. Trim edges off carefully close to this stitching.

The side crown is of braid and we will start to sew this at the top. Beginning at middle of back just at curve between top and side crown sew braid on with close, even stitches one-eighth inch from top edge. Pull cord in upper edge of braid so it will fit smoothly around curve of crown. When braid is brought around to back again cover the end carefully and slope gradually down to form the second row, which will overlap the first about one-quarter of an inch.

Continue in this way until entire side crown is covered, then run the braid off and turn up inside of crown, fastening securely.

The braid is sewed on the inside of brim first and outside last. First bind the edge with a strip of braid, beginning at center back, and when you have completed this circle slope braid off gradually on inner brim to begin a second circle. In this second circle the upper edge of braid should come exactly even with the bound edge of the hat. Succeeding rows will lap one-fourth of an inch and be sewn one-eighth of an inch from top edge.

Since one side of the brim is much higher than the other, it will take more rows of braid to cover it. When two rows have been completed on the narrow side, take a new end of braid and insert under piece being sewn—call No. 1. Carry this braid all around hat until narrow part is reached again, lapping upper row and sewing in the usual way. Cut off and fasten end. Then take up piece No. 1 again, slope it gradually down to cover end of inserted piece and sew in place. When other end of piece No. 2 is reached cover it in the same way.

Continue rows of braid far enough down so that none of brim will show when crown is in. Then begin on outside at top and follow same method—making first row come exactly at bound edge of brim and inserting extra piece of braid as in inside brim.

When braid is all sewed on set crown back in place and sew to head size of brim heavy thread.

The only trimming for this hat is a smart little tailored ornament made from black faille ribbon.

Cover with black satin a piece of buckram 3½ inches long, 2 inches wide at top, and 1½ inches at bottom. This is the foundation to sew the ribbon on. One and one-quarter yards of 2 inch ribbon are required. Sideplait two 18 inch pieces in half inch plaits and sew to buckram foundation, one 1½ inches down from top and second 3 inches from top. A small tailored bow made with just two loops and a cross piece finishes the lower part of the ornament.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

LOOKING FOR A POSITION.

"I'M off of employment agencies for life! I've been stung once, and if ever I'm in need of another job I'll use a different method to get it."

This announcement was made by a young girl of scant experience as a worker, but who invariably calls herself a "business girl." In explanation of her ultimatum she confessed that she had taken in good faith and without a written statement the promise of the agency to charge only one week's salary for the position, but, contrary to her expectations, they demanded, and finally received, the equivalent of six weeks' salary.

Garrett Price

If a working girl is so careless and stupid about her own business affairs she can scarcely expect her employer to intrust her with any except the simplest of routine duties.

A reader of the column who is interested in "the girl without a job" gives some good and pertinent advice. Make a note of her instructions and be governed by them if ever you have to deal with an employment agency:

"I would like to warn the uninitiated to beware of the employment agencies that do not have their rules down in black and white. It looks interesting and sort of comfy and cozy to walk in and be treated like "one of the family," but business is business and in the end you may pay more than you anticipate by not having a thorough understanding.

"I do not know why there are no laws as to what employment agencies may charge, but I do know that the charges vary and after going the rounds one is apt to confuse their standards of payment unless it is written down. And then, too, the agency force may misspeak themselves—and what are you going to do about it? Of course, while the world exists and the gentler sex must go out in it, the agencies will probably flourish and the girls and women will give up their money in order to get more.

"Read over carefully what you put your signature to, and if you are sent out on a position have it understood—and written down by the agency—what the terms are to be. Put the question up to it as to what the charge will be if your employer decides to part with your valuable services in a week or two; or you decide that you would feel more at home elsewhere. That is business. You will find out that the unbusinesslike agency head is most businesslike when it comes to collecting her fees, and will set a price of her own after she once sends you out, unless you have an arrangement before hand. She can charge you 1 or 10 per cent for temporary service, and I understand a full week's wages if she wishes. And what redress have you?

"Do not have so hurried an interview with your future employer that you cannot ask him, if you make good (providing the starting salary is less than you have received for several years), whether there is chance for promotion. Perhaps the agency has told you the position will pay you any price you make yourself worth, but as that is rather ambiguous you will find by experience that the employer knows more about his own affairs than the woman in charge of the agency.

"Thorough understandings at the beginning are worth their weight in gold after you have toiled for a spell. However, if you do obligate yourself, by all means live up to your agreement.

Prof. Hertzog Praises This Perfect Laxative

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an Ideal Remedy for Constipation.

In every family there is more or less occasion for a laxative remedy. It is to meet this need that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is prepared, and that this combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin fulfills its purpose is proven by its place in thousands of American homes.

Prof. F. J. C. Hertzog, the well known linguist, 2341 North Orianna St., Philadelphia, Pa., wrote to Dr. Caldwell that he has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in his household with excellent results and that he and his family consider it indeed a friend in need, and always keep a bottle of it on hand.

Constipation is the direct cause of much serious illness and is a condition that should never be neglected. Harsh cathartics and violent purgatives should never be employed to relieve constipation, because the very violence of their action shocks the entire system. A mild laxative, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable, being mild and gentle in its action, without griping or other pain or discomfort; its freedom from all opiate or narcotic drugs makes it an ideal remedy for children.

Prof. F. J. C. Hertzog. A.M.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in drug stores everywhere for fifty cents a bottle. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure to get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

Varied Activities of Women.

Mrs. Maude Samuels, town marshal of Riverside City, Ind., is the first woman to hold such a position in that state.

Ellanora de Graph Lochner, who buys and sells real estate, is claimed to have the largest income of any woman in New York.

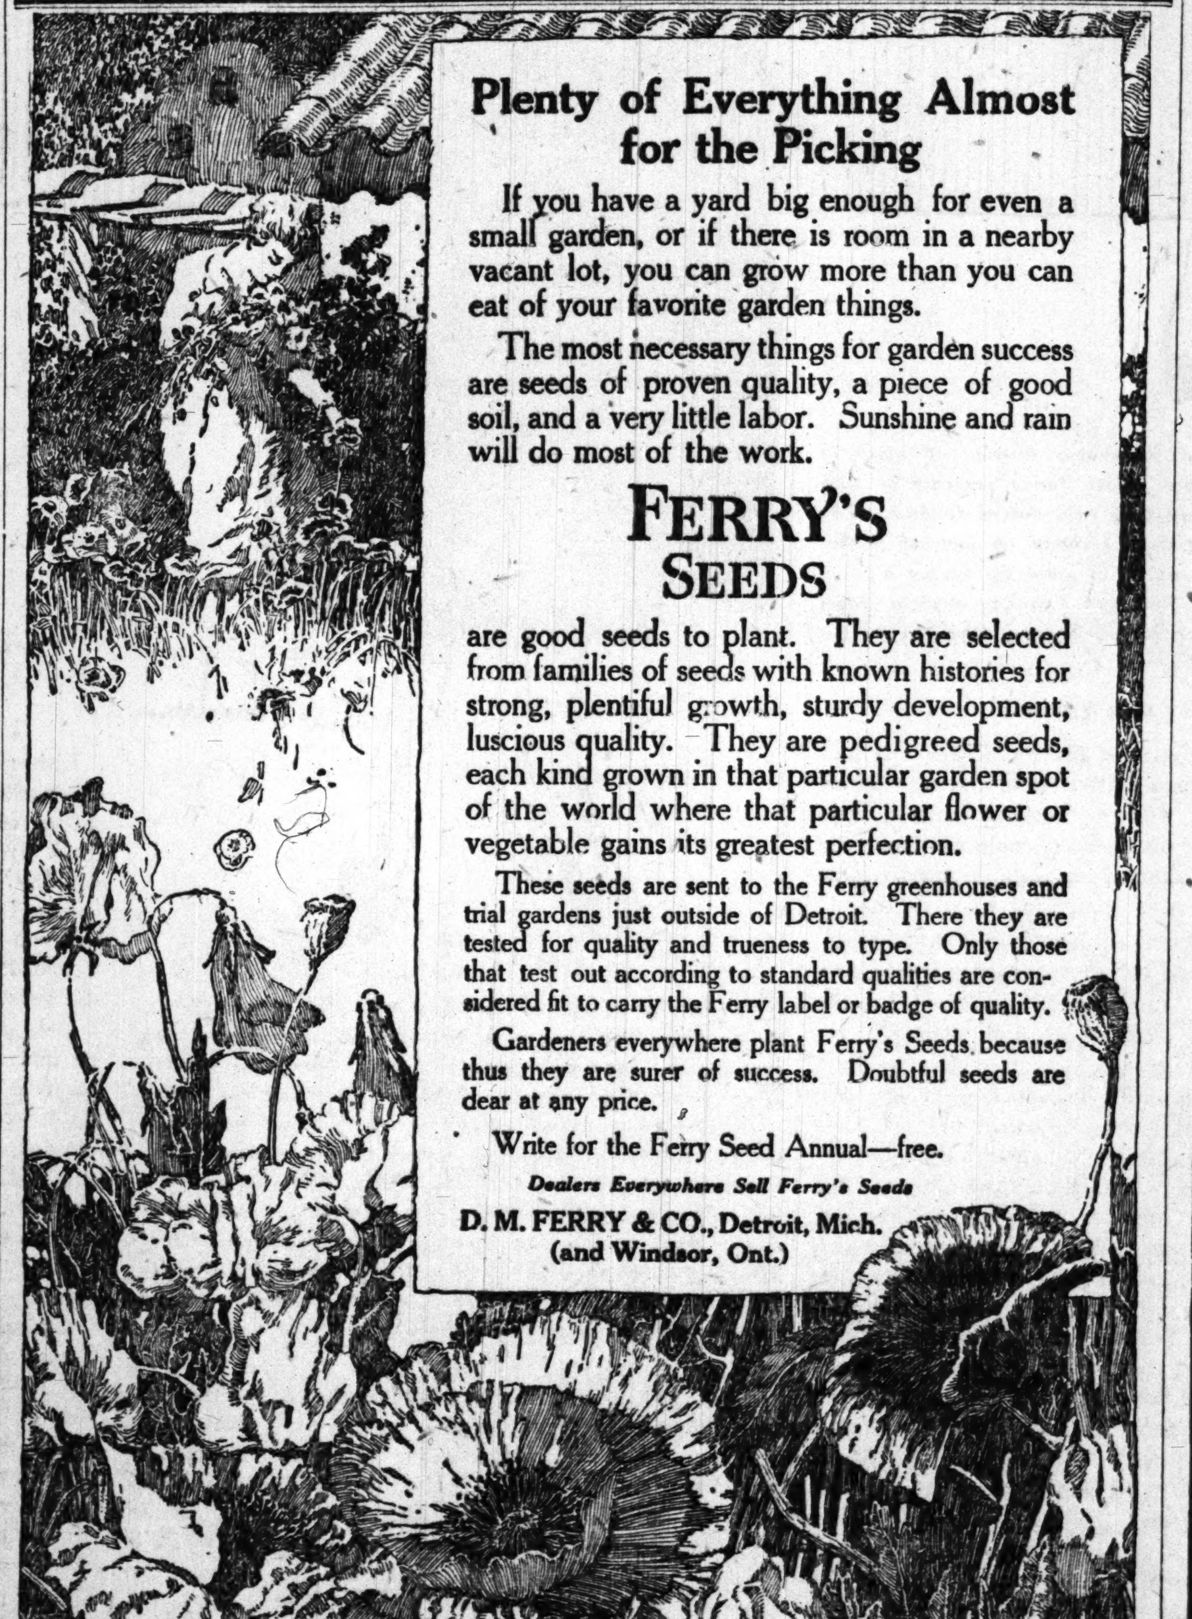
The Fashion Art league has decreed that a woman must spend $653 for clothes if she's to be properly dressed this year.

Twenty Des Moines women have been given permits to carry revolvers and advised by the chief of police to shoot men who insult them.

Dr. Johanna Westerdyk, recently appointed to the chair of plant pathology at the University of Utrecht, is Holland's first woman professor.

Miss Elizabeth C. White, daughter of Joseph White, the New Jersey "cranberry king," has for years specialized in blueberry culture and has developed a berry three-quarters of an inch in diameter. She has dozens of acres laid out in the fruit—the working of which she superintends personally.

Mrs. Sallie J. Franham of New York, has received a commission from the government of Venezuela to make a statue of Simon Bolivar, the liberator, which is to be presented to the city of New York by that government as a token of friendship and admiration.



Plenty of Everything Almost for the Picking

If you have a yard big enough for even a small garden, or if there is room in a nearby vacant lot, you can grow more than you can eat of your favorite garden things.

The most necessary things for garden success are seeds of proven quality, a piece of good soil, and a very little labor. Sunshine and rain will do most of the work.

FERRY'S SEEDS

are good seeds to plant. They are selected from families of seeds with known histories for strong, plentiful growth, sturdy development, luscious quality. They are pedigreed seeds, each kind grown in that particular garden spot of the world where that particular flower or vegetable gains its greatest perfection.

These seeds are sent to the Ferry greenhouses and trial gardens just outside of Detroit. There they are tested for quality and trueness to type. Only those that test out according to standard qualities are considered fit to carry the Ferry label or badge of quality.

Gardeners everywhere plant Ferry's Seeds because thus they are surer of success. Doubtful seeds are dear at any price.

REAL LOVE STORIES

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

HIS BROTHER'S GIRL.

"WILL you take Marie out riding tonight?" asked my brother of me one day as we were going to lunch. I hesitated in answering, as I could not just understand the question. My brother, Frank, had had many love affairs, each to result in an engagement, only to be broken later, he possessed such a jealous disposition, which was the usual cause for his many love affairs, and, knowing him as I did, I could not understand why he should ask me to take his girl for a ride.

This happened over twenty years ago, when automobiles were not so common and when the good old horse and buggy played the part of matchmaker.

I liked Marie, had known her for years, she was always good company, an agreeable, bright, well educated girl, always popular in any gathering. But I had bachelor tendencies and had never gone in mixed crowds to any extent, and did not care to take any girl out riding. However, I agreed to take Marie for a drive if it would be an accommodation to Frank. So I asked if I should phone her and was told all that would be necessary for me to do was to be ready at 6:30, as the rig would be waiting.

We went home together that evening and, as I started to leave the house, my brother approached me with a small package in his hand and asked me to give it to Marie for him. Perhaps I showed some suspicion, for Frank at once explained that the package contained Marie's engagement ring, and I inquired why I should hand it to her. His only explanation was that he had had to have it changed on account of size and wished me to do this errand for him. I was somewhat puzzled over all that was happening, but went ahead.

Soon I drove up to Marie's house and, after helping her to her seat, we started for our drive. It was a beautiful evening and for some time we drove out over the country pikes, and I was enjoying myself so much that I quite forgot the ring. Finally I told her of the package I had for her and gave it to her. She opened the box, put the ring on, seemingly admired it, and I wanted to ask her why I was out riding with her and why I should do this errand. It became late before I realized it and soon we were driving home. Upon reaching her house I bid her good night and expressed myself as best I could of the pleasure of the ride and went home.

Some time later Frank and I were talking in our room at home when he carelessly took a small package out of his pocket. He asked if I remembered it and I asked what it was. His answer was "Ninety bucks," and, opening the box displayed the ring I had previously given Marie for him.

"Is it all off?" I inquired.

"Yes."

"What about the ring?"

"It's for sale."

"How much?"

"Ninety bucks."

"Sold," and I wrote him a check for it. I had been away for some months and was not familiar with the gossip of our town, but, not wishing to ask Frank too much, soon learned of the broken engagement. A jealous lover, was the answer.

After being assured that there was no reconciliation possible, I picked up the phone one day and called up Marie.

"Would you like to take another drive?" I asked.

"Yes, sure."

"May we start earlier, say 4 o'clock?"

"Yes, and I will prepare a bite to eat."

We went and had a fine drive until about 8 o'clock, when I could keep still no longer. We were driving over the same road as before, and I started by reminding her of our other ride, and recited the many incidents that were exactly the same as before; we even had the same horse. Finally I asked: "Are you superstitious?" And she answered in the negative.

"Marie, will you accept this same ring I gave you once before, only coming from me this time?"

The ring was placed on the proper finger and I was happy.

"Marie," I said, "you are alone at present, your folks are all away, what do you say to getting married tonight, leave on a late train for Denver, and spend our honeymoon where no one will know us or can find us?"

Back we drove, her suitcase packed, I phoned for mine, and a rush to the clerk's house, down to the courthouse, preacher next, on to the station, and we were gone.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Headstrong.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF your birthday falls during the week beginning today you are well under the influence of Aries, the Ram. Your tribe is Gad, of which it is said, "Lo, a troop cometh," fitly expressing your impetuous and unconquerable energy. And the meaning is "armed and prepared," indicating the insight and reasoning powers you possess.

The sun is strong in this sign and its planets are Neptune, Uranus and Mars, which in turn control the inmost recesses of mind and spirit, giving a poet's soul; tend to lift your thoughts from a material basis to one more mental and spiritual; and, lastly, adding patriotism and love of humanity and of the family.

Like the symbol of your sign, you are lively, and energetic, extremely fond of dancing and music. When you enter a fight it is with the idea of winning and nothing can induce you to back out. Inasmuch as you can be influenced only through your reasoning powers, you get the reputation of being extremely stubborn. Your desire to conquer, whether it be difficulties or people, makes you a good soldier or commander.

You have a great desire to spread your knowledge, which makes you a natural teacher, lecturer and writer, and you seem to have an intuitive knowledge of the natures of those with whom you come in contact, so that you can deliver lessons in such a magnetic way that all are interested.

You are rather subject to bursts of eloquence, wit, and learning quite beyond your ordinary capabilities, but can always be depended upon to keep up an interesting line of conversation. You are much annoyed by inharmonious surroundings, so much so that they sometimes cause an attack of "nerves," but the best and surest cure for you is rest and quiet.

You cannot work well under others, for to attain satisfactory results you must be left to work out methods in your own way. Inasmuch as you are naturally executive, you can be counted upon to carry to completion whatever you begin.

In your love affairs you are apt to be fickle until you really find some one whom you love more than yourself. Before this you are a little too critical and restless, but once in love, all changes for you. It will go mighty hard for you to be disappointed in your affairs of heart, but you won't let such an experience make you blue and sour; on the other hand, you will grow all the broader minded and more generous as a result. Your immediate disposition to conquer makes this possible, no matter how forlorn the prospect may seem.

Your marriage with a Sagittarius person, Nov. 23-Dec. 22, provided your bringing up was the same, would be a happy combination, or with one of your own sign, March 22-April 20; Gemini, May 22-June 22, and Leo, July 23-Aug. 23, are also congenial friends.

April 13 and Nov. 29 are the two most fortunate times in the year for you to begin new enterprises. Your colors are blue, pink and white; your birthstones, diamond and amethyst. You will find success in many fields—as a judge or lawyer, teacher, merchant, financier, business manager, architect, contractor or artist.

He's Going to Get Fudge.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16 and have quite a few boy friends. I like to keep company with all, but do not want a steady, as my mother does not approve of it. Also, one of my friends is in the hospital. Would it be proper for me to take him a box of fudge when he is able to have company? "EYES."

It depends upon the nature of his illness whether or not the fudge would be an acceptable gift. It seems to me it would be far nicer for you to send him some flowers or a potted plant now and not go to see him. Your mother has the right idea, and you will be far happier if you continue to enjoy the company of all the boys and girls, just as you have been doing. Honest, I mean it! And I know!

Do Not Specialize.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 years old, and I attend high school. There is a young man attending the same school as I do whom I like very much. He is in most of my classes. I have a girl friend who also likes him, but he has offered to take me home and has given me several invitations to parties. He has asked to take me to a party. Do you think I ought to go? Do you think I would be treating my girl friend fair? F. O."

"All is fair," etc., you know, and there's no reason in the world why you should refrain from accepting his invitations on account of your girl friend, provided, of course, that your mother has no objections. If he chooses to take your friend once in a while, don't take it as a personal matter to be held against either. In other words, get over the idea that specialization is necessary to friendship with boys.

Appropriate Gifts.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you kindly inform me what is an appropriate birthday gift for a boy of 15? Also, for a girl of 17? Thanking you kindly. C. C."

Why don't you send him a subscription to some boys' magazine or a set of adventure books? For the girl, some flowers, provided, C. C., you're a boy; otherwise, let it be something fluffy in bags or silk scarfs, or some pretty little framed picture suitable for a girl's room.

He's Heartbroken.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy of 19, and I and a girl of 16 were deeply in love for nine months, yet we did not see each other too often, only about once a month, and we used to correspond with each other at least once a week. We sent our letters through a boy friend of ours, but about two months ago he went to another town and we had to cease writing to each other, as we had no one else to send our correspondence with.

"And though we had fallen in love, we have never had a chance to see each other to speak privately of what we wish to say, except in our letters, and which are not so good as "personally." We do not live far from each other, only when she is coming to the town where I live she has to come by boat.

"And, Miss Blake, now I have learned that she is in love with a next boy, who lives the same place where I live. Tell me, how can I prevent her from loving this boy? She has not told me she has given me up. In nearly all of her letters she told me that I am the only boy she ever loved, and that only death could separate her from me, and that her life will be absolutely worth nothing to her when I die.

"I forgot to say in the above that I learned it's a fact that she is really in love with the next boy. I am heart broken, and I feel life is not worth living. H. L."

This sort of second hand information should not be taken so seriously, my dear friend. Naturally, I'd like to know why you cannot arrange to see each other or to correspond directly without the necessity of the go-between. Believe her until she tells you definitely to the contrary, and remember that a girl of 16 is likely to change her mind.

Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Hints.

BRIGHT EYES: FREQUENT WETting of the hair to make it set smoothly is not good for it. In addition to producing a doubtful esthetic effect, this practice tends to cause decomposition of the roots. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for oily hair if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

CLARA: IF WILL POWER WILL not act as an aid in overcoming the habit of biting your nails, then I suggest your resorting to the remedy used on children, bitter aloes. After it is on your nails and you have once raised them to your lips you are not likely to do it the second time. Keep them nicely manicured and then you will be so proud of them that it will never be a temptation to bite them again.

* *

MARIE: PAINFUL CORNS ON the bottom of the foot may be treated by putting several layers of adhesive plaster in a kind of cushion over the corn. This device keeps the corn protected from friction, and it will gradually disappear. One hundred and forty pounds is a trifle heavy for a girl 5 feet 4 inches at 18. She should weigh 123 pounds.

JESSIE: WARTS ARE PECULIAR little growths in the skin that frequently disappear as oddly as they develop. Sometimes they respond to treatment and sometimes they don't. It is an extremely rare thing for a wart to develop into a dangerous growth. I shall be glad to send you my formula for removing moles if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

FRANCES: A GIRL 5 FEET 6 inches at the age of 18 should weigh 128 pounds. I am printing my formula for curling fluid: One ounce of gum arabic and half an ounce of moist sugar; dissolve in three-quarters of a pint of water. When dissolved add two ounces of rosewater and shake thoroughly. Bottle and use when required. You can dampen your hair with this fluid before using the curling tongs or kid curlers. I suggest that you consult your physician about the lump on your nose. He would know what to tell you to do for it after he has seen it.

JENNIE: THE DRY AND PARCHED condition of your lips may be caused by some local disturbance of the stomach. Look well to your diet and see that your bowels are in a healthy condition. Drink lots of water. A glass of water taken the first thing in the morning is excellent for cleansing the stomach. Rub your lips night and morning with a good cold cream, and before you go out in the air.

ANNABELLE: IF YOUR SKIN IS inclined to be greasy avoid chocolate, either as a candy or as a drink, on account of the natural fats contained in the product. I shall be glad to send you my formula for oiliness of the skin if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

The Best Kept Hands I've Ever Seen belong to a woman who does all her own housework

THE all 'round best looking pair of hands I've ever seen belong not to a society woman nor to a professional model but to a woman who has been married six years, has two children, and who since her marriage has done every bit of her housework. She is Mrs. Richard R. Survaunt, 2009 Aubert avenue, Chicago.

Her hands are beautifully shaped, with fingers that taper and nails of almond shape and as pink and white and lovely as nails could possibly be kept. The skin of her hands is white and smooth and as fine grained as the skin or the face of a beautiful young girl.

Only one manicuring in her life has Mrs. Survaunt ever had, and that was to find out how it was done. But you may drop in on her any day, wash day, cleaning day, or any other day, and be treated to a view of nails that look as if they were just withdrawn from a buffer in the hands of a professional manicurist.

Perhaps you imagine Mrs. Survaunt's nails and hands "just happen" this way, as some people have beautiful complexions in spite of injudicious choosing of foods and indifferent care of their skin. Or perhaps you think she isn't much of a housekeeper or she couldn't keep her hands looking like that; that she must slump on the cleansing and the scrubbing and the dishwashing. You're wrong if that's your guess.

Her apartment from beginning to end is kept immaculately clean. Her kitchen floor and sink are of the proverbial whiteness which makes appetites more ravenous, and the kitchen stove shines bright and clean. And every housewife knows that keeping the kitchen clean causes her more worry over her hands and nails than any other feature of housework.

All of which goes to prove that one can scrub and scour, wash and iron and clean vegetables and still have hands that can be kept proudly above the bridge board, instead of hidden away under it as "underdone lobsters."

"I have always taken a good deal of pride in my hands," says Mrs. Survaunt, "because I have received more compliments about them than about any other feature. So that taking care of them has become a sort of second nature.

"I have been only once to a manicurist," she added, "and that was to find out how 'twas done. That was a long time ago. Since then I have always given myself at least one manicuring a week and oftentimes two. This regularity makes the work of keeping the hands nice a comparatively easy thing.

"About six years ago a druggist friend of mine gave me a formula for keeping the skin of my hands in good condition. It is equal parts of glycerin and camphor. Every night I rub this well into my hands. Then I do not have to wear gloves at night. That's why I prefer to use it instead of a cold cream. It has happened occasionally when I let myself run out of the glycerin and camphor that I have been forced to use the cream, which I would rather do, however, than to let my hands go for a day without applying something to keep the skin soft and smooth. The camphor keeps the skin white.

"I use loose cotton gloves for dusting and sweeping, and when I scrub, clean the stove, or pare vegetables I wear rubber gloves. I tried wearing gloves when I washed the dishes, but I like better to wash them without, but I am careful not to let the water get too dirty and greasy, and I use a plain white soap in the process, making the suds with a soap shaker. The strong cleansing solutions I do not use in this work. Also, I do not have the water too hot.

"When I am through with the dishwashing I wash my hands and dry them thoroughly. If there is a sign of stain upon them I rub lemon juice over them. And I am careful not to go outdoors until my hands are thoroughly dry.

"I never scrape a pot or pan or dish with my finger nails. I keep an old clothespin on the sink for this detail.

"My manicure tools are simple and inexpensive. I never use a metal instrument to clean my nails. I use an orange wood stick. I have a nail file, of course, to trim my nails. I use the orange wood stick, the tip of which is wrapped in a bit of cotton and dipped in peroxide of hydrogen to remove stain or any discoloration under the nails. I early acquired the habit of pushing back the cuticle around the nails when drying them after one of their daily washings. Sometimes I use the orange cuticle stick for this purpose—always when I give my nails their regular manicuring.

"For the manicuring I first wash my hands thoroughly clean. Then let them dry well enough so that filing the nails may be done easily. Then I file them, letting the shape follow the shape of the finger tip. I take off with an emery board the little remnants of under cuticle or inside nail that remains. Also, I use the emery board for smoothing out the filed surfaces of the finger nail tips. Then I clean the nails with the orange wood stick, the tip of which is wrapped in cotton dipped in peroxide of hydrogen.

"After this. I soak my fingers in a bowl of warm, soapy water until the cuticle is softened. Then I push back the cuticle around the nails, using the orange wood stick. I never cut the cuticle with the scissors, but I use the scissors on an unruly hangnail. Before pushing back the cuticle I dab on a tiny bit of cold cream or vaseline. This keeps the cuticle soft. Then I apply a little nail polish and proceed to use the buffer on my nails until they shine. Then I scrub the nails thoroughly with a nail brush in the warm, soapy water, dry thoroughly, and then give a last polish with the dry palm of my hand.

"The palm of the hand is a convenient polisher. You can become so expert you can raise a shine in a minute or two any time you want one."

Keep Mrs. Survaunt in mind next time you get a "grouch" on because you have to do housework and "spoil your hands."

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

When an address or other information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to the newspaper office.

Quilt Pieces, Music, and Recitations.

"I HAVE seen in the Corner an offer to give silk pieces or scraps to some one who needs them. I know of an invalid too poor to buy anything of the sort. She is able to piece, and if the pieces can be sent to her I shall return the postage to the sender and the invalid will be glad to get them. You may also have readers who can donate music. I know poor, struggling musicians who cannot afford music pieces or books and if these are sent to me I will give them where needed. Who has some funny recitations, especially Negro, Irish, and German, they could send? I will gladly make some exchange with them or whatever return I can. SUBSCRIBER."

The name of the friend offering the pieces is not given, so that I have no means of tracing her, but it may be that some one else will have such scraps to give away and I shall be happy to mail to such a one or to any one who has music to bestow or recitations to send the address of "Subscriber" on receipt of a request for it.

Flower Seeds Wanted.

"The Helping Hand is the first thing I turn to in opening the paper. It is such a wonderful help and I have had so many good ideas from it. I have been able to help some of the readers, and I wonder if I could find some one who would exchange some flower bulbs or seeds for quilt pieces or embroidery patterns. MRS. J. R. B."

Judging from the number of pleas we have for quilt pieces and embroidery patterns, I should think there would be no difficulty in arranging for such an exchange.

Playing with Dolls.

"I am sending for the address of the little girl who wished material for doll's clothes that I may supply her. When I was a little girl how I used to want such materials! I think all little girls should be encouraged to play with dolls and to learn to make clothes for them. I am not favorably disposed towards the substitution of a Teddy bear for a doll. It has been my observation that the little girls who like to play with dolls and make clothes for them when they grow up make mothers who take good care of their children. MRS. M. B. C."

I agree with this correspondent in her preference for the doll rather than the Teddy bear. I confess I have never been able to recognize the fascination of this especial toy, and my old fashioned heart clings to the doll as a plaything for a child.

Harvey, Write Home!

"Inclosed please find a picture of my brother and myself which I should like to have put into the Corner. I think my brother went to Chicago, as we have not seen or heard from him in some weeks. He is fond of reading the paper, and I think if he knew how anxious we are to have him come home he would write to us or let us know where he is. If he won't come home, I wish he would write to his sister or to his home. I would be glad to reward any one who would furnish any information about him. His name is Harvey Hild and he has been living in Quincy, Ill. "MRS. H. H."

Such letters as these have often aided in locating wanderers, and I hope the same result may be gained in this case. Unfortunately we are not able to print the pictures sent, but I trust the publication of the above notice may avail to bring the absent one back to his home or at least move him to write to his sister of her whereabouts. Her address will be sent to any one who thinks he or she can supply information of the brother.

To Help Pass the Time.

"An invalid suffering from an incurable disease, who must live in a desert for the sake of maintaining existence and is unable to have anything to make his life a little easier to bear, would appreciate it greatly if some of the readers would send him reading matter or anything to help him pass the time. "C. A. C."

An appeal like this is sure to meet a prompt and generous response. I should think that not only reading matter would be acceptable, but puzzle pictures, solitaire games of various sorts, and other articles on the same order. I shall be happy to supply the address of this sufferer on receipt of a request for it.

Crocheting a Rug.

"I will be more than glad to have worn silk for a rug. I have been ill for two months and it will help pass the lonely hours if I can crochet a rug. I will also be glad to have worn hair ribbons for my two little girls. I would piece quilts in return, as I cannot do fancy work. MRS. O. M."

This correspondent's address will be gladly given to some one who can supply her needs and will write to me for her address. Those of us who are well and strong should always be in readiness to help those who are shut in and who long for some kind of handiwork that will help to make the tiresome days pass more quickly. I am sure there must be some hair ribbons for the little girls, and if they are washed and pressed before they are sent they will be received with double gratitude.

Helps in the Household.

"Thank you so much for the Corner and for the valuable helps and suggestions is contains. I give here a few hints which may be of assistance to some of the Cornerites: A tablespoon of vinegar added to the water in which you are cooking meat or fowl will make it cook more tender. If a kerosene lamp makes the chimneys smoke, remove the wicks from the burners and boil the burners for about one hour in water to which has been added a spoonful of washing soda, and the lamps will give a bright light. A tablespoon of salt put into the lamp with the oil will prevent explosion. If any of the Cornerites have more quilt scraps than they care to use, I will greatly appreciate a package, either of cotton, wool, or silk. My health is poor, and I enjoy piecing quilts. In exchange I can give a few samples of crochet and a few embroidery designs to be transferred with carbon paper. "MRS. D. S."

These household hints should be of aid to more than one housekeeper, and I trust that the housekeeper who sends them may receive the silk, cotton, and woolen pieces she wishes.

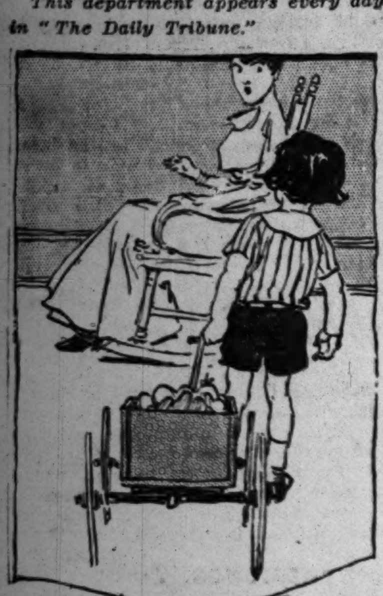
Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.



One day Buster was sent to a neighbor's with some apples and sweet corn in his little wagon, and on leaving home asked his mother if he should ask for some cucumbers, of which he was very fond.

"No, no," said mother.

"Shall I take some if she offers them to me?" he wanted to know.

"Well," said mother, "if she does be sure and thank her for them."

On returning home his wagon was full of cucumbers, onions, and tomatoes. He came running to mother saying: "I didn't ask for anything; I just said that I knew mamma would be awfully tickled because she wasn't expecting anything but cucumbers." MRS. A. J.

Passing a group of "young America" I scented a quarrel, so stood nearby to watch developments. One Spartan with clinched fists went up to another chap, taller than himself, and said threateningly, "Don't get fresh or I'll knock you hard; I'm a year oldern you." Then came this answer: "You just try it. Why, don't you know it ain't the oldness what counts; it's the bigness." O. G.

Our neighbor's little girl was visiting with mother in the kitchen, and while romping around bumped her head quite hard on the edge of the table, at which mother sympathetically said: "There, now, see what you did." Her answer was: "You don't need to care. I'm not going to cry." A. J. W.

When his mother punishes him John usually cries until she kisses him. The other day, after being punished for something particularly naughty, he cried and cried, but could seem to make no impression on mother. Finally he stopped crying and asked: "Mamma, don't you love me at all?"

Mother replied: "No, you're too naughty to be loved."

John gazed at her a minute and said: "Well, I love me, anyway," and resumed his playing. MRS. S.

Leslie had just been presented with a handsome, well trained bulldog. When asked if he liked the dog, he replied:

"Yes, but I must not touch him, because daddy said I must never go near a dog unless he wagged his tail. This dog hasn't any tail to wag." M. D. B.

George, my little cousin, was presented with a suit of clothes. He was pleased with it and said that he was a big man to be able to wear a suit like his big brothers. George was in the habit of sleeping with his parents, but as he went to sleep early that night they put him in a bed by himself. In the middle of the night he woke up crying. His mother asked him why he was crying if he was a big man. "Well," said George, "I am a big boy in the daytime and a little boy at night." A. T.

Weight Reducing Contest.

Did you try my method for reducing as outlined for Mrs. Eva Lane, who lost thirty-six pounds in six weeks? How much did you lose? Did you stick to it or not? I want to hear your experience, whether you were successful or not in reducing. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your chance for earning the dollar will be as good if you slumped on the reducing job as if you stuck until you got rid of pounds of flesh. Your name will not be printed. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "The Chicago Tribune."

An Unexpected Call.

My husband and I both decided to take the weight reducing exercises together, as we were both of sufficient weight to look like a couple of tubs. We are great lovers of pie and sweets, as fat people usually are, so eliminating that from our diet was the hardest part of the game.

After two weeks' faithful work as to exercises I had lost a number of pounds and felt fine, but friend husband was still fat and happy. One day as I happened to be downtown shopping I stopped in at his office, and there he sat with a bottle of milk on one side and half a pie before him.

Well, the teasing he got made him adhere strictly to orders thereafter, and now we go to dances, take hikes, and play games we never dreamed of enjoying before. R. S. W.

Fat and Getting Fatter.

I am 19 years old. I am 5 feet 1 inch tall and weigh 217 pounds. You can imagine what a quer looking person I am. I have tried all sorts of ways to reduce my weight. I have lifted heavy weights, run long distances every day, slept on a hard board floor, taken gymnasium work, wrestled, boxed—in fact, done everything imaginable, but have failed to reduce any. I succeeded in gaining several pounds by all this work. I have tried dieting without success. Some people are just naturally born to be fat. I guess I am one of them, so I must bear my lot cheerfully. F. W.

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humerous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

Performing at the Mirror.

When I was an extremely young girl my ambition was to be a singer. I would go upstairs to a room where we had a large, old fashioned mirror. Getting before it, I would go through all the gestures of an opera singer. In my imagination I would be coming in on the stage amid tremendous applause, bowing gracefully at the same time.

When I got to the high notes I would extend my chest and go through various gestures with my hands and body until I had finished. Then I would step backward, bowing and bowing until I was out of sight. This I kept a secret from my people, but during the day I would often start to sing a song. The encouragement I usually received was, "Give the bird a worm," etc.

My ambition never materialized, therefore I have worked in an office for years. A. B. G.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once if bilious or constipated.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach ache, sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure to get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Advertisement.

How I Won My Mate.

> How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

One of the Family.

A young woman and two nice looking children were waiting at the corner for a car when I arrived on the same errand. I sighed as I thought of my lonely state and how happy the husband and father of that family must be.

When the car arrived the woman and I obtained seats on the same side with the children between us, a nice family group, as the conductor thought, for he took the coin I offered, deducted our fares, and ignored her.

She was quite embarrassed and incidentally mentioned the fact that the children were her sister's. I obtained a formal introduction and later secured the right to pay her car fare. H. R. T.

He Could Work.

I was a country singing master and was successful in that line, but for some reason I learned it was said I was not industrious and my would-be wife declined to marry me. I had a class nearby and went to her home to board during the singing term. To prove to her I was industrious, Monday morning I called for an old suit of clothes and went with the other hired hands and cut and housed tobacco all the week. Well, I just laid it across all the hands, including the Negroes. After that the other boys were not in the way. I won my mate and have lived with her about thirty years. B. F. B.

ETIQUETTE
by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

> Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

CARELESSNES about one's personal apearance is a great fault, but it is no more to be deplored than its boon companion, carelessness about one's belongings. What is more unpleasant than to be continually finding another person's pen or handkerchief or rubbers in your room? The first time it happens we may pardon the remissness; the second time, too; but the third, fourth, and fifth times we are justified in speculation as to the upbringing of our careless friend. Mothers cannot begin too soon to drill neatness and orderliness into their children's minds. True good breeding depends, to be sure, on many things, such as patience, courtesy, kindness, and fortitude, but from these other more practical virtues have grown, of which not the least is orderliness and painstaking care in respect to one's own and others' property.

MRS. L. W.: Since young mothers are on a strict diet and under close attention it would not be wise to take your son's wife food or books. Flowers are the most acceptable gifts or a short negligée for the time when she can sit up in bed.

* *

C. M. W.: Evening clothes are not the proper thing for the bridegroom to wear at a noon or afternoon wedding. The correct attire is a morning coat, gray striped trousers, gray socks, tie, waistcoat, and gloves, a white shirt, and patent leather pumps or low shoes.

* *

M. I.: An invitation to a church wedding requires no answer unless accompanied by an invitation to a reception—in which case the answer should be written in the third person, following the general form of the invitation itself.

Mother's Mistake.

I was desirous of securing the attentions of an eligible in our set. I succeeded and he was to accompany me to the theater. The eventful evening arrived and I was all in a flutter waiting. Our door bell rang and my mother went to the door, but found no one there. This was repeated twice, when my mother, losing her patience, decided to "fix those boys." She did. My friend was the next to ring the bell, when, horrors, from the upper story window he received a dipper full of cold water! My mother realized her mistake when he did not run. Although we went to the theater I never saw him again, and that was thirty years ago. R. A. H.

She Peacocked Around.

The mistake that cost me a husband and left me to paddle my own canoe was caused by my being too anxious to please the young man who had led me to believe his intentions were serious.

One Sunday afternoon while out walking we stopped to admire in a store window a beautiful silk gown. I had on a new silk gown at the time and was feeling puffed up and doing my level best to conceal the fact. I praised the gown in the window, saying one word for that gown and two for my own new one. He came back with the remark that he liked to see a girl with lots of pretty dresses.

That "lots" was my undoing. I opened a charge account and fairly peacocked around in charged finery.

The young man married a simply dressed school chum of mine and told a mutual friend that I was his first choice, but he never could support me—I was such an extravagant dresser. F. M. K.

Then the Worst Happened.

It was all coming along fine. We had a wonderful evening strolling in the park and paddling a canoe on the lagoon. Moonlight, stars, a balmy spring light—everything set for the worst. Walking back to the house we headed for the phonograph and put on a favorite record of a rather dreamy sort. Just then one of my sisters called over the banister, "Whom are you trying to make love to tonight?" M. G.

THE EGG SEASON.

THERE are two natural reasons why city dwellers should be able to get the finest eggs of the year as Easter approaches. One is that the hen is laying with happiness and vigor. The other is that the temperature is such that eggs outside of cooling rooms do not rapidly deteriorate if they are surrounded by reasonably fresh air. The storing of eggs in basements is a bad thing at any time of year, for the reason that the air is not fresh.

How great and disastrous is the waste of egg food during a part of the year from too high a temperature and storage in stagnant air cannot be estimated. In the great egg producing sections large quantities nowadays are broken, whites and yolks separately, and frozen. These are kept frozen until time to use them for cooking, and are comparable to the winter frozen fish. There is far less chance of these being disease bearing or detrimental to health in some way than are hundreds of thousands of ancient eggs in shells, which are yearly used for cooking.

The shell of an egg is sufficiently porous to admit any number of kinds of miscroscopic dirt, and everybody of intelligence knows how insidious in their effects are these kinds of dirt. While the moisture is evaporating through the shell there is still enough left to make what remains a fertile field for various bacteria that only need moisture and warmth to grow from one to millions in a few short hours.

The contents of an absolutely fresh egg will not rattle in its shell. Just as soon as some of the moisture has escaped it will rattle, and the egg will not lie flat in a vessel of water, but balloon-like lifts at the larger end. Water well saturated with salt furnishes a more sensitive test than fresh water, being more buoyant.

Some of the best housekeepers in the world keep eggs in a single layer, in a cool, airy place, and turn them every day. They would not buy dirty eggs for the reason that it requires no scientific knowledge to grasp. Dirty eggs show that the hen that laid them was not well cared for, and that her surroundings were slovenly. Hens living in dirty pens or houses are not likely to be healthy. They may be unhealthy and yet keep on laying. Scientific analysis has shown that a larger per cent of eggs than it is pleasant to think about contain the germs of disease on this account.

Though great numbers of people have an exaggerated notion of the energy value of an egg, they do not know the simple two and two of its real value. Sometimes a mother, for instance, will worry because her child will not eat the white of a boiled egg, but will eat the yolk. If the child is a dainty eater she ought to be thankful, for the yolk contains about 1,700 food units [calories] per pound, and the white averages only 250. The white has about 86 per cent water and the yolk only 50 per cent, while it does contain 33 per cent of the most concentrated food known, namely, fat.

There are almost as positive differences as these as to the separate values of yolk and white in reference to their use in cookery. The white is a splendid leavening medium, because so much air can be beaten into it. The colder and purer the air the lighter what is added to the egg will rise, and the better its flavor will be. The white can be dissolved in water and begins to cook at a low temperature, so it is the best thing we have for clarifying a liquid. The two are put together cold, brought to a boil, and strained. If the liquid is not clear by one or two more cookings it may be made so, every bit of the white hardening and gathering other solids up into itself. The yolk, on the contrary, is a splendid thickener. The white binds in a different way from the yolk, and for the same reason that it is a good clarifier. It binds solids for croquets, etc. The yolk binds or thickens liquids.

Graham Sponge Cake.

With a fine quality of Graham meal a most delicious sponge cake can be made by the ordinary five egg recipe. It will be coarse of grain, but all the more spongy on that account. Half farina and half pastry flour make a cake of much the same sort. Some of the other cereals, one in particular of trade marked specifications, may replace the farina.

Sift one cup of flour. Separate five eggs and beat the whites till stiff, and sift the sugar into them lightly. The two should have the consistency of an uncooked egg icing. Beat the yolks thoroughly and pour them lightly over the mass, then fold in gently a cup of sifted Graham meal, not the Graham flour, add flavoring, and bake.

The baking is more than half the battle, and every small oven is different. People unused to cake beating will need to sift in a teaspoon of baking powder with the meal. Some people do not add flavoring to sponge cake; why, I do not know. Vanilla improves it greatly, and lemon juice is not good dietetically.

Three Egg Sponge Batter.

This recipe is so universally serviceable for either a thick or a thin sheet cake that it can hardly be repeated too often. It is as nearly standard as any recipe we have, and can be used for small cakes as well as baked in a sheet: One cup of sugar, one cup of flour, one and a half teaspoons of baking powder, if you need it—each cakemaker soon learns how little she can get on with if she has the mind—three eggs, one-third of a cup of hot water, one-half teaspoon of flavoring, if vanilla. Sift the sugar into the mixing bowl and then sift the flour with the baking powder in with it and mix these well together with a pinch of salt. Beat the eggs well and stir them into the dry ingredients, then add the water, and finally the flavoring. Beat for at least five minutes and then pour into buttered and papered dripping pan. Bake from twelve minutes and up, according to thickness.

Butter Icing.

For such a cake as that of three eggs, or even for a cover and filling for any sponge cake, butter icing is particularly good, and there are many requests for a recipe for it. The best way to make this is with one of the foundation custards, which may be used for many things. Make as follows:

Work together until light and smooth three-fourths of a cup of powdered sugar and four egg yolks. Add to this a little at a time, one cup of boiling milk, stirring all the time. Put on the fire and stir to boiling point; remove from fire, flavor, and strain. Stir frequently while cooling. To make a small amount of butter icing add to one-half cup of this custard when it is lukewarm four ounces of creamed sweet butter and beat the two until light and smooth.

It is hard to wash salted butter to make it good for this icing. It is better to whip up sour cream until it is butter. The custard may be used hot or cold as a sauce or for trifle, or with gelatin or whipped cream for a Bavarian cream, or add to it an equal measure of cream and freeze for an ice cream. The butter icing may be flavored as one pleases.

Mock Brains.

To use up some leftover yolks or whites profitably one needs to know many ways of utilizing each. For mock brains beat egg yolks until light, add one teaspoon of water to each two yolks, or milk if preferred, season with pepper and salt, and scramble them with a small amount of butter.

Custard Pudding.

One pint of milk, yolks of two eggs, one-fourth cup of sugar or sugar to taste. Bake in a steam bath, spread the top with a layer of preserved fruit, and serve or add a meringue made of the whites of the eggs and a little powdered sugar, browning it lightly in the oven. Serve either hot or very cold.

Hers or His.

Mine occurred on our front porch one night in the dark. I was very glad it was dark, and yet the darkness, on the other hand, was largely responsible for my embarrassment.

When Mr. Jones called on me for the first and last time and was just turning in at our front gate mother took up her crocheting and went in, leaving me to greet my guest alone.

After shaking hands in the dark and remarking about the weather, I suggested that he take a chair. I seated myself and was racking my brains for something to say now that the weather had been used, when Mr. Jones emitted a yell that brought on the run not only father, mother, and my two younger brothers, to say nothing of our Boston terrier, Pat, but also several passing pedestrians.

There were more yells before we switched the light on to my mysterious and startling guest, who had sat down upon the live end of one of mother's crochet hooks. It was there to stay. Father led Mr. Jones into the seclusion of the house.

A doctor was summoned, and, I understand, succeeded in extracting the hook, struggling alternately with his mirth and the obstinate crocheting implement.

Did I say "my" most embarrassing moment? Perhaps Mr. Jones should have sent this story in. C. L. A.

His False Starts Revealed.

When a young fellow of 17 I became much interested in a girl in my home town, and besides calling on her in person I would occasionally write letters, such epistles being calculated further to intrench me in her good graces.

One day I dropped into a drug store conducted by a jolly old doctor, a friend of the family, and proceeded to hatch up one of my very fetching communications. It was only after numerous attempts that I got under way satisfactorily, the discarded sheets going to fill a handy waste basket.

The following evening when I called at the young lady's home the entire family greeted me with a big laugh, which was fully explained when a big fat drug store envelope was produced containing all my false starts at letter writing. R. T.

Both Paid for Her.

It was my first day at a new stenographic position. The two men I worked for took the same street car going home as I did. There was quite a crowd of people getting on the "pay as you enter" car, and consequently we three were separated. I got on first, paid my own fare, and got a transfer. Can you imagine my embarrassment after being seated in the car to find each of these men handing me a transfer and saying they had paid my fare? I. V.

Sister's Chum Was Frank.

My sister was visiting me from the far west and as she hadn't been in Illinois for ten years I wanted her to see as many of her old friends as possible.

Her girlhood chum had married and moved to a small town about thirty miles away. So I wrote and invited her to come and spend a day or two with us. I was real sure she would enjoy the visit, although she had never been in my house before. The next morning I asked her if she had rested well and imagine my surprise when she said, "No, I didn't. That was the most miserable bed I ever slept in." MRS. C. V. L.

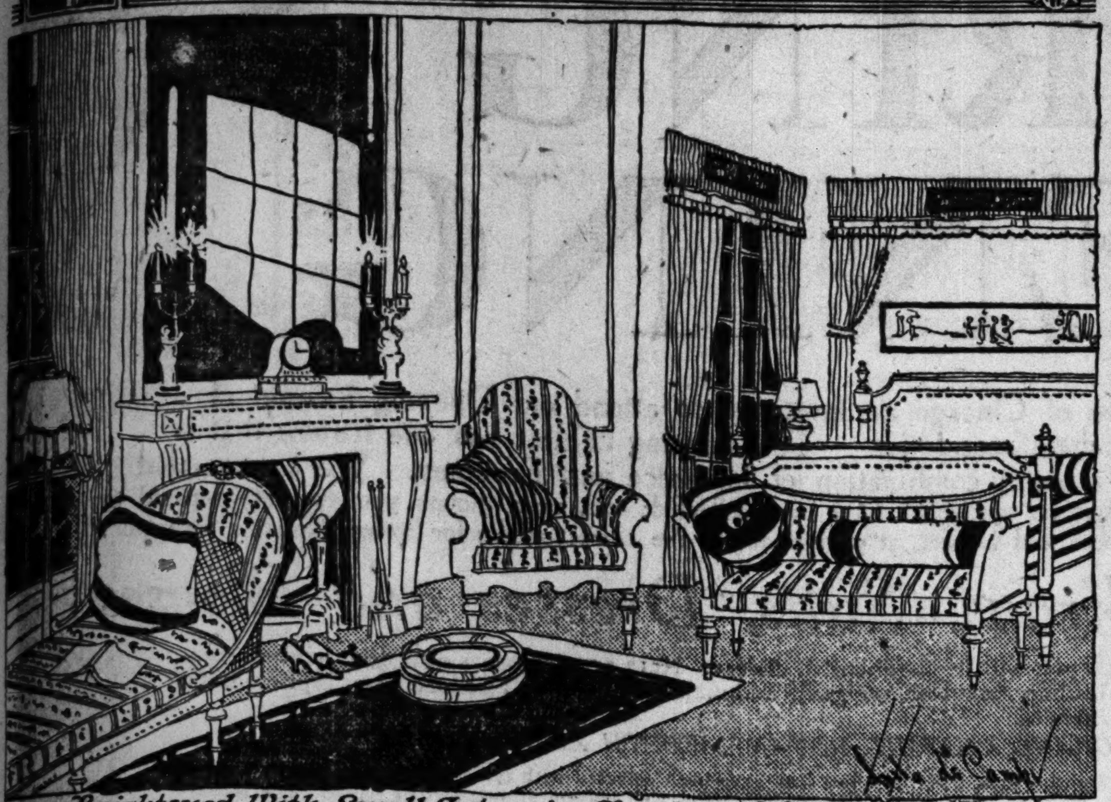
The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



Brightened With Small Intensive Touches of Color.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

HOME furnishers can hardly fail to be interested in a movement that is on foot for the standardization of color. The idea originated with the manufacturers of dress and ribbon fabrics, particularly silks, and speedily gained the consideration of other fabric manufacturers.

The popularity of colors in dress have their direct bearing upon general interior color schemes. And since the colors for clothes are more quickly and generally recognized than colors for chairs and curtains, it is well that an association has been formed and incorporated in New York for the launching of a permanent movement for color standardization. It has gotten out a color card wherein the colors are represented not in paint but with bits of silk, all labeled with names, and from season to season a new leaf with the latest colors on it is added to the folio of cards.

The whole card will include all of the colors in nature, and the object is to determine the actual color of every object in nature and to make it the standard. Each color under the determined name and number will be universally and permanently known by that name.

Generally describing the new shades from the 1917 card which is before me, I might say that colors are more vivid. A light malachite green, a Jack rose, and robin's egg blue stand out vividly. These colors, while they are brilliant, are at the same time subtle. It is hard to determine whether the Jack rose is tinged with yellow or with blue, and the robin's egg blue might be a cadet blue mixed with turquoise. It is this subtle fusion of clear tints that gives to the new colors their indescribable charm—this blending without muddying is a triumph of color achievement, as every good artist must readily concede.

The fall card shows a feeling for lighter colors. It is a revulsion, as it were, against the somber European tints. The names are adequately descriptive. The colors are divided into families, each, as a rule, being divided into three tones.

The card opens with the family name "Brass," which is really a continuation of the popular gold colors which have had such a heavy sale this season. The three shades are "Sunbeam," "Tinsel," and "Sirup."

Next are the new blues, which are included under the names of "Virgin," "Madonna," and "Tapestry." All three are good additions to the darker shades now popular.

The next group is named "Copper." Perhaps these three are continuations of the same popular gold shades, but the change has been in a different direction from the brass. They are "Redwood," "Manzanita," and "Chippendale." They are all handsome shades, and will fill a niche in color plans which will be appreciated.

The greens on the card are of the tea green tints. They are named "Lichen" and "Privet," both accurate names. A green that gained immediate popularity, out of compliment to President Wilson, and that came out after the spring card was issued, is "Shadow Lawn" green.

Three blues are offered under the general title of "Sea Blue." The shades are "Beryl," "Dragonfly," and "Teal Duck." He who has seen the shimmering light on the dragonfly's wings will understand what the beautiful shade is, while the person familiar with the green-blue feathers upon a duck's breast will need no further explanation.

The popular "wines" are continued under the names of "Raspberry," "Claret," and "Burgundy," all three accurate descriptions of the three shades.

Anticipating the growing favor of brown, "Partridge," "Autumn," and "Walnut" are given as the three shades which will be most popular next fall. They are all rich browns, and inasmuch as this color is likely to be among the leaders, this group promises to be of great assistance to those who want to select the correct browns.

Only two reds are shown: "Begonia," which is like the begonia leaf, and "Sultan," a darker shade.

Another group which is made up of what might be termed reds, although cardinal seems a more accurate term, are named "Cineraria," "Coronation," and "Wine," but the latter is of the dark wines, not the ones which are comprehended under the general name of wine.

The grays shown are named "Mist," "Steel," and "Smoke," and they are fitly described by these titles. Grays are going to be among the leaders next season, and these three are expected to be the leaders of the different groups of that color.

Three more greens are added, making the total number of green shades five; and the fact that greens are going to be popular during the coming seasons warrants this. These are named "sea foam," and the three subtitles are "Chrysophrase," "Arsenate," and "Spearmint." They are all excellent greens, bright in color, looking lively and suitable for the needs of cloth tailors, no matter what material they work in.

The last are "orchids." But this is a color which it is difficult to describe accurately. The three subtitles are "Gloxinia," the color of the beautiful flower by the same name; "Eminence" and "Hortensia." They are all good and will be successful without question.

The fur colors begin with "polar bear," which is described by its name. The next is "chinchilla," a black and white. "Mole" is third and its name is accurate. This is followed by "moleskin," which is a gray with a brownish cast. "Hudson seal" is a beautiful dark seal, and this is followed by "castor." "Beaverpelt" is the color of the beaver, and the last is called "Kolinsky."

Interiors of the most conservative type are redeemed from sombreness by small intensive touches of the new colors. The accompanying illustration of a French bedroom has the furniture frames in walnut. The side walls are in a delicate sand color. The draperies are of robin's egg blue, gros-grain, and satin stripe, edged and lined with sand color. The chairs are upholstered in fabric woven in sand color and tobacco brown stripes. The lighter stripes are overlaid with a floral design of tiny Jack rose touches and palm leaf green leaves. The rug is a deep olive with a sand colored border, and the cushions, made up of all of the other colors in the room, are all trimmed with tobacco brown velvet. The lamps are in a light lemon yellow, faintly tinged with green—a shade labeled "citrus."

A Claim—A Test—The Result

93 of 100 Come Back to Spiegel's

A week ago today we published an advertisement inviting comparison of our values, styles, quality, service and credit. We told people that they would find greater bargains, bigger displays, easier credit and faster service here than elsewhere. We did not urge purchases but we invited shopping. We wanted people to come here and learn about us and learn that these things we claimed were true.

Then we instructed our salesmen, our floor managers and everybody in our stores to keep a record of the folks who came in to look and not to buy; who went out without buying to look elsewhere; and to count those who came back. Of course, we could not keep an absolutely accurate record, but we are sure there were few mistakes.

And out of 100 people who came to our store; who saw our splendid display; who asked about our prices, examined the quality, learned our terms; out of these 100, mind you, who went out our door without buying, to shop around elsewhere—93 came back.

That is the proof of everything we claimed last Sunday. 100 people walked out our door to search elsewhere for values to beat ours, to find terms that might be easier, to find credit more liberal, to look for better quality or quicker service, to find a bigger display of things more according to their own ideas, and only seven people failed to return.

So when you are ready—make this your first stop; or if you please, make it your last stop. But don't close any purchase before you compare things here.

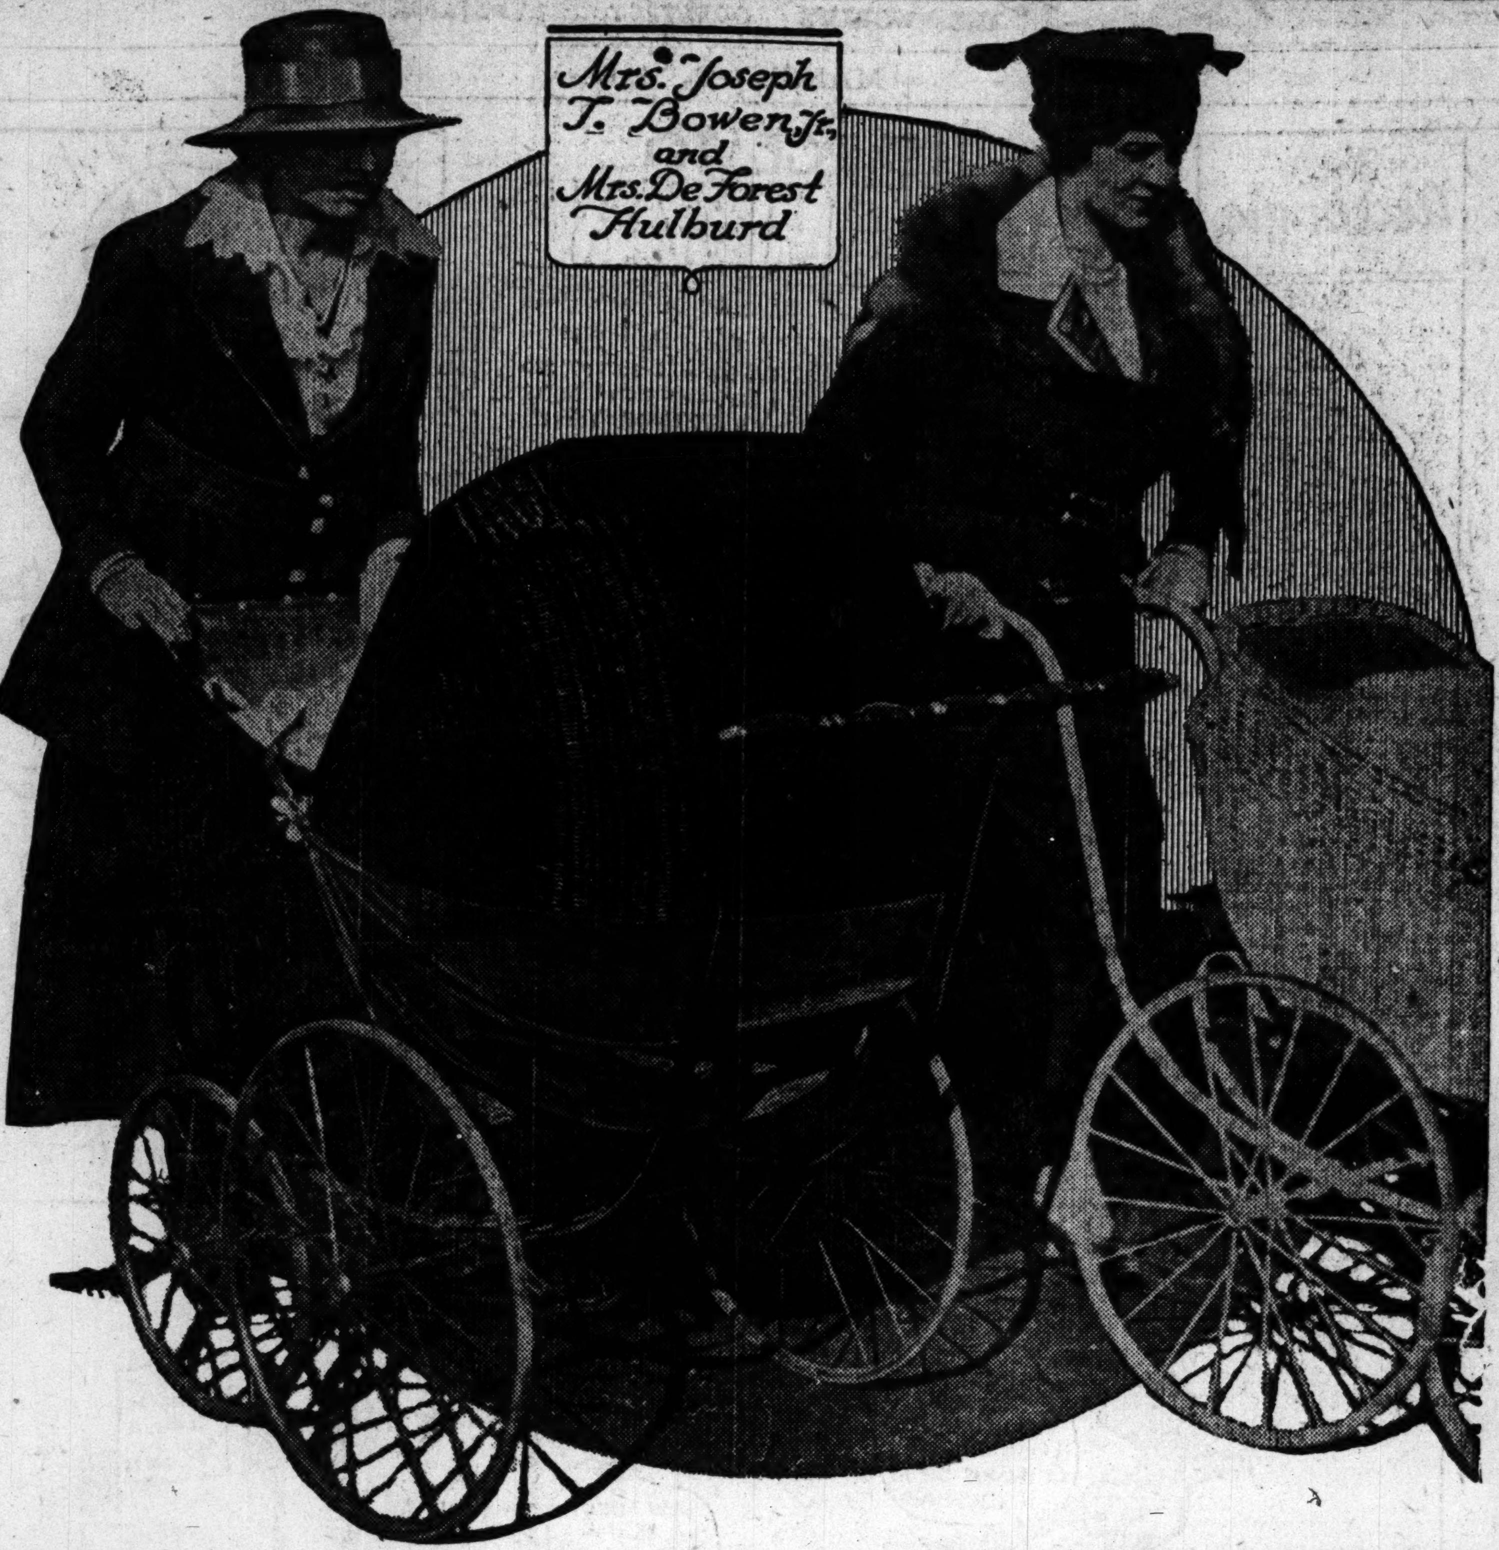
Young Society Matrons Who, Themselves, Wheel Their Babies on the Drive.



Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr. and Mrs. De Forest Hulburd

The good old fashioned custom of wheeling one's own baby out to take the air seems to prevail just as truly among the young society mothers of the city as it ever did in the simple days when there were not more than one nurse, a governess, and an instructor in each one of the several lines of mental development for every child born into the families of the fashionable. Mrs. De Forest Hulburd (right), who was Miss Marie Hessert, and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr. (left), who was formerly Miss Gwendolyn High, are frequently to be seen walking on the Lake Shore drive promenade, each with her tiny infant cocooned in a perambulator for an afternoon's ride.

Vegetable Roof Garden Plan of Mrs. Howard Linn

By Mme. X.

MARCH, 1917, is on the job. Never for a moment has it failed to live up to its traditions of blustering, boisterous winds. The fair Chicago pedestrian who ventures forth on foot can only clutch her hat and draperies and chant softly the classic stanza:

> It was the devil sent the wind
> That blew the skirts sky high.
> But God is just
> And sent the dust
> To blind the bad man's eye.

The windows of the Chicago club on the corner of Michigan avenue and Van Buren street are a favorite vantage ground whence the members can enjoy "the feast of the Passover," as the patrons—and especially the patronesses—of the Illinois Central suburban trains hurry across that wide and wind swept thoroughfare on their way to or from the Van Buren street station.

But the March winds are blowing away the rear guards of winter and stirring the sap in the trees, and local gardeners, amateur and professional, are laying plans for their spring and summer plantings.

While most of this horticultural campaign is designed by those who have country homes, there is one city gardener who is going to set an example to her fellow men and follow a course which this column has long urged on the consideration of Chicagoans. Mrs. Howard Linn, always in the vanguard of new ideas, is planning to turn the roof of her new abode in Surf street into a complete garden. The adjective "complete" is used advisedly, as she is going to grow vegetables as well as flowers in this Babylonish demesne.

Grew Flowers on Roof.

In her former home in Lincoln Park West she developed a gay little parterre of flowers on the roof. It was backed by a bit of decorative mural painting by Mrs. John Carpenter, which gave a charmingly Chinese effect to the garden, as the design included a pigtailed Celestial and a little Chinese temple. So alluring and reassuring was this idyllic spot that it was adopted as a happy hunting ground by an iridescent humming bird, who daily haunted the place, probing to the heart of each honey laden blossom. The muffled roars of the Lincoln park lions gave a peculiarly tropical aspect to the garden, especially after sundown.

The Linns have now moved farther north, out of reach of rumbling, grumbling lions, and have a delightful outlook over Sheridan road, the new northerly stretches of Lincoln park, and the lake beyond.

True to the spirit of the times, Mrs. Linn is planning to plant her new hanging garden mainly with vegetables. Think of the satisfaction of being able to pull your dinner out of your own roof! True, there is always a possibility that too frail construction of the substructure may result in having your potatoes or beets suddenly pop through your dining room ceiling. But even this can be turned to decorative purposes. Why isn't it quite as poetic and inspiring to sit under a canopy of pendant crimson beets, golden carrots, and pearly onions as under an arbor of hanging bunches of grapes?

Flowery Heights Cool Retreat.

The roof garden scheme is worth a trial by any citizen who has access to and control of a roof. Why shouldn't some of the crowds, who now swarm the street or sit on front steps on sultry summer evenings, court the fitful breezes on airy and flowery heights?

"The city's blanket of soot would smother growth" do you say?

Not with a daily sprinkle such as is easily obtainable on the average roof. Below the writer's windows each season just such a flowery roof gladdens the eye of the beholder as well as the heart of the dwellers therein. It is sunk some ten feet below the roofs on either side. The inclosing walls are painted white. A green striped awning gives shade to one end. A green box full of gayest growing flowers banks the other end. A few wicker chairs and Indian rugs are visible, and the whole suggests a charming retreat from a city's sights, sounds, and smells.

While on the subject of city aspects as seen from a seventh floor flat, this department would like to ask whether or not it wouldn't be possible to clothe the aspiring water tanks which at present, like scarcely restrained rockets or bombs, shoot skyward from all of our tall business buildings, in some architectural garb which would make them ornamental instead of the present eyesores they are. Couldn't their outer form be cast in the likeness of an oriental minaret, a Giotto tower, or a Gothic steeple so as to give beauty to our abused, ill treated, neglected skyline? A standardized form could be evolved which would cost no more than the present utilitarian husk. It is not impossible to combine usefulness and beauty, though the architects of our factories, mills, and warehouses seem to think so.

Viewing Spring Styles.

Though war is sitting on our thresholds and barking through our keyholes, the eternal feminine is true to type and is now almost distracted from Red Cross and other war relief work by the problem of spring and summer clothes. The fate of so many of our fine old houses, mansions rich with associations of bygone generations, seems to be turned into shrines for the "dernier cris" in frocks, coats, and hats.

In droves the women are flocking from one establishment to the other to watch the young and ornamental models walk with that preposterous, slow, rolling gait through the dense crowds, displaying the latest creations in cloth, silk, chiffon, linen, and muslin.

The expressions on the faces of the onlookers are worthy of study. Few look amused or superior. Almost all seem absorbed, solemn, with an air of concentration, bordering on worship—an expression which reminds one of the devout look of a Turkish crowd when the prophet's sacred carpet is carried by in procession. Voices are hushed at these sartorial rites. Sotto voce comments are all that break the hush, except when one bolder than the rest asks the perambulating fashion demonstrator to halt a moment for inspection.

Many spectators take notes. Fingers reach out furtively to feel the texture of the fabrics. Cheeks grow flushed; eyes glitter; the air, heavy with perfumes, grows too thick for comfort, but few are aware of the suffocation. The peripatetic philosopher comes out into the sweet, fresh air of a windy March afternoon conscious that, fully as strong, deep, and irresistible as man's impulse for combat is woman's impulse for self-adornment.

Campaigning for McCormick.

Sidetracked for a moment from war relief work and more personal considerations is a small though representative group of women who are working under the direction of Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank in the Twenty-first ward to further the election to the city council of Robert Hall McCormick. They have formed the Robert H. McCormick Woman's Nonpartisan league, and, besides trying to elect a public spirited, intelligent, enterprising young son of Chicago to this important office, they are furthering the cause of nonpartisan municipal politics in a most effective way.

Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Republican, and Mrs. J. W. Beckwith, Democratic, are vice presidents of the league, while Mrs. Fairbank, Progressive, is president—an efficient as well as representative trio. Aiding them are Mesdames Morrill Dunn, Augustus Carpenter, Mitchell Follansbee, George Higginson, John H. Winterbotham, Joseph Winterbotham, Hale Holden, Otto Lemke, Wormser, Frederick Palmer, Tiffany Blake, and Julian Mason, and the Misses Suzette Ryerson, Marie J. Rozet, Helen Gilbert, Mary Wells, and Edith Blair.

Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. "Billy" Blair, and Mrs. Potter Palmer Jr. will work as the telephone brigade on election day to call up the lazy voters and remind them to cast their ballots.

City politics is especially the concern of women. The better term for city politics is city housekeeping. There isn't a department of the home that isn't affected by the good or bad government of a city. Is your garbage can neglected? Is your alley filthy? Is your street littered with rubbish? Is your water supply poor? Is your milk supply tainted? Do you get short measure from your vegetable peddler or fish man? Is your children's school inefficient? Is your neighborhood unsafe after dark? Is your boy subjected to ever present temptations in nearby poolrooms? Does your daughter go to demoralizing "movies" in ill ventilated halls?

In every case the city is responsible, and your only hope of improvement is in electing decent, able aldermen.

Mr. McCormick's record is a capital one, both as a man and a public servant. He served for three years as assistant state's attorney under State's Attorney Healy, and then in the office of the United States district attorney, Edwin W. Sims. He is a third generation Chicagoan and a good and loyal lover of this burg. The forces of former Ald. Geiger are working, not with the ward Republicans, but with the Women's Nonpartisan league, to elect him.

Chicagoans in California.

Far away from war, dressmakers, and local politics is a large group of Chicagoans now sojourning in southern California. The William J. Chalmers are at present the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. K. G. Billings in Santa Barbara, Cal. The Billingses have Mrs. Millar Graham's delightful place, one of the loveliest in the Montecito valley. The house is perched high above and overlooking the sea. Behind it the grounds—which suggest some moss grown old Italian park—slope gently down to a distant roadway. Wonderful gray old ilexes, a secluded open air amphitheater, greenhouses, rose gardens, lily ponds, shaded walks, and classic seats are features of these grounds.

Mr. Billings is building a home on one of the finest, most commanding sites in that region. In fact, all the lower peaks and vantage points in that part of the country seem to have been captured by Chicagoans or former Chicagoans.

Mr. Knapp of the gas company, formerly a resident here, has a fine house on the top of a hill, and half way down this hill has had constructed a system of Roman baths that would make old Caracalla green with envy. He has piped both hot and cold water from some mineral springs in the foothills of the nearby mountain range, and you can—if you be a guest of his—take any kind of bath—sulphur, sea water, or just cold spring water.

On a nearby eminence a former Evanstonian, Mr. Peabody, lives in a Spanish looking palace. Not far away is the lovely new house David Adler has just completed for David Jones of Chicago, which also crowns a steep hill. Part way down the same hill the Edward Ryersons' lovely home looks out over a wonderful land and sea scape, a panorama which embraces everything from the purple mountains on the left to the faraway Catalina islands on the right.

The Robert McGanns' new house, on a still higher, more remote promontory, is rapidly nearing completion. The Hobart Chatfield-Taylor residence is now getting the finishing touches. While this is not reached by such steep inclines as some of the other Chicago mansions, it is beautifully placed, and is approached by a fine avenue of ancient live oaks, planted a half century ago.

In case of a Germexican invasion of that part of the country the owners of these hilltop places can have as much sport fortifying their homes and bombarding the invading hordes of blonds and brunets as the owners of yachts will have chasing submarines in the wide wastes of the Atlantic bordering on our eastern coasts.

Suitcase Goes Astray.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, who with her daughter, Miss Ellen Ryerson, and her sister, Miss Sophie Borie, has just returned from a western tour, had, on starting out on her wanderings five weeks ago, a misadventure to try the soul of the most patient and serene philosopher. On the way from her home in Lake View avenue to the railway station her dress suit case, containing every sort of indispensable article for a long overland trip, slipped unnoticed off the front seat of the motor. Arrived at the station, it couldn't be found. It was too late for her to do anything but start on the four days' train journey without it.

The valise was picked up in Lincoln park by a couple of boys, who took it home, where the mother of one of them opened it and from the address on some letters inside learned the name of the owner. It was returned to the Ryerson house. Thence it was immediately started on its way to rejoin Mrs. Ryerson. That was on Feb. 23. It is still traveling! The entire clerical and executive forces of one of our great express companies have been unable to effect a conjunction between Mrs. Ryerson and her errant, erratic, athletic, and enterprising dress suit case.

Why Get Tired Dancing?

DANCING has brought us an army of new friends the past two years. Women who enjoyed dancing, but who were handicapped because of dance fatigue, asked us to help them, and we did—have—and are helping them.

So much so that when correctly fitted to the Gossard special dance models an entire program may be danced and every number enjoyed.

Dance the fox trot, hesitation, waltz, or whatever you fancy—make any test you like—you will find yourself fresh and buoyant as you dance the last number.

A Special Model for Dancing

It is cut out in front and three elastic sections keep out every wrinkle in the skirt.

Just enough bones to support you where needed and so designed that your figure is always "rested." You do not suffer dance fatigue in this model. Priced in a figured batiste, $8.50.

Other models as low as $2.00, $3.50, $6.50 and up to $25.00 for every figure type. Whether you are tall or short, heavy or slender, there are many models specially designed for your figure.

When Japanese royalty fares forth in state, milady's jinrikisha must gleam with brilliant lacquer and flash with striking and artistic designs. But the coachmaker of Japan has fallen far short of the ingenuity, ability and genius that has inspired the designers of the Ohio Electric.

Even the exquisite coaches of royalty fail to equal the matchless beauty, the harmonious proportions and the quiet elegance of this supreme electric vehicle.

The body of the Ohio Electric is made of hand-hammered aluminum—virtually seamless. In its serene dignity and utter comfort it expresses the achievement in every detail of this supreme car. For in power, smoothness, operating radius and ease of control, the Ohio Electric has no competitors. Its every appointment is what you would expect to find in the master electric. And an Ohio Electric may be bought for as little as $2380.

May we submit evidence in person—and by demonstration?

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Chicago Women to Attend General Federation Council

By Hazel Whitaker.

ONCE in two years the General Federation of Women's clubs holds its great biennial and on alternate years a council meeting, which, though smaller as to members, is equally important in the business accomplished. Such a council meeting is to be held this year at New Orleans, beginning April 9 and lasting until the 13th.

Many prominent club women from Chicago and vicinity will leave here on a special train for New Orleans on Friday, April 6. The Hotel Grunewald will be the headquarters for the daily meetings and the French Opera house for the evening.

Easter Sunday the visiting women will be the guests of the city's clubs, and on Monday the city federation will entertain at the Country club. In the evening Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, the president of the General Federation will give the formal opening address, after which a reception and pageant will be held at the hotel.

Tuesday will be given over to reports of officers and a general discussion of "The Greatest Need in Federation Work."

On Wednesday Mrs. Ella Flagg Young speaks on "What Are the Educational Needs of the Country?" "Civics," "Home Economics," and "Public Health" will be discussed by other speakers. In the late afternoon a tour of some of New Orleans' historic spots will be made and this pilgrimage will close at the H. Sophie Newcomb college, where a pageant, "The Birth of Summer," will be given by the college girls.

On Thursday Mrs. John D. Sherman of Chicago speaks on "The Greatest Problems of Conservation." The three phases of art as seen in art, literature, and music will be the subject of talks by the chairmen of these departments. Civil service reform and industrial and social conditions will also be discussed. The closing session will be given up to a talk of "Our Pan-American Relations," and on Friday a thirty-five mile trip down the Mississippi river will complete the program.

Among the council members who are planning to go on this trip are Mrs. George Plummer, Mrs. Frances D. Everett, Mrs. Charles Zimmerman, Mrs. John D. Sherman, and local officers Mrs. Charles Caldwell, Mrs. William J. Benson, Mrs. Joseph M. Steele, Mrs. Lambert O. Wile, and Mrs. N. La Salle Johnson. Among the other prominent club women from Chicago who will go are Mrs. George Lomax, Mrs. E. Frank Ryan, Mrs. H. W. Haugh, and Mrs. T. M. Flournoy.

In March, 1889, the Sorosis club of New York conceived the idea of celebrating its twenty-first birthday by calling together to a three days' convention representatives from women's clubs all over the country. Sixty-one responded and a permanent organization was established called the General federation. The first biennial convention was held in Chicago in 1892 with an attendance of 297 delegates, representing 185 clubs from twenty-nine states. At the second biennial in Philadelphia, Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin of Chicago was made president and under her direction the states began organizing.

This has gone on until every state in the union now has its own organization. The growth has been so great that when the biennial came to Chicago in 1914 for the twelfth convention it had a delegate body of over 2,000 from all the states, from Alaska, Cuba, China, Canada, the Isle of Pines, and from England. It was at this convention also that the $100,000 Sarah Platt Decker memorial endowment fund was pledged. Of this amount Illinois has raised $8,800, which is $1,800 more than its pro rata amount, according to states.

The club movement of today as fostered and led by the General federation is a vast social and civic movement, composed of more than 2,000,000 women, and the influence exerted by it is to be seen in every walk of life. Free libraries, baths, dispensaries, employment bureaus, vocational schools, and day nurseries have been established on the one hand; investigation of the white slave traffic, and of the conditions in jails; the establishment of juvenile courts, better legislation for women and children, civic cleanliness, conservation of natural resources, all these and many more things are numbered among the accomplishments of the great federation which includes women from every walk of life.

As a result of its far reaching power many honors have come to the federation, among which two are especially worthy of mention. In May, 1908, when President Roosevelt invited a conference of governors at the White House, the invitation was also extended to congress, the cabinet, the Supreme court, to various national organizations, and to one woman delegate, Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, then the president of the federation. Again at the time of the building of the Panama canal the administration at Washington asked the federation to send some one to the zone for the purpose of organizing the women there into clubs, as a means of meeting the prevailing feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction that existed. And the work proved eminently successful.

Style Tendency in Summer Furs

For the Summer Fur Season Large Garments in Capes, Wide Throw Effects, Shawls and Pelerines predominate. The designers have been particularly generous with ornamentation. Tails, Paws and Heads are used in various treatments. Many of the pieces are designed to be worn on the shoulders, leaving the neck bare for warmer weather, but all are fashioned so they can be closed for cold weather. Never were furs quite so ideally designed for summer wear as this season. Come and see this noteworthy exhibit.

ART

by Louise James Bargelt

Haney Sketches Still on View; Other Exhibits

THE pencil drawings by James P. Haney are to hang in the west corridor of the second floor of the Art institute for several weeks to come. They are strong, brusquely effective sketches, showing wide sweeps of sky and swirling water against jagged rocks, far distances of fields dotted with queer, dilapidated shacks, and boats beached on stretches of sand to wait the owners' will.

Haney has succeeded in putting considerable verve and atmosphere into the drawings done in pencil. There are a dozen of them in all and they are directly outside of the galleries in which the loan collection of Whistlers is hanging.

Another recent and temporary display at the institute and one which differs considerably from the majority of other institute exhibits is that of the collection of books on the fine arts and other related subjects, all of them publications of the Caxton club.

These rare publications have been lent from various sources. The Ryerson library has contributed largely; so have Charles L. Hutchinson, C. L. Ricketts, William O. Goddman, and the library of Northwestern university.

The catalogues on various works of art are particularly interesting. Various of these catalogues are open at such attractive places as the picture of the "Smoker," by Frans Hals; "Venus and Cupid," by Diaz, and Rembrandt's famous portrait of himself with the small mustache and chin tuft and a drooping pearl in his ear. There are other comprehensive works on decorative design, ceramics, etching, and engraving, far eastern art, and history and exposition.

Two frescoes by Botticelli, done in the middle of the fifteenth century, have been hung now in the main corridor of the institute's second floor. They are hung on the east wall and are the first object that meets one's eye from the center stairway. The one to the left is of "Giovanna and the Virtues." The women are all fair haired, with soft draperies of pale green, ivory, soft pink, and yellow. Giovanna herself wears a darker shade of red. The one to the right is "Lorenzo and the Liberal Arts." The colorings are much the same as in its companion piece, and the two form a wonderful background for the huge sculptor filled space.

Cushing appears to be growing more popular daily at the institute. Groups of women may now be seen almost any day listening eagerly to various institute instructors and guides. Nor are the crowds confined to his rooms. One sees men and women and young folk even scanning the paintings by Lawson and Lever, the alert, bright faces by Davey, the fairylands of Rosen's landscape portrayals, the still canvases by Bertha Menzler Peyton, and the pictures by Gruppe.

For they have arrived at last—the paintings by Charles P. Gruppe—and they have been wisely and well hung on the walls of that gallery which for days now has borne a bare witness to the fact that somewhere on the road between here and the east were the landscape views of those Connecticut hills.

There are pastoral scenes and scenes of the water, and also pictures of ships with sails flying in the wind. The fact that Mr. Gruppe has lived so long in Holland accounts, perhaps, for the spirit of that country of dikes and windmills hovering indescribably about the canvases. But this spirit in no wise detracts from their charm. If he knows supremely well the tone of those gray dark mists which hang over the North sea, and the peace and allure of the level lands below the line of the sea, this knowledge has only aided him in his power of presentation.

If you have the gift of mental visualization you will travel with him in spirit to the country he paints, and if you have this not you will enjoy him—not so thoroughly, perhaps, but quite as vividly—through the strength of his portrayals. For there is beauty in his coloring and real delight in his subjects.

The artistic occasion which includes the exhibit of professional members of the Arts club and also the paintings of Martha Walter at one and the same time is evoking enthusiastic attendance on the part of Chicagoans to the galleries of this club in the Fine Arts building. The paintings by the club members are entirely landscapic in this exhibit, following the display of portraits a few weeks back. Many of the best known Chicago artists are excellently represented here.

Adam Emory Albrecht has three landscapes of sun and gold and gleaming foliage, with the figures of children playing about in the open. Jansson's scene is of snow and winter, with the gaunt trees in the background oddly touched with a roseate coloring, and Frank Dudley adds another winter scene, taken on the lake front, just beyond the confines of the picturesque museum.

The two canvases by Seideneck are imbued with a certain poetry of color and touch, while Ingerle's "After the Shower" is an atmospheric thing, with the clouds still hanging low in the sky. A truly western note is contributed in John Stacey's "On the Canyon's Rim," and another work of his is that of "Ephraim Village."

Something to wax enthusiastic over are the two paintings of Allan Philbrecht, in which he paints the northern Michigan woods. Even though you may not know them and prefer them to any woods in the world, you will appreciate the pictures, breathing as they do from every infinitesmal part of the canvases the spirit and beauty of the forest northlands. Paul Bartlett's canvases deal with wind and cloud and coming storms, and Leon Roecker has some lighter glimpses of nature vividly summer clad.

The miniatures in the hall appeal as effectively rendered miniatures always appeal through their delicacy of coloring and their diminutive charm. They cover one portion of the wall and the Coney island pictures by Martha Walter take up another considerable portion of it. With the exception of the miniatures and a few faces by Miss Walter the exhibits at the Arts club now are entirely landscapic.

Plans are already well under way for the architectural exhibit which opens at the Art institute on April 6. Last year it reached the largest proportions in its history and this year it threatens to break even this previous record. Later details of it will be announced.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

MARCH

End of March.

THE meadow lark sings on the sill of the magic casement which is open to spring. The sill is a field which has come brown and yellow from under the snow, thawing as the south wind smiles upon it.

The song of the meadow lark is the surprise device of spring, the beautiful tour de force of nature. Winter satiated folk have been plodding, expectant, along dun ways, interested in what is but eager for what is expected. No intimation is given casual attention, although many may be offered careful eyes, that sap is filling the arteries of trees and the waves of immigration are billowing northward.

The seen world is merely one which has come up in December aspect out of February snows, with a brighter sun and a kindlier wind. Of a morning, when fields and woods seem precisely as they were in December, and when only the tonic of the air and the change in the soul suggest that it is not the end but the beginning of the green year, the meadow lark sings from a field.

No other fact of spring is so dynamic. No other so touches the imagination and fills the perceptions with the odors of a warm spring night, when the hylas sings and the perfumes of blossoms carried on moist winds make earth a place which needs no justifications other than such as the sensations afford.

HUT HAPPINESS

"When to my farm retired, how do I live?
If any ask, this short account I give:
The gods, at first light, I do adore,
And place this care all other cares before.
My grounds I visit then, and servants call,
And their just tasks I do impose on all.
I study next, arouse my poetic vein;
My body then anoint and gently strain
With some meet exercise; exult in mind
At every turn myself both free to find
From crimes and debts; last I bathe, sup, laugh, drink,
Jest, sing, rest, and, on all that passes, think.
A little lamp the while sends forth a ray,
Which to my nightly studies makes a day."

Hair Often Ruined By Washing With Soap

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use).

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy; it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advertisement.

SYLVIA CORSETS

DESIGNED AND MADE BY

Sylvia Newman
CORSET SPECIALIST

Suite 727-729 Marshall Field & Co. Annex Bldg.

LARGE THIGHS ARE CAUSED BY ILL-FITTING CORSETS pushing the flesh below the hips. This is an unnatural condition that can be remedied by this SYLVIA MODEL which is especially designed for Women with Small Busts

Large Hips and Large Thighs

Women Carrying the Greater Part of Their Weight Below the Waist Line Require Special Care in Corseting

This SYLVIA MODEL creates the LONG-WAIST and FLAT-BACK effect. It distributes all superfluous flesh evenly and gives proper poise and balance to the figure so that it can be carried gracefully and with perfect comfort. The thighs are encased by means of a wide surgical band attached to the under side of the corset, preventing the material from creasing when the wearer is seated. This also holds the garment in place and keeps it from RIDING-UP.

The Best Test of a Corset

The supreme test of a corset is a trial fitting. This test can only be made properly in the fitting-room of your favorite store.

The evidence of your own senses is indisputable. If the corset is lacking in any respect, even ever so slightly, the trial fitting serves to bring out that point, on the spot, not later, after you have worn the corset.

Equally too, the trial fitting brings out superiority of design, workmanship, style, fit, figure improving qualities and comfort. It is the test supreme.

The makers of Modart Corsets—always Front Laced—prefer to reserve their claims for the privacy of the fitting-room, where their corsets can speak for themselves and the full significance of Modart superiority may be truthfully experienced.

MODART CORSETS
Front Laced

Complete lines of Modart Corsets will be found, in Chicago, at the Corset Sections of the following leading stores. At other leading stores the country over.

These stores invite you to make the test of a trial fitting of a Modart.

Do this before you select your Easter outfit.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Sloane-Widener Wedding Surprise to Smart World

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The smart world was surprised this last week. It had accused two people of being engaged, those two people denied the allegation, and the smart set for some reason believed them. This was some little time ago. All of a sudden these two accused people quietly went down to the city hall and got their marriage license. Nobody was suspecting them in the least, with the result that the smart world has them to thank for its week's tidbit for exchange and gossip.

To be sure the smart set is, as it were, much on the outskirts of this affair, since it never was taken into the confidence of the contracting parties, and it was not in any numbers invited to the wedding. Nevertheless the bride and the bridegroom have so much of romance and so much of drama woven through their lives that they are interesting to hear about, whether one has ever seen them or not.

The bridegroom is George D. Widener. He is the son of the rich and prominent man of the same name of Philadelphia who lost his life on the Titanic. His mother is now Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, whose romantic marriage took place in her magnificent palace at Newport something over a year ago. You perhaps remember my letter about it.

As in this case, the "contracting parties" kept the public—if the smart set will excuse me for so designating it—guessing, and always when it guessed yes, the "contracting parties" said no. Mr. Rice is a professor of science at Harvard and the two met when the woman, who had been on the Titanic with her husband and her son, was giving the Widener memorial library to Harvard in memory of the former. The two are now on a yacht—the Alberta—with a party of scientists who are exploring the Amazon.

Daughter of Henry Sloane.

But to return to the bridal party of the week. The bride was Mrs. Jessie Sloane Dodge. She is the daughter of Henry T. Sloane of 38 East Thirty-sixth street, and she was the divorced wife of William Earle Dodge, grandson of the celebrated philanthropist. Indeed, smart society did not even know that the divorce had been granted as yet, and this, in fact, may have had something to do with its willingness to believe the earlier denials of bride and bridegroom. However, it now knows that the divorce was granted in Plattsburg, N. Y., the proceedings having been begun in Saratoga.

Just after this event the young woman went with her father to California, and on her return hurried down to Palm Beach. Mr. Widener also went down there, and he did not return north until Feb. 23, three days after Mrs. Dodge's departure.

The bride is the eldest of two daughters; her sister, Miss Emily, married Baron Amaury de la Grange in France a year ago last September. The first marriage of the bride of this last week was a large and fashionable function. For several years the pair were active participants in the summer gayeties of Newport and they also went out a great deal with the "four hundred" of New York.

Married at Bride's Home.

I seem to have trouble to hold myself to the story of the week, which is the bride's second and not her first marriage. She must, even during the ceremony, have thought of the contrast between the two events. This wedding was a simple and small affair. It took place at the bride's residence in East End avenue. The ceremony was performed in the salon on the second floor. The salon was decorated in white lilacs, dogwood, and tiger lilies. In the lower hall were masses of Easter lilies and white lilacs.

The bride was married in her going away costume of navy blue Georgette crêpe brocaded with silver roses. Her velvet sailor hat was of the same color trimmed with a wreath of velvet flowers in a lighter shade of blue. In starting for the wedding trip she wore a long seal cape and carried a sable muff. Her small daughter, who stood near her during the ceremony, wore a simple frock of white lace with a large pink silk sash.

Among the relatives of the bride present in addition to her father were Mrs. William Douglas Sloane, Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs. John Henry Hammond, Mrs. William B. Osgood Field, Miss Ruth Vanderbilt Twombly, the Rev. and Mrs. Henry Sloane Coffin, and William Sloane. Relatives and friends of the bridegroom who came from Philadelphia included, in addition to Mr. Dixon, Mrs. Fitz Eugene Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Elkins, Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. William Frazier Harrison, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Kearsley Mitchell III.

Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Livingston Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Douglas Robinson, James W. Barney, Wadsworth R. Lewis, Kenneth P. Budd, Mr. and Mrs. William FitzHugh Whitehouse, Miss Anna Sands, Mrs. Theodore A. Havemeyer, and Mrs. William Woodward.

Honeymoon in California.

Many uninvited people assembled on either side of the steps of the residence to watch the guests go in. They were much amused by the preparations going on at the curb for the bride's departure. A strange taxicab drew up. Some one deposited in it the bride's jewel case. He then went away, and the maid, who had approached the cab, went back into the house for the hand luggage. Presently she appeared with it and entered the cab.

The bags were all freshly marked with the bride's new initials, "J. S. W." But nobody had been with the jewel case while they were being attended to. Some one ventured to say that it had been left there unprotected with jewels in it to the value, probably, of $10,000. At any rate, the bride will never know, and she did not lose her jewels. And if she had, she is marrying one of the richest young men of the day. They left presently in a motor car to follow their jewels to the station, where they took the train for California. When they come back they will go to the bridegroom's home in Elkins Park, Pa.

Fly to Social Functions.

I wonder if you realize how much the smart set is using the aeroplane? They go to swimming parties in it at Palm Beach and the south. They go fishing, shooting, and to picnics and country tea parties in it. Indeed, as Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney expressed it, they spend most of their time up in the air. She flew over to Miami the other day to join Mr. Whitney and a fishing party.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt Jr. has relinquished the charms of Palm Beach and has gone to California. Her private car carried her there. She is accompanied by her two daughters, Miss Muriel and Miss Barbara Vanderbilt.

A new mid-Lenten activity has come up for the sewing classes. They no longer sew for hospitals and for babies. They have begun to make things for our soldiers when they go to war. And they are no longer employing women to speak to them on the drama and the pre-Raphaelite movement. They have husky men, most of whom have been at the front, to instruct them on our international situation, and history past and to come. They are seriously studying in this Lent the subject of war relief.

Helping Their Country.

The children of the rich have likewise turned their budding energies and curiosity toward the matter of helping their country in its approaching hour of need. The younger systems have formed an organization and the boys of the smart set are zealously contributing their bit.

William H. Vanderbilt, aged 15, has enlisted in the naval reserves as a midshipman. He is the son of the late Alfred Vanderbilt and his wife, who divorced him, Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt. The boy will be the youngest of his rank in the reserves. He has desired for a long time to go to Annapolis, but has been under age. He signed his papers at the naval station at Newport last week.

Many of the boys of the smart set are enthusiastically responding to the call of a society named the Junior Patriots of America, which has just been organized by Hamilton Fish Jr.

Rothschilds' Have Scooped the Furniture World

$48,000 worth of furniture and bedding will be thrown into this sale at enormous savings.

For four months we have been planning for the opening day of this sale. Here's a partial list of bargains:

1. One of Chicago's finest dining room furniture factories gave us a $15,000 purchase at very nearly cost.
2. Another table manufacturer gave us 400 dining tables at nearly 50c on the dollar.
3. A bedroom factory sold us $18,000 worth of bedroom furniture at 33% discount.
4. A brass bed factory gave us two carloads of brass beds at a sensational price.
5. One of Wisconsin's greatest chair factories sold us 1,000 chairs and rockers at an amazing discount.

Furniture month is a sale planned to demonstrate to the entire Middle West that you can buy furniture cheaper at Rothschilds' than any place else in America.

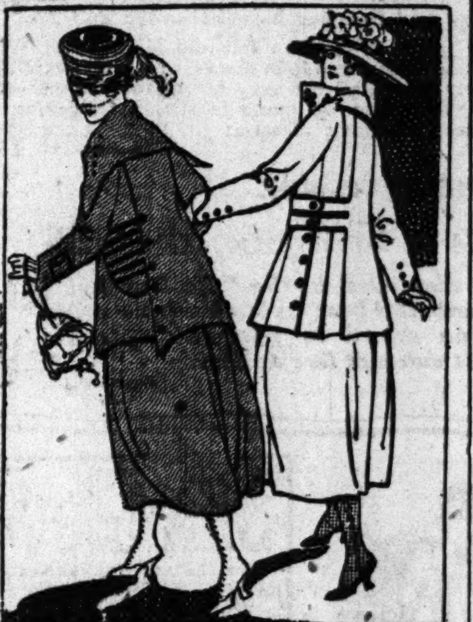
because there is so much good style to them and so much character and distinction. A wide range of models that include all the charm that the Easter season has brought forth. Newness shows in every line, in the length of the coat, the length of the skirt, the correct sweep to the skirts, etc., etc. They're strictly man tailored down to the last detail. Workmanship equal to that in suits sold for almost double Monday's price. Many are copies of exclusive French models; only four of the styles are illustrated.

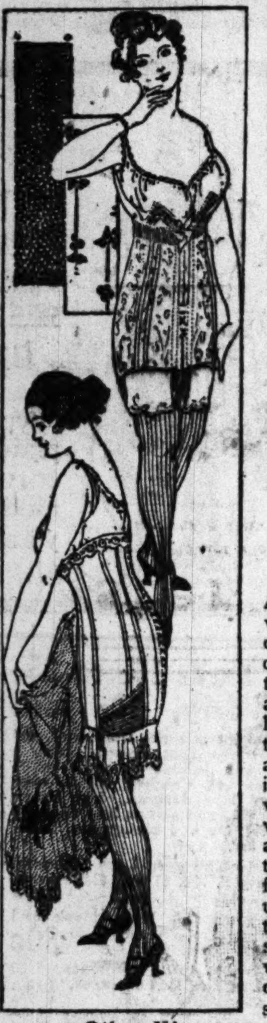
They're made of all wool poplins, serges and gabardines, the coats belted and semi-belted, bound with braid, many with the extremely fashionable large pointed collars, some with mannish collar and revers and faille silk overcollar.

Others are braid trimmed, buttons, too, are used profusely and to good effect on the sleeves and on the coats in back and front; all lined with excellent grade Peau de Cygne silk. The skirts have the modish gathered backs, with belts and plain or fancy shape pockets. The colors include the wanted new spring shades, as well as black and blue; the graceful lines, combined with the moderate price, make this a group of suits that will strongly appeal to the woman who wishes to couple style with economy; worth $35 or more, at $25



Easter Corsets

Third Floor—Center



We wish to impress a goodly number of women with a fact they never realize until too late—that their Easter clothes cannot fit properly nor appear "smart" unless they wear a new and correctly fitted corset. When you come here for your corset it can be chosen from the Warner make, for we have them in a complete showing of models, so that our expert corsetieres can select the particular model your figure should have, advise you which grade will give you best wear, and fit you properly. For this service no extra charge is made.

A Warner's corset for the woman who really requires a low bust. Any corset is uncomfortable that pushes up under the arms. This model has a low bust, full enough so that the figure rests easily and is not pushed up. It is curved at each side, which gives it the smaller waist effect. The moderately long skirt is so cut that there is ample room for a moderately full figure, has a wide elastic section in back. A model that spells comfort for the woman who finds it very difficult to be fitted, sizes to 36, at........ $3

Other Warner models 2.00 to 5.00.

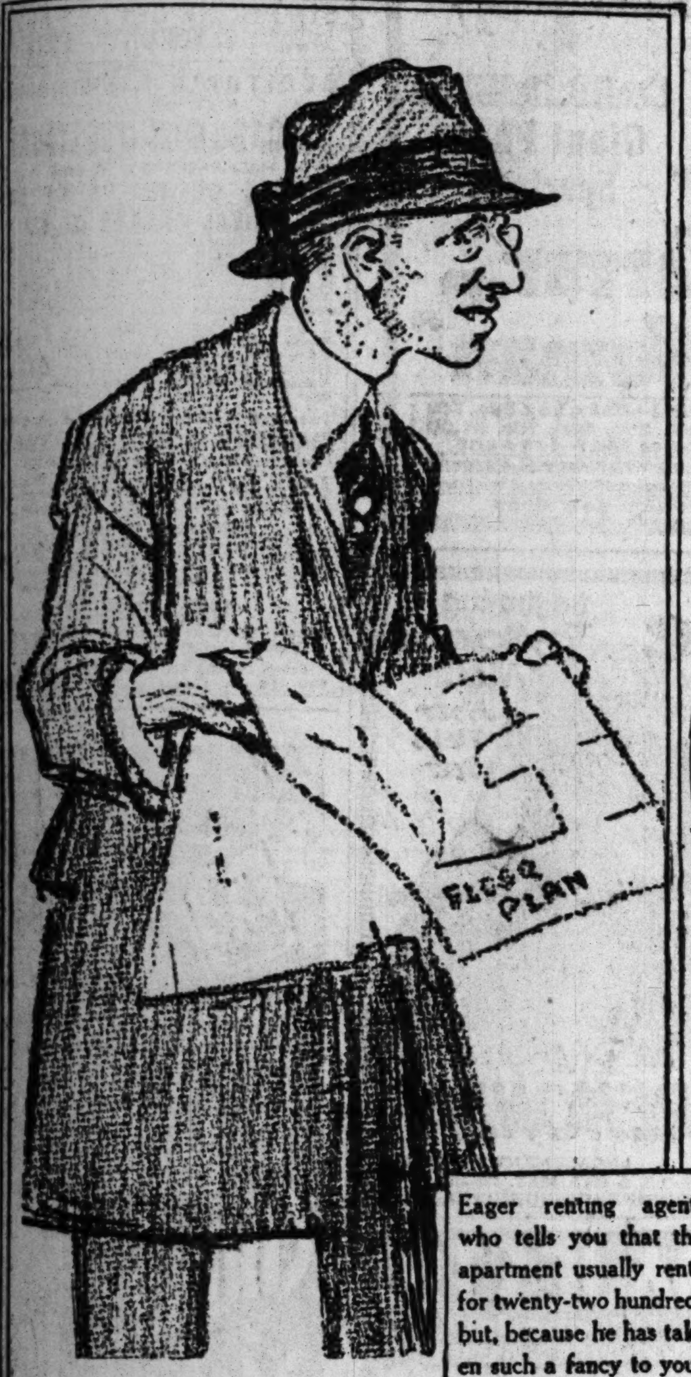
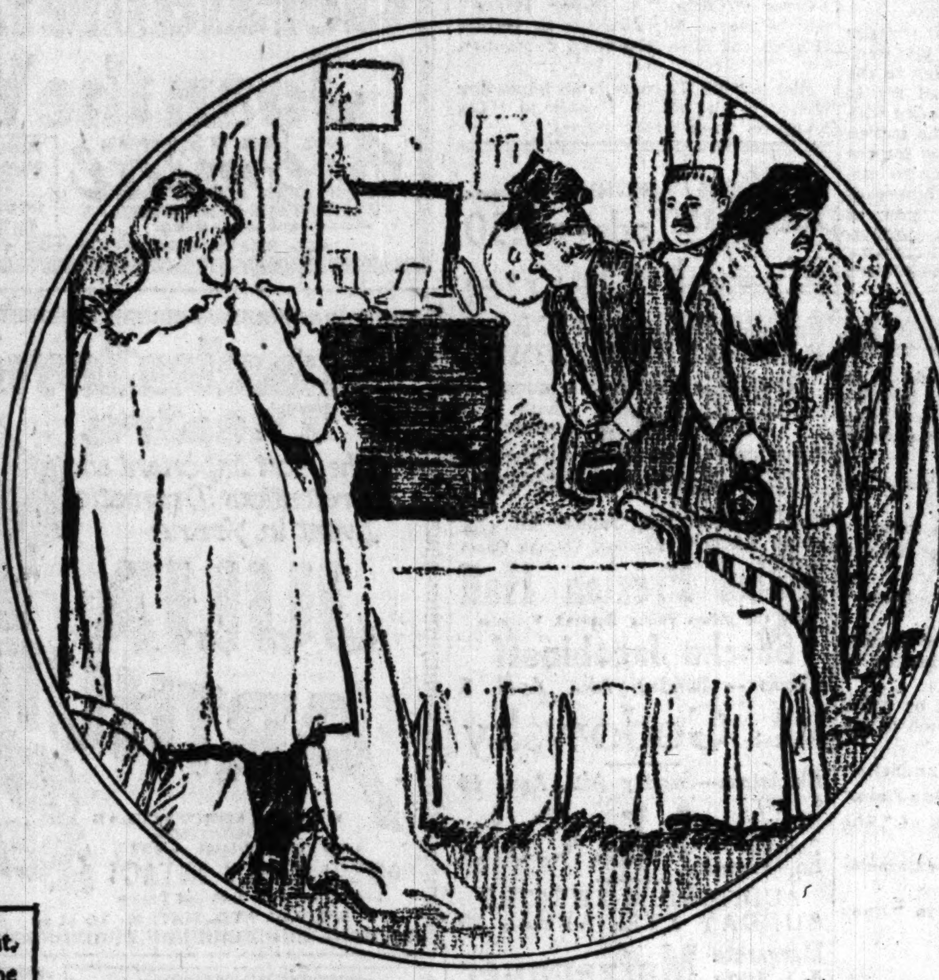
Drawn by W. E. HILL

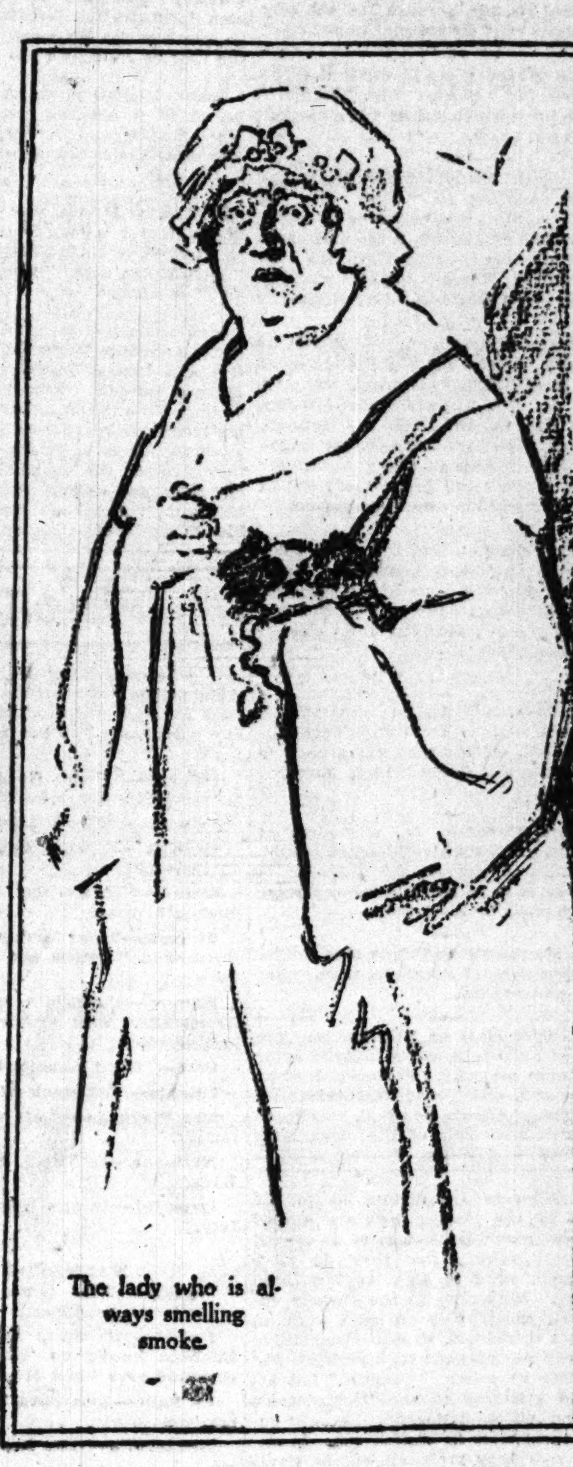
SIX ROOMS AND BATH



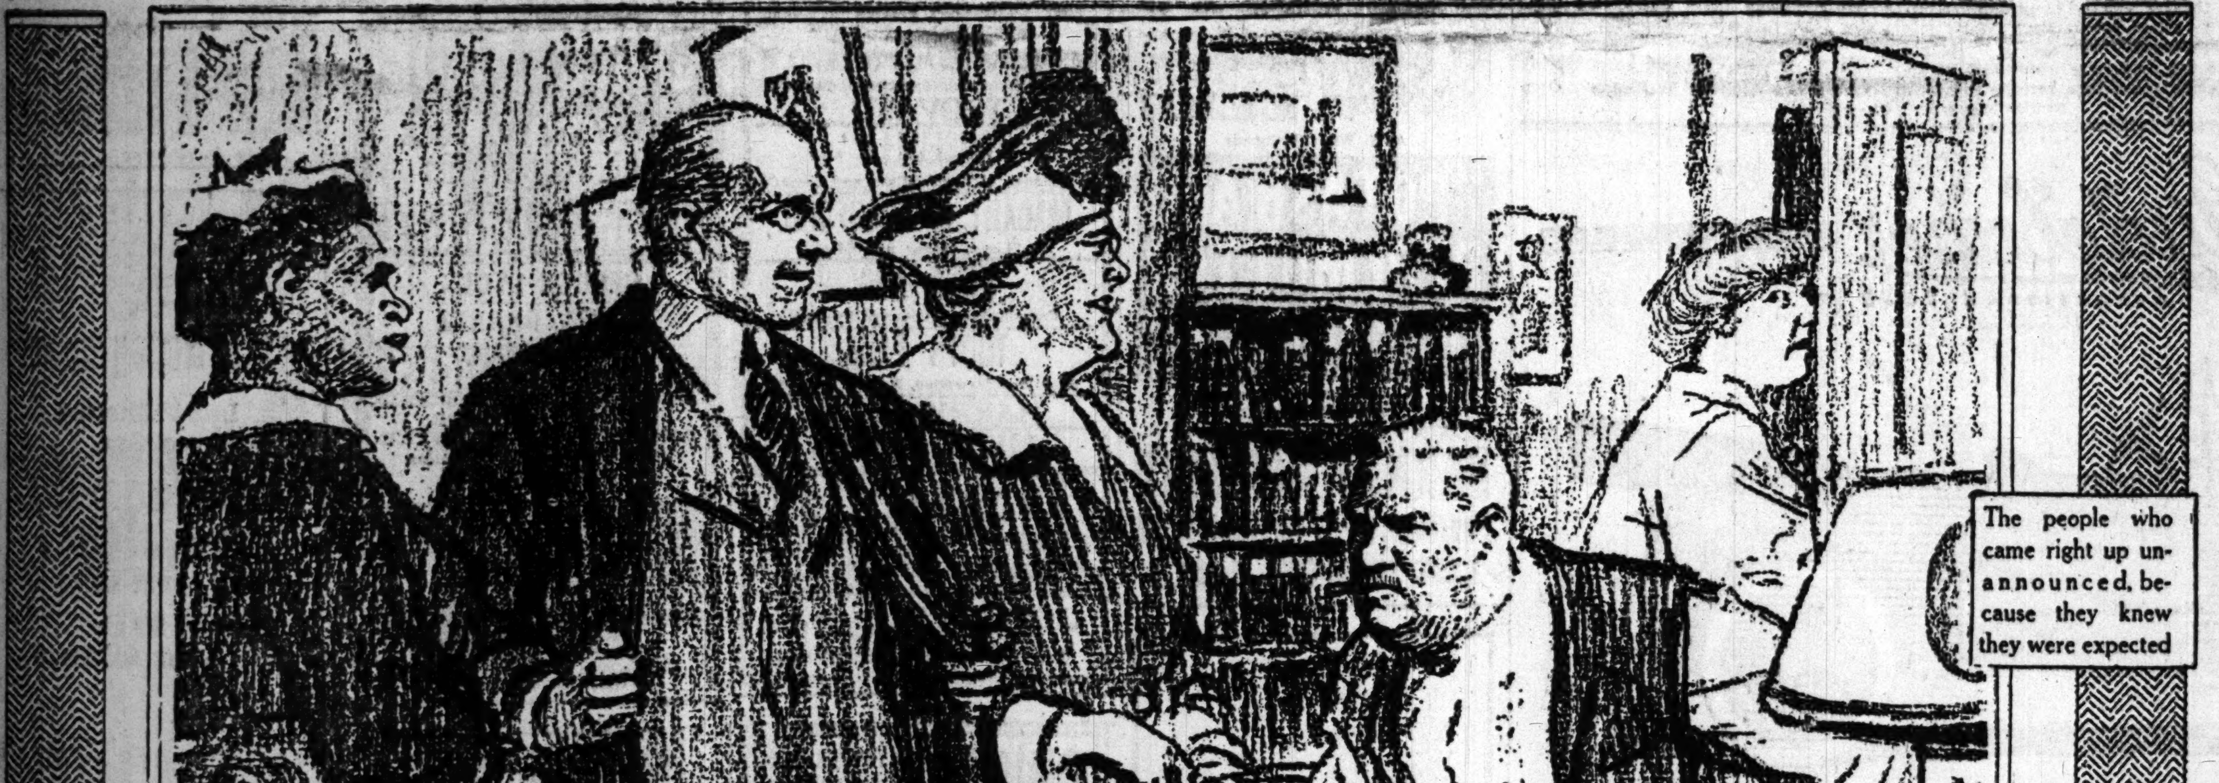
Eager renting agent, who tells you that the apartment usually rents for twenty-two hundred, but, because he has taken such a fancy to you, he'll let it go for eighteen hundred.



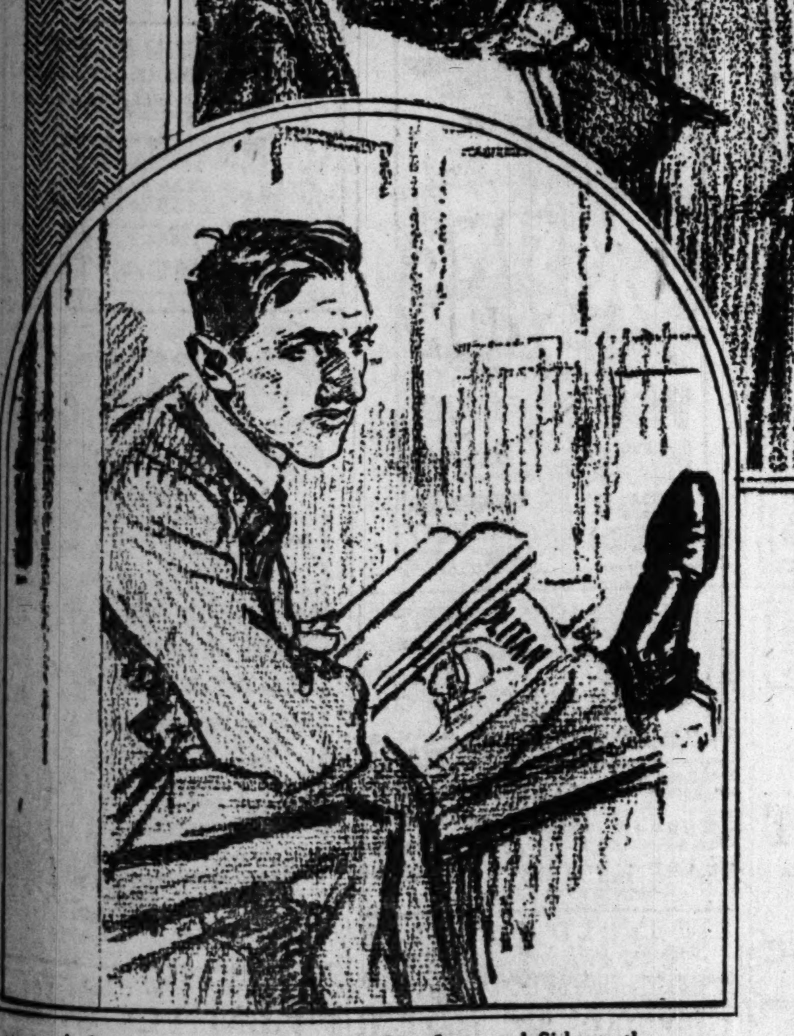
The prospective tenants, escorted by the janitor, want to see everything—including the room in which an unprepared member of the family is trying to hide.



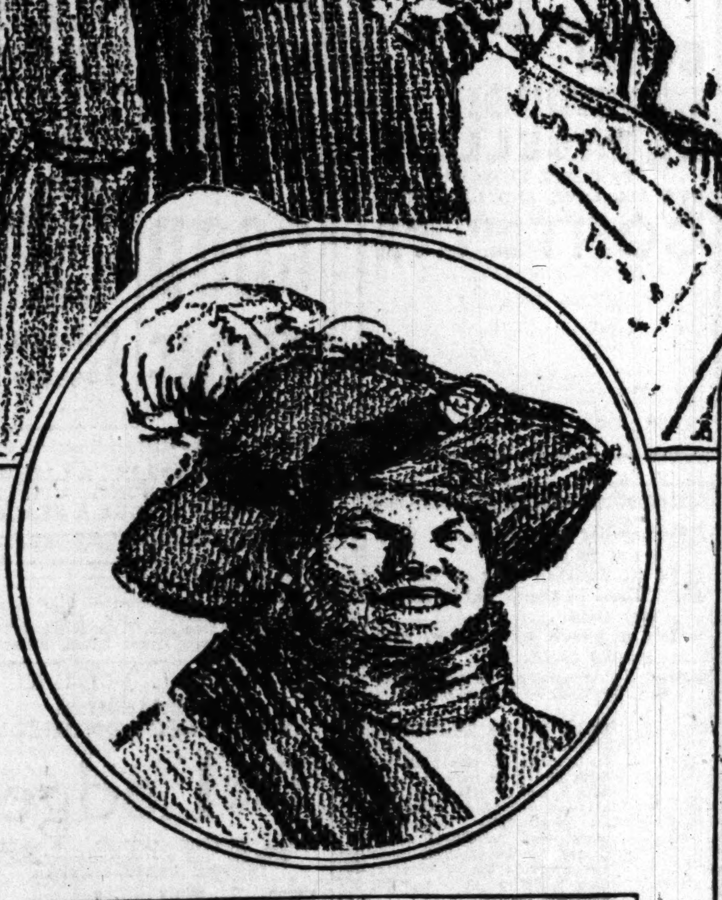
The lady who is always smelling smoke.



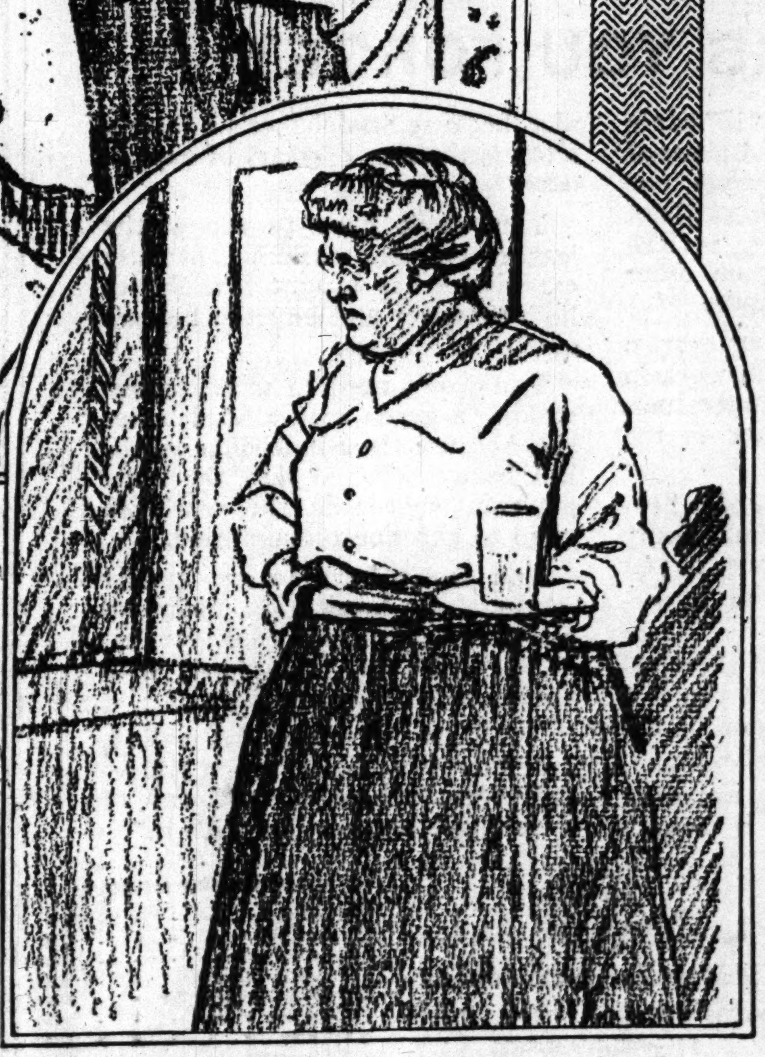
The people who came right up unannounced, because they knew they were expected



A family is moving in on the first floor and Sidney, the elevator boy, who objects to being imposed upon, retires with his car to the top of the house till all the heavy pieces have been carried in.



Victoria, the wash lady, whose social duties are such that she never arrives before 9:45 on Monday morning.



Mrs. Schultz, on a diet, is about to lunch on a glass of milk and a cracker, when she smells beefsteak and onions cooking somewhere downstairs.

Heaving the Salutary Brickbat at the Complaisant Critic

By Percy Hammond and Others.

A PROMINENT player who permits me now and then to talk to him suggests amiably that newspaper criticism of the theater is the function of a poltroon. He says that although the work of a critic is sometimes as susceptible to printed derision as is that of an actor, the reviewer rests serene in the craven security of his baneful job, assured that no one will ever have a chance to hurt him publicly in the feelings. Criticism, says he, has been described as an art, yet it is subject to none of the penalties which follow the incompetent practice of any other art. He asks if it has ever occurred to me that the players whom I bruise by my sneering ambiguities might easily and justly apply the corrective scourge to me. But I hit and hide. I jest at scars who never felt a wound. He would like to see me some morning in the painted perusal of a journal of large circulation among the contents of which is an exposé of my inefficiencies. My suffering, he thinks, would do me good.

Well, at 10 o'clock this morning I shall enter the umbra of that dark experience. At that hour I shall read the appended opinions received, with one exception, in last evening's mail—the exception being the ode beginning "Thou obese votary of the battered muse." Quoting from that poem the other day, I wrote, "Thou obese votary of the worthless word," which I think is better.

"New York, March 22.

"O Egregious Chicagoan: Accessibility to vituperation, I suppose, is a necessary prerequisite to greatness. You have been doubtless 'balled out,' execrated, and laughed at by better men than I.

"But I am paying you an involuntary compliment in the taking of the trouble to write you this. You are my pet aversion, and I am, my dear sir, yours sincerely,

A READER."

Chicago, Feb. 20.—To Percy Hammond:

Thou obese votary of the battered Muse,
Thou glib'st juggler of obscure phrase,
Who tiresomely, with rhetoric profuse,
Doth rattle the bony pates of thy poor readers;
Who the morning's sorry sheet with open mouth
Do greedily devour, and to others
Of less understanding quote
Thy burrowings.
A word but here and there, as if
By accident, with sense,
They seize upon it and enlarge
With great gusto thine erudition.
Thine avowed 's a learn'd art—
It hath no stool for euphuisms
Or sweeping denouncers:
To criticize with license one
Must have wits; the remedy to apply.
More than generous of thy spavined quips—
Ever chary of thy worthless praise,
Allusions recondite do seem thy stock in trade.
Go to! Write sensibly (si potes) of that
For which thou'rt paid.

Chicago, March 23.

Dear Sir: After reading your semi-tolerant review of "Erstwhile Susan" I am off you for life. Didn't you know that the play was an affront to every intelligent person who saw it, or were you afraid to say so? You are becoming the Cinderella man of critics.

MRS. R. B.

Chicago, March 23.—Dear Sir: As some one has said, it is bad enough to be born and bred a dunce, but to be born a dunce and bred a critic is much worse. Your contemptuous view of the supreme art and realism of "Erstwhile Susan" and your failure to appreciate the great artistry of Minnie Maddern Fiske stamps you as unworthy of your responsible position. Again, your attitude toward Maurice Browne, who is an artistic actor, and the Little theater, a large influence for good, makes you a menace to the culture of Chicago, which would be better if you were not in it.

Chicago, March 23.—To the Editor: A litany: From Eva Tanguay and from Al Jolson; from Shubert musical comedies and from musical comedies that are not Shubert; from tripe and from "Rube" plays with dress suits in the last act; from the South Shore Country club, and from the municipal pier; from the word "milieu," and from the word "vis-à-vis"; from the thrift of Chicago millionaires, and from "patriotic" railroad presidents; from "Good Gracious Annabelle" and "The Boomerang," and from those who like them; from Chicago and Chicagoans, and from Chicago street cars; from pusillanimous pacifists, and from Americans who patronize a restaurant called the Berlin room in a hotel called the Bismarck; from dieting fat women who look like tubes with the tooth paste squeezed out; from jaz bands, and from Judge Landis; from ukuleles, and from "Dixie"; from cancer, and from the dramatic critic of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE—good Lord, deliver us!

Rossville, Ill., March 23.

To the Dramatic Critic: I have long had two serious quarrels with all dramatic, and much musical, criticism. The first was admirably expressed, not long ago, by your young lady correspondent who played the Mrs. Humphrey to your Uncle Matthew, and whom you, tersely but evasively, squelched with your caption, "Serious Criticism's Need of a Drama." The dramatic critic, in particular, seems to feel that he is called upon, by the exigencies of his profession, to adopt a frothy, naughty attitude toward life and its expressions in terms of art; and he advertises his Weltanschauung in a smart, flippant style. This is a remnant of a pseudo-cavalierism (pardon the coinage!). Personally, I am a Shavian Puritan, in the drama and in criticism of the drama. So much for spirit; as to form: here, too, I am a Puritan, though not a purist. Why should the critic strive for a minimum of intelligibility by deliberately adopting an ornate, bizarre, circumlocutory, effusive style that would not be permitted to pass in a Freshman-English theme? I am asking for enlightenment; and I put the query to you, as, at once, the least hopeless and the frankest critic of my reading acquaintance. In looking back over this letter I find that I am myself guilty of the sins I have stoned. Just see what you've done to my style! Yours deferentially,

Memphis, Tenn., March 23.

Dramatic Editor: Well, the same old line of stuff is being handed out by you. Guess you have nothing to give the public but the same dope. At least on Sunday it seems you would be able to get off the beaten path and give the public something about their favorites. The Lord knows that those who have a liking for the certain few that you are forever writing about surely get enough, even if they are hogs and want a whole lot. We are beginning to believe it is of little or no use in trying to tell you that there are many people who do not care for the certain few that you are always writing about, like Laurette Taylor, but so far it has done no good. I hope you do not wear your clothes as long as you stick to certain people in your writings. Come on now and work a little harder and give the people something that they will like and praise. You have lived an easy life long enough and should be willing to work a little now for a couple of weeks. If there is anything like thankfulness in you, show it by giving the public something that they want, and that is, something about the other stage people who are good but never get a mention from you, such as Paul Gilmore, now playing in "Experience." Respectfully,

Nashville, Tenn., March 22.

Old Friend: It certainly is a fact that you can use more space and say less things of real interest than any other man we ever knew of. You can use column after column and never give the public anything that they are really interested in. If you could just turn over your brain and put some new characters in your paper it would reap a hundred per cent interest and improvement to the readers, who know about the different actors and actresses who you are always raving about, like Laurette Taylor, but would like to learn something about the few others who are just as famous but of whom time to call a halt. Respectfully,

SOUTHERN READERS.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Profanity has become a common thing in the theater. In the brave days when we were 21 or thereabouts the leading lady was always mildly shocked at the leading man's damns, and we have a positively vivid recollection of the sensation caused a dozen or fifteen years ago by the ignorant and more or less innocently profane Tony in "Arizona." Tony, you may remember, was the first stage character to use the forbidden oath by calling on the Deity and all the powers of damnation to bear witness to his passion for Lena, the sergeant's daughter. Augustus Thomas, who had created Tony, explained that the speech was due to Tony's ignorance of the real significance of the oath, and though a great many people were shocked (it used to be great fun to watch them from the back of the auditorium as they recoiled before it), in time the audiences became accustomed to the speech and it was never deleted.

Later, there was the epithet Trampas or some other swarthy villain in "The Virginian" applied to the heroic Dustin Farnum. It reflected rather positively on the ancestry of the hero, and Trampas was dramatically warned never to repeat it save in that spirit of camaraderie known among the boys as the brakeman's cheery greeting. "When you call me that, smile!" were the words of Wister, the author, and gradually audiences came to accept this overt act in dialogue as a concession to the verities. Vaguely they sensed some part of the asserted truth, that plain, consistent speech is a help to art in the spoken drama.

Those were the days before the intimate theater and the more intimate drama. Those were the days when the footboard of a bed seen from the auditorium was enough to register the wickedness of the play or the suggestive looseness of French farce. Then, you surely remember, the naughty actress person always pretended to do her disrobing behind a screen, throwing the lace and chiffon things over the top of the barrier, in place of standing boldly in the spotlight and draping them over the full size four poster as she does today. Since then we have grown calloused, not to say expectant. Common oaths, for instance, have become so frequent as to cause neither flutter nor comment. We counted no less than a dozen hells and damns in a recent play, and no one seemed to pay the least attention to them. They have become as ordinary as bare knees in the chorus and exposed calves on Fifth avenue, passing incidents in our current march toward sex freedom.

And yet, in spite of all the hardening processes audiences, and particularly New York audiences, have undergone, the first night crowd that greeted W. Somerset Maugham's new play, "Our Betters," last week was considerably stirred, and sections of it unquestionably shocked, by a touch of old English profanity as unexpected as we figure it was unnecessary. Controversy still prevails as to whether this oath and the situation that excites it will make the play or break it.

It occurs at the end of the second act. "Our Betters" (a sneering title) is the story of a group of American rotters in London, wealthy undesirables trying to filch social prominence from the unsuspecting Britons or buy it where it has a price. One of them is Lady Grayston (nee Saunders of New York), who, having married a title for herself, is about to put her younger sister in the way of securing another. It happens that Lady Grayston, having found her $40,000 a year insufficient for a real social campaign in London, has accepted the attentions and the donations of another ambitious expatriate, an eager sensualist with new made millions, who establishes his American class by affectionately referring to his favorite as "Girlie."

There is also in this group a third American, the Duchess of Surennes (nee Hodgson of Chicago), who, past the years of her prime, is obliged to pay rather handsomely for the attentions of younger men, and is in a constant state of apprehension lest these be taken from her. At the time of the play the duchess is supporting an engaging young English slacker, who also has attracted the attention of the younger and more attractive Lady Grayston.

Little sister, of course, is unaware of this situation. London society is quite wonderful to her, particularly the American colony section, and having acquired a prospective suitor with a title she is about to throw over a rich but untitled American sweetheart and marry herself a coronet. At which stage little sister is sent by the jealous and suspicious Duchess of Surennes to the summer house to call Lady Grayston and the English slacker in to tea. And what she discovers at the summer house is not alone enough to change her own attitude toward title hunting, but also to spring the trap that exposes the duplicity of Lady Grayston to her rich lover, the millionaire merchant. It is then that he turns upon her and in a violent, Maldonado rage (if you remember Pinero's "Iris"), hurls at her the epithet that must have stirred the shades of Wycherley and of Congreve to great applause, an epithet that without ceremony placed Lady Grayston back in the brute kingdom among the females more noted for their promiscuity than their class.

The New York audience quailed a bit, but, as we previously have intimated, the quailing today is not what it was, and it is not improbable that this scene will attract enough members of the smart set to give the play some vogue. In the concluding act everything is patched up, and the decadent group goes merrily on its way. Lady Grayston's indiscretion was unfortunate, but understandable. She regains her lover by some obvious explanations, the lonesome duchess takes back her boy, promises him a two seated roadster, and agrees to marry him as a better way to hold him, and all is as it was. Little sister from America, however, decides to give up her English lordling and return home immediately. American society in London is much too much for her.

Mr. Maugham does us the doubtful honor of declaring that his principal snobs are drawn from life, and that his underlying purpose in exposing them is not only to show them up before us, but before each other as well. The biggest personal success of the cast is earned by Rose Coghlan as the duchess. Chrystal Herne, not at all the summer house type, is unsuited to the rôle of the physical Lady Grayston, but plays her rather skillfully, and John Flood is a fine old bounder as the merchant.

The Provincetown Players, the newest group of serious thinkers to go in for the drama down Greenwich village way, seem destined to become publicly known in spite of themselves.

When they started, as they did a few weeks ago in a veritable shoebox of a theater in Macdougal street, they tried to keep the matter very secret. They were seeking individual expression, as the Washington Square players had done before them, and they preferred to do so on their own, at least until they felt their feet firmly in contact with the boards. So they invited only their fellow villagers, at 50 cents a head, and never said a word to the newspapers.

But last week they produced a one acter entitled "Cocaine," the story of which filtered up town, and now they stand in fair danger of having publicity thrust upon them.

"Cocaine," written by a young man named Pendelton King, is a village 'orror for which no apologies are asked. It is the frank story of a girl of the streets and a cocaine fiend who lives upon her earnings. He is an ex-prize fighter and the girl feels that her love for him, whatever it may seem to others, is really the one decent thing in her life. At the time of the play they are both down and out. There is no money in the house, no hope in the future. The girl finds herself losing her power to attract men; her lover is half crazed because he has been unable to buy the drug for four days. Under the conditions she succeeds in persuading him to die with her. They make the room ready for the event and turn on the gas. As they lie waiting for the end he wonders, idly, how much of a story the papers will make of the suicide—probably no more than a line or two. Growing suspicious because death does not attack them they investigate the gas jet. The man strikes a match and the flickering flame indicates that the gas is all gone; the meter demands another quarter—and there isn't a cent in the house. So they get up and decide to go on dragging out their rotten lives. The groans of the girl, contemplating the horror of her future, make the final curtain welcome.

The villagers are divided as to the merits of the play. They are agreed as to its power, but not as to its ethical or social value. For they do have standards, even in New York's Latin quarter. Naturally, to the curious uptowners, the play is no more than an ugly bit of realism, exposing something they can see no good in exposing. But whatever its worth, "Cocaine" has attracted attention to the Provincetown Players, which unquestionably will inspire them later to branch out. In another year they probably will be rivals of the Washington Square Players, now solidly established at the Comedy. And ten or twenty years from now writers of the theater will be mentioning them with the other forces that, while the twentieth century was still in its teens, took up the American drama and began to shake it into a new activity.

BURNS MANTLE.

NEWS of the THEATERS

William Lindsay, author of Julia Arthur's "Seremonda," is what the reporters describe as "wealthy," and he was once president of the Drama league of Boston.

Among those who will pay to attend Miss Nora Bayes' benefit for the Actors' fund tomorrow are Arthur Byron and members of "The Boomerang" company, and Barney Bernard and the cast of "Potash and Perlmutter in Society."

Winthrop Ames sends word that he will present "Pierrot the Prodigal" here in the spring, but at what theater he does not know.

Miss Jessie Glendinning, who is the miser's daughter in "Turn to the Right," is also the daughter of John Glendinning, an English actor who came to America twenty-seven years ago with the Kendalls. Her brother, Ernest Glendinning, plays Youth in "Experience."

"Betty," in which Raymond Hitchcock will appear at the Illinois next week, is an English piece and was first played by Mr. Hitchcock in London. Joseph Santley and Miss Ivy Sawyer, the prospective Mrs. Santley, are in the cast. Mr. Hitchcock plans to appear later in the season in a comedy called "Some," under his own management.

To the Editor.—From the hotel clerk in "Good Gracious, Annabelle." Just to thank you for your article in Sunday's TRIBUNE. I don't deserve all those splendid things said, but I do like to hear them. Thank you.

WILLIS REED.

Miss Margaret Anglin and Walter Damrosch's New York Symphony orchestra will collaborate next season in performances of Greek tragedy here and elsewhere.

Richard Mansfield Jr., a student at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, in Pittsburgh, announces his intention to revive as soon as possible the repertory made famous by his father.

John Barrymore and Constance Collier are rehearsing "Peter Ibbotson" for early presentation.

The senior class at Yale has selected Douglas Fairbanks as its favorite actor by a large majority. Forbes-Robertson was second, and David Warfield third. Miss Maude Adams, as usual, was voted the favorite actress of the class, with Miss Marguerite Clark and Elsie Ferguson second and third.

In a legal controversy over the authorship of "I Can Dance with Everybody but My Wife," the courts have decided that Joseph Cawthorn, not James T. Powers, wrote it.

John McKeon, a well known theatrical manager, has sued the Charles Frohman incorporation for $625,000, said to be due him for his work in organizing the Empire All-Star Film company.

Frank Moulan is to return to public notice in a musical comedy by Glen MacDonough and A. Baldwin Sloane. Mr. Sloane, the composer, will also be in the cast.

Miss Alice Dovey, the pictorial leading woman of "Very Good Eddie," is to be married to Jack Hazzard, author of "Turn to the Right," after her Chicago Theater engagement.

Fred Stone will give his final Chicago performances of "Chin Chin" this week and soon thereafter will journey to the Arizona cañons, where he will try to capture the indigenous wild beasts with his lariat for the benefit of the motion pictures. Thus he is appearing for the last times as the ventriloquist, the circus rider, and as Paderewski, humorous travesties which have further endeared him to his public, making him undoubtedly the most popular musical comedian of his time.

Mr. Montgomery's illness prevents definite plans for his summer, but Mrs. Stone (Miss Allene Crater) will recreate at Chin Chin ranch, Long Island, with the three younger Stones and the Stone herd of bronchoes and polo ponies.

THINGS YOU FORGET

The Studebaker Series "18" car is an evolution and perfected piece of mechanism. That is why you can FORGET many little things about Studebaker that you have to REMEMBER and care for on other cars not so highly developed.

For instance: the cooling system of the Studebaker car will work in any climate, at any temperature, providing you keep water in the radiator.

The lubrication system of a Studebaker car will work unfailingly in absolutely all conditions, if you will remember to put oil in the crank case occasionally.

The electric lights, and the electric starter will never fail you if a little distilled water is put in the battery from time to time.

You will not have to paint your body frequently to keep it looking nice, because Studebaker's finishing work is the sum of years of experience.

You won't have to renew the leather on your cushions, because experience has taught Studebaker how to select and buy the highest quality of leather.

You won't need to worry about making a grade with a Studebaker car, because the Studebaker motor has been perfected into the most powerful motor in the world in ratio to gasoline consumption.

You won't have to continually worry about lubrication, about oil and greasing parts of your car, because every part is equipped with ample capacity grease cups.

These are the things that make it a delight to own and run a Studebaker car, and cause you to say, "I never have any trouble with it."

ANOTHER FARRAR TRIUMPH.

WHETHER or not we believe that before we come into this world our lives are laid out on lines as nicely calculated as a truck gardener's even rows, we must admit that some people seem fated to achieve success in no matter what they undertake. I am thinking of Geraldine Farrar.

She is coming to us this week in "Joan the Woman," and all indications point toward a success that will be as notable in this way as her other successes in other fields have been. It was in 1903 that she scored her triumph in Gounod's opera "Romeo and Juliet." At one time the kaiser, who is extremely fond of Italian opera, conversed with her for some time after a concert and praised her singing.

When Mme. Nuovina, the French singer, became suddenly ill one time, Miss Farrar was asked to sing "La Navarraise." This was a distinct honor.

While Geraldine Farrar could have had her pick of royalty for a mate, she has always declared that dukes and sich had no appeal to her. But, while admitting her genius, beauty, and personality, we must always recognize the fact that she is an indefatigable worker. While making "Joan the Woman" she suffered much discomfort and even pain, for she was almost constantly on horseback, wearing the heavy armor made of real United States steel. The armlets and chains at times cut into her flesh, and they say that for days there were marks left on her wrists from them.

Louise Glaum is soon to be seen in a new sort of rôle. We know her best as a vampire de luxe. This time we shall see her as a girl gangster, who suffers her own happiness in an effort to help a helpless derelict.

President John R. Freuler of Mutual has been visiting the western studios. He has automobiled with Charley Chaplin, consulted with Helen Holmes, watched Gail Kane work, closed a contract with the Caulfield Photoplays company for a series of fifty-two one reel comedies featuring Billie Rhodes, and consulted directors and studio managers on the subject of trade requirements. A full trip.

It might be said of Dorothy Dalton that she is "in her cups." No, I don't mean what you think I mean. I'm only trying to tell you in an original fashion that during the last few months she has won eleven cups for ballroom dancing.

Music is the passion of the William Nigh company of the Fox players.

They tell us that Mariam Cooper is a ventriloquist.

An interested interviewer asked of Bert Delaney, who will play opposite June Caprice in her next production, to "tell me something of interest about your youth." "O, yes," said Mr. Delaney, "once I was saved from drowning by a dog and some one killed the dog the next day."

Those who have enjoyed Virginia Terhune van de Water's stories will be anxious to see Clara Kimball Young appear in the picturization of one of them, entitled "Why I Left My Husband." Miss Young should be able to give a splendid interpretation to this rôle.

Mary Anderson of Vitagraph has put on the season's first coat of tan.

Paul Willis, now with Metro, makes his long trouser debut in the Yorke-Metro feature, "The Promise." His graduation from knickerbockers means much in the life of young Paul.

The Harold Lockwood company is in Arizona taking scenes for "The Secret Spring." This is the picturization of the novel, "The Hidden Spring."

At the Balboa studio a trained nurse has been added to the official staff to look after the women and children.

Do you want to know what a typical motion picture man looks like? Here's a description by Hampton Del Ruth, editor and producing manager of the Sennett Keystone studios.

They tell us that in his initial Artcraft production "In Again, Out Again," Douglas Fairbanks licks fifty ruffians.

Because there have been a number of robberies in Hollywood, Cal., recently special guards have been placed around the premises of Mary Pickford's new home. That's right, don't you let them steal you, Mary!

Dick Willis, amiable publicity man on the coast, says: "Douglas Fairbanks has a new suit. Yes, a lawsuit. The pattern is a check, quite a large check." He also says in regard to the railroads over which Max Linder traveled: "Wee, wee, they call it the trunk line now. You see, the three freight trains carried Max Linder's trunks and the 'special' containing the valets, came by the valley route."

While resting a few days in Los Angeles, Marguerita Fischer visited four picture shows a day. We said rested.

Grace Cunard, who has finished her work for Universal, will take a short rest before starting her duties again. She contemplates an automobile tour through California.

George Periolat wishes to bet with any one that his name is spelled in more ways than any other actor. (You should see the way they spell mine.)

Florence La Badie of Thanhouser pictures is always a favorite with her directors. They say that she is remarkably free from the artistic temperaments that so often besets them and makes life miserable.

Merl Lavey's new war pictures, "America's Warning—Heroic France," begins the second week at the Strand theater this afternoon. The engagement was extended as the result of patronage based on approval of the thrilling novelties pictured and the preparedness lesson conveyed by the films. Continuous performances are given from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. The entertainment is presented for the benefit of the American Fund for French Wounded, the American ambulance, and other war charities.

SHOULD I SUFFER

Is Marriage Sacred?

New and Powerful Photodramas deal with Humanity's Greatest Problem.

Love and marriage, home and family—there you have the most vitally important factors in the great drama of life. But love grows cold—marriage ties are broken—home and family are forgotten. Why?

I want every man and woman—young and old—married or single—to see this important series of photodramas. They show, in a frank, graphic, vivid manner, the chief causes of matrimonial misunderstanding, discord and estrangement.

Each of these pictures is a complete story, full of life, emotion and swift, spirited action. Each tells a thrilling story that will give you something new to think about—something to remember long after the ordinary picture would be forgotten. See every one of them—one each week.

The cast is led by Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew and Sydney Ainsworth.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

WALTHALL FAN: Henry Walthall has been with Essanay for a long time. The last picture in which he appeared was "Burning the Candle."

HERBERT: June Caprice is with the Fox Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. I shall be glad to forward a letter to her if you will send it in my care. Yes, Herbert, I'm quite sure she would send you an autographed photo if you raved to her as you did to me. She'd be afraid not to.

AL AND TURPSY: I'm right with you! I hope to live a long time! No, Harold Lockwood and May Allison are not married. Mary Pickford has no children of her own, but she has a little niece whom she adores. Twice. The baby was an "extra" child. Thomas Forman plays with Lasky. I understand he is not married. I have no information regarding the private affairs of William Desmond. Marguerite Clarke was born in 1882. She is not. Yes. I thank you, gentlemen, I thank you! Pronounce my name any little old way you want to. I can't hear you.

BILLY BUMPS: Anything hurt you, Billy? Billie Burke is not in pictures at the present time. Marguerite Clarke is with Famous Players company, 130 West Fifty-sixth street, New York. Anita Stewart and Alice Joyce are with Vitagraph, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. Fannie Warde is with Lasky, Los Angeles, Cal. Lillian Gish is with Triangle, Los Angeles, Cal. Beverly Bayne is with Metro, 1465 Broadway, New York. May Allison is with Yorke-Metro, Hollywood, Cal. Clara Kimball Young is with the Clara Kimball Young corporation, 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York. Marguerita Fischer is with Mutual, Los Angeles, Cal. Address Mary Miles Minter, care of American-Mutual, Santa Barbara, Cal., and Mary Pickford, care of the Artcraft Pictures corporation, 729 Seventh avenue, New York. You're welcome.

CURIOUS: Following is the cast of "Tillie Wakes Up": Tillie Tinkelpaw, Marie Dressler; Mr. Pipkins, Johnny Hines; Henry Tinkelpaw, Frank Beamish; Mrs. Luella Pipkins, Ruby De Remer; Mrs. Nosey, Ruth Barrett; Mr. Nosey, Jack Brown. You are entirely welcome.

E. A.: I suspect you of blarneying, but a bit of flattery now and then does certainly help to make the wheels of life whir more easily. So, whither yez be in airnest or in foon, I thank ye!

J. P.: You ask, "Why, when an effort is made to show a thoroughly smart dinner party, do they always put the host with a man at his right and the hostess at the other end of the table with a woman at her right?" I should say there could be no reason at all for this being done, unless the director perhaps had some particular bit of "business" he wanted to "get across." Otherwise, such an arrangement would seem to indicate ignorance on his part. This was my own opinion and I have had it corroborated by a well known director.

"NO DEFECTIVES!"—UNCLE SAM

The United States needs men for the navy, but Uncle Sam is particular about the kind of men he accepts. In this organization there must be no defectives, and in San Francisco the recruits must submit to a rough examination before they are accepted in our "first line" of defense.

News About Musicians

By Frederick Donaghey.

THAT today's will be the final concert in Chicago by the Kneisel Quartet is, doubtless, sufficient as comment on the dissolution of the little organization. The story of the Kneisels here is, in kind and degree, its story in other communities: that they have known larger response in Boston and New York City is due, I should say, to their having devoted more time to the cultivation of popularity in the east. The quartet has been in existence thirty-two years, twenty-five of which have included New York in the scheme: they have been visiting Chicago sixteen years. The deficits of the early years were met by Major Higginson, whose beneficence made possible the endurance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the city for which it is named.

Franz Kneisel was concert-master of the orchestra, and occasionally served as conductor when Gericke or Nikisch was ill. It may be remembered that he conducted the Boston organization here in 1893, the year of the World's Fair. He was so good a conductor that the Philadelphia Orchestra asked him, about ten years ago, to take over its artistic destinies; and he was on the point of accepting a position which, all things regarded, would have meant less work and complete freedom from pecuniary problems.

A New York City patriot has been seeking to make an issue, "at a time like this," of the Metropolitan's reviving "Die Meistersinger": he believes that the offense against the honor of our country is the greater because of Gadski's taking part. The management, patiently replying, points out that Gatti-Casazza has the say as to what operas shall be mounted; that his contract stipulates that not more than 40 per cent of the performances in a season shall be of German works or in the German tongue; that he is a citizen of a country at war with Germany.

Although it is not in her recital repertoire, Alma Gluck regards as right the sentiment of "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier": she says that she would kill her son to prevent him from going to war. She is the mother of a girl.

Victor Herbert's Irish operetta, now called "Eileen," has been submitted in New York City, and appears to possess most of the known attributes of a success. The Evening Post's reviewer says that "it seems more of a grand-opera than De Koven's 'The Canterbury Pilgrims,'" adding that all the music of "Eileen" is marked by "a striking Irish flavor—a flavor as pronounced and delectable as Stanford's 'Shamus O'Brien': a sentimental vein with characteristic melodic curves that make it unmistakable. It is not borrowed Irish music, but Herbert's own—which is the more remarkable as he is the real creator of the American school of operetta, which is quite another thing."

Vernon Stiles, who had an unhappy Chicago experience as the Parsifal of Campanini's last-season Wagner series, was let out of the chief man's part in "Eileen" before the piece was put into New York, and replaced with a tenor named Walter Van Brunt. However, that did not seem a good name for an Irish opera and he is now known as Walter Scanlan. He is highly praised by the New York press: the Post says his voice is like McCormack's.

Clarence Whitehill, singing Hans Sachs for the first time in the revival of "Die Meistersinger," was so successful in the part that he achieved headlines in some of the newspapers. The opera was in Campanini's first prospectus for this season: that he did not put it on is not surprising; for it requires a great deal of rehearsing, a formidable array of competent singers in the masculine parts, a good romantic tenor of German bent, and a definite personality for Eva. Farrar was, doubtless, the only logical singer for the part.

Galeffi, an Italian baritone who specializes in the "elegant" parts of the repertoire, is desired by Campanini for next season: it is a question of the singer's willingness to make the trip in the conditions of war. He is not, if he comes, to take Rimini's place, but parts for which Rimini is not fitted by personality or temperament: Don Giovanni, perhaps, and Scarpia. Scotti has been the only acceptable player of these parts in years; and his Scarpia is still a draw, although his singing-voice no longer matters to anybody save himself. Campanini's revival of "Don Giovanni" last season was an absurd failure entirely because of his casting the antique and unattractive Ancona for the Don: not even the allure of McCormack as Ottavio and the lovely singing of Helen Stanley as Elvira were an offset.

Schumann-Heink is willing, at least, to go into the two-a-day: it is now a matter of arranging an accommodation between her notions of pay and the management's. The record appears to indicate that grand-opera singers have not been among the assets of the variety-theater bills enlisting them. Calvé is, perhaps, the most important of the women who have tried it.

Now that the production of "The Canterbury Pilgrims" has put Reginald DeKoven back into print, theatrical managers are rummaging among his old pieces in the hope of finding one promising profits in revival. One firm regards "The Highwayman" as just the thing: DeKoven and his first collaborator, Harry B. Smith, wrote this piece in 1897, when it was produced with Hilda Clarke, Van Rensselaer Wheeler, the late Jerome Sykes, and a possibly-remembered Irish tenor, Joseph O'Mara, in the principal parts.

"The Highwayman" is not recalled as a striking success: it is, I suspect, best remembered as the piece in which the burlesque detective, Foxy Quiller, was first employed as a character. Sykes was so comic in the part that Smith and DeKoven afterward wrote for him an operetta based on and called for Quiller. O'Mara was a lovely singer; and for him, too, they wrote a piece, "The Three Dragoons": it is listed among their futilities. Lois Ewell, known in Chicago as a singer in the Aborn and Ravinia Park casts, is named for the principal woman in the revival of "The Highwayman."

DeKoven and Percy Mackaye, without waiting for the ultimate public verdict on "The Canterbury Pilgrims," are reported as well progressed on a new opera of "grand" implication.

The Messrs. Shubert list "Schubert" among the musical pieces they will mount: it is a German work, and has to do with romantic matter in the career of the composer.

Richard Hageman has been engaged again to conduct the summer-time opera in Ravinia Park.

The Week's Music

MR. STOCK'S schedule for the Friday-Saturday concerts does not comprehend a soloist. There will be two overtures—Weber's to "Der Freischütz," to begin, and Wagner's to "Rienzi," to finish. The symphony will be Mozart's in G-minor listed in Köchel as 550. Other matter will be Strube's Theme and Variations [new] and Weiner's Serenade for Small Orchestra.

The ninth and last-save-one Pop will be Thursday night, with this program: Glinka's overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," the wedding-march from Goldmark's "A Country Wedding," a suite of dances from Grétry's ballet of "Céphale et Procris," three dances composed by German for "King Henry VIII.," the Chopin-Thomas Military Polonaise, the Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," the prelude to Saint-Saëns' "The Deluge," Keller's Valse-Caprice, and Sibelius' symphonic poem called "Finlandia."

Pslams of Life

by J. P. McEvoy

BITTER LINES TO A NONSKID AUTO SALESMAN.

You hound of hell, you're on my trail,
You hunt me night and day,
You dog my weary footsteps.
In a pestilential way.
You haunt my busy office.*
You hang around my home,
I cannot shake you off my track
No matter where I roam.

I met you at the auto show
And foolishly I cried
"Your car looks pretty good to me,"
And then I crawled inside.
A wolfish gleam lit up your eye,
Your fangs were crool and white,
How happy I'd be now if I
Had wrung your neck that night.

For day and night from that day on
You call me on the phone,
Sometimes you hunt with other ghouls
But mostly hunt alone.
You send me letters, postal cards,
And cables and dispatches,
In avalanches, groups, and scads,
In bunches, bales, and batches.

You Nonskid auto salesman you,
You grim rapacious specter,
O, take your beak from out my heart,
Your form from out my sector!
Disperse, begone, and leave me be,
My life no longer mar;
I do not want your goldarn bus,
I do not want your car.

Now a Lifetime Car
Built and Tested for 200,000 Miles
With 100% Over-Strength

We now show Mitchells in two sizes. Both designed, in every vital part, for twice the needed strength. And both with many extras.

Three years ago, after one year in Europe, John W. Bate resolved to double Mitchell strength.

Our standard then was 50 per cent over-strength. He decided to make it 100 per cent over-strength. In this year's cars, for the first time, we announce that new attainment.

Every Part Studied

He has made a study of every part. He has worn out fifty cars in learning needed strength. He has devised radical tests to prove at least double-strength.

Over 440 parts are built of toughened steel. Safety parts are vastly oversize. All parts which get a major strain are built of Chrome-Vanadium.

Gears are tested for 50,000 pounds per tooth. He perfected his springs—Bate cantilevers—until in two years not a single one has broken.

He subjects his engine to 10,000-mile tests, then takes it apart and inspects it.

The result, we believe, is a lifetime car. Several Mitchells have survived 200,000 miles of hard driving—about 40 years of ordinary service.

No Added Cost

This over-strength has been accomplished without added factory cost. It is one of the Mitchell extras, paid for by factory savings.

This entire plant has been built and equipped to build this one type economically. Millions have been spent, under John W. Bate, to this single end.

The result is a saving, on this year's output, of at least $4,000,000. And that whole sum is spent on Mitchell extras, including this over-strength.

Unique Attractions

This year's Mitchells have 31 features which nearly all cars omit. Things like a power tire pump, dashboard engine primer, reversible headlights, etc. All things which you will want.

And on this year's cars we add 24 per cent to the cost of finish, upholstery and trimming. The result is marvels of beauty and luxury, with a finish that endures.

Savings made in our new body plant pay for all this added luxury.

TWO SIZES

Mitchell—a roomy, 7-passenger Six, with 127-inch wheelbase and a highly-developed 48-horsepower motor.
Price $1460, f. o. b. Racine

Price $1150, f. o. b. Racine

Also six styles of enclosed and convertible bodies. Also new Club Roadster.

What Would You Omit?

Come see these new cars and tell us what you would omit. Would you have a car less durable, less complete, less attractive?

If not, you must choose Mitchell. It has hundreds of extras which others do not offer. And they never can, at Mitchell prices, until they attain Mitchell factory efficiency.

One Size is Now $1150

This year the Mitchell comes in two sizes. The smaller is Mitchell Junior. It is a roomy and powerful Six—120-inch wheelbase, 40-horsepower motor. Large enough and powerful enough for a 5-passenger car.

So now you can get the size you want, and the price you want. And any style of body. And all are Mitchells, built to Mitchell standards, with the Mitchell extras and the Mitchell over-strength.

Come and see these latest models. They embody over 700 improvements which Mr. Bate has made.

When will You Cut Your Equipment Costs 75% and Use Smith Form-a-Trucks?

Smith Form-a-Truck $350 f. o. b. Chicago

Horse-drawn delivery and hauling saddles you with an excess cost for equipment that can easily amount to 75% over your entire investment.

A Money Saver
Smith Form-a-Truck eliminates all unnecessary investment in delivery and hauling equipment. It easily hauls twice the tonnage hauled by horses over three times the area and in the same time. This is real hauling and delivery efficiency—time saving, money earning in every line of business.

Loaders' & Drivers' Wages
Where you now use from three to four horse-drawn teams, one Smith Form-a-Truck will easily do the work. Loaders and drivers' wages are saved. The men on the loading platform work steadily and earn money for you instead of wasting it waiting for slow moving teams to get back.

Horses Must Rest
Your excessively large, horse-drawn equipment costs you money for upkeep on working and non-working days. Stabling, feed, veterinary bills go on all the time—and for steady service all day you must have extra equipment to give the horses a rest.

Expense Stops
Smith Form-a-Truck costs nothing to maintain when it is not working. Stop the motor and the expense stops until you start it up again. There is no non-production expense. And the actual cost of maintenance when Smith Form-a-Truck is running is not only far less than for horses, but less than for any other form of hauling or delivery.

A Big Guarantee
And you can put Smith Form-a-Truck at work in a few hours. Simply attach it to any Ford, Maxwell, Buick, Chevrolet, Dodge Bros., or Overland power plant. The truck construction is permanent—fully guaranteed—the mechanical equal of the highest priced truck you can buy.

Rear Axle Carries Load
You know the service value, the economy standard of the famous power plants with which Smith Form-a-Truck can be used. And the power plant only pulls the load. The Smith Form-a-Truck carries it—90% of the entire load rests on the sturdy Smith Form-a-Truck rear axle.

Be One of 30,000
Don't put up with wasteful expense in your hauling or delivery for another day. Get your order in for Smith Form-a-Truck now. Be one of the 30,000 sure of getting delivery this year. Join the 10,000 present satisfied users.

If you have any doubt, ask for a demonstration. It will be a revelation to you to see the actual money saving Smith Form-a-Truck will make for you.

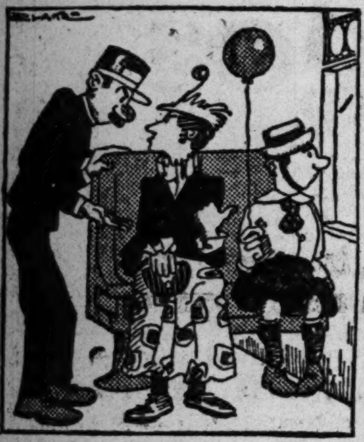
Jimmie Lyons: I got on a slow train. I told the conductor about the slowness of the train, and he told me if I didn't like it I had better get out and walk. I said: "I would, but my folks don't expect me until the train gets there."

In the seat right in front of me sat a mother with her fat boy. She handed the conductor a half fare ticket and the conductor said, "That boy is too large to ride on a half fare ticket." "Well," said the mother, "he wasn't that way when he got on."



In the seat in back of me sat an old man, 97 years of age. He had a long gray beard—knit it himself—of wire work. But he had no hands. I said to him, "Where did you lose your hands?" He said, "Between the engine and the baggage car." I said, "Were you working on this road?" He said: "I was a newsboy on the train the trip before this." I asked him what he was doing now and he said he was shorthand writer for the road.

Brown and McCormick:

"Two goats."

"What is your brother?"

"A politician."

"No."

"Democratic?"

"No."

"Then what are his principles?"

"He has none. Didn't you just hear me say he is a politician?"

"It all depends on how dark the night is and how many shirts are on the line."

"I don't know, but every second person I meet says 'Buy gosh.'"

Census Reveals Chicago Motor Traffic Secrets

By Sheppard Butler.

A GENIAL, ruddy cheeked Irishman over in the city hall has just completed what probably is the most detailed census of automobile traffic ever taken in an American city.

The census man is Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements. For years Mr. Faherty has believed, as a number of other Chicagoans have believed, that the city needs a boulevard link between the north and south sides. When he took office he conceived a novel idea. He opined that, instead of being talked about, the connecting boulevard should be built.

That led to the census. Experience in the widening of Twelfth street had taught that condemnation proceedings against property owners whose buildings must be sheared off to make room for new roadways meant interminable court delays. Agreements seemed better than lawsuits, and to get men to agree to a thing you must submit your arguments and demonstrate that you know what you are talking about.

This being the case, Mr. Faherty set out to learn exactly how badly a new outlet for loop traffic in Chicago is needed. For six days last June 245 traffic checkers worked in the downtown district, noting the movements of every vehicle. Then seventy-two clerks went to work compiling and tabulating the mass of information. In six months—with night work during four and a half of them—the job was virtually complete. It would have taken one clerk 6,142 working days, or twenty years and seven months, to do it alone.

At the Rush Street Bridge.

The figures, made public last week, indicate that the narrow, winding approach to the Rush street bridge is probably the busiest spot in the world, so far as automobile traffic is concerned. Though eighteen entrances to the loop district were open on the days the census was taken, it was found that 45 per cent of all the automobiles checked used this one restricted passageway.

During the six days 43,761 automobiles entered and left the downtown district—an average of 7,294 a day. This figure, however, does not give even a hint of the extent of downtown traffic, for the machines counted made a total of 299,762 movements into and out of the loop.

In other words, automobiles crossed the Rush street bridge an average of 22,482 times a day—or 1,874 times an hour—between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. This takes no account of the thousands of horse driven vehicles or of the heavy evening traffic, which was not noted.

Some of the machines checked made but one trip into or out of the loop on a single day; some made as many as 165 movements during the six day period. The automobiles were found standing 137,050 times, which, in the census, is added to the number of movements, making a grand total of 436,112.

More than 90 per cent of all machines, it was found, use four entrances to the downtown district—Rush street, Washington boulevard, Jackson boulevard, and Michigan avenue.

95 Per Cent "Business Cars."

A suggestive comment on the development of the motor car from a pleasure vehicle to one of plain business is contained in another item of the census. Every machine which stopped in the loop to permit its driver to do business with stores, banks, or offices was set down as a "business machine," as were all those belonging to physicians, firms, or corporations. Those which passed through were counted as "pleasure cars."

On this basis 87 per cent of the cars were shown to be used for business purposes. Adding those of the others known to be used by their owners in their regular occupations, Mr. Faherty concludes that 95 per cent of all machines owned in Chicago are used for business as well as recreation.

The traffic census went into detail in a fashion never before attempted. Notes were made of the points at which each car was found standing in the loop, and the exact time it remained in each place. Separate checks were made of the theater and hotel traffic in the early evening, of the automobile trucks, and of the Sunday traffic.

Even the number of passengers who got out and who returned to each machine at each stop was recorded. For example, it was found that on June 22 1,164 automobiles stopped in front of the Congress hotel and 1,872 persons from these machines went into the building.

Getting Everybody's Number.

Not content with the data, Mr. Faherty directed that every automobile license number be recorded. These numbers have been lookd up and their owners' names are on the lists. Every man or woman whose car entered the downtown district between June 21 and June 27, 1916, can find out precisely what that car was doing as soon as this part of the records is tabulated—provided, of course, Mr. Faherty's staff isn't busy on something else.

"I'll tell them," he said yesterday. "I don't mind digging into the records if they're curious. But I won't divulge any secrets to any one except the owner himself."

As an example of what was done, the count shows that one widely known automobile dealer was found going south at the Rush street bridge daily between 8:30 and 9 a. m. and from four to eight minutes later going south at Michigan avenue and Twelfth street. He returned over the same route between 6:03 and 6:30 each night. On June 23, however, he came into the loop at 3:15 p. m. and left at 3:30, returning at 4:20 and leaving again at 4:40—evidently in a hurry about something.

Another automobile man entered and left the loop seventy-eight times during the six days. He stopped at the First National bank once each day. One day he was found in front of the Stratford hotel six times and on three other days five times each. Many stops at the Congress and Sherman also were recorded.

So you see, if you're driving about downtown it would be well to be circumspect. It isn't likely that they'll take another census this year, but they might.

First "Lincoln Highway" Yields Name to Others.

THE central motor route through Colorado will no longer be organized under the name "The Lincoln Highway Association of Colorado," but will be known in the future as "The Colorado Division of the Pike's Peak Ocean-to-Ocean highway." This decision, made at a convention held at Colorado Springs on March 14, recalls an interesting bit of road history.

On Feb. 7, 1912, the counties of central Colorado sent representatives to a meeting, at which was organized an association to promote a highway entering the state east of Burlington, Colo., and passing through Colorado Springs, Manitou, Hartsel, Leadville, Glenwood Springs, Rifle, and westward to the Utah line, with the object in mind of affiliating with routes connecting to the east and west and eventually forming a transcontinental highway association. After this meeting the name "The Lincoln Highway Association of Colorado" was selected. This was the first time the name had ever been officially adopted by any road organization.

Fifteen months later came the organization of the national coast-to-coast highway association, which in June, 1913, adopted the name "the Lincoln highway. For a time, even after the National Lincoln Highway association, with headquarters at Detroit, had selected the route to the north through Nebraska and Wyoming, the Coloradoans refused to yield their claim of priority to the use of this name. But later the Pike's Peak Ocean-to-Ocean Highway association was organized, affiliating "The Lincoln Highway Association of Colorado" as its Colorado unit, and extending its alignment from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast. Therefore at the annual convention it was decided to abandon the use of the original name in order to avoid further confusion and for the sake of promoting harmony between the various transcontinental road associations.

At this convention plans were made for further development of this central route through Colorado. The secretary-treasurer was authorized to make a contact for the uniform marking of the highway from the Kansas to the Utah line, painting poles and placing the official enameled steel markers.

Two Power Ranges

To Maximize Your Enjoyment Yet Minimize Your Expense

THE PEERLESS Eighty Horsepower Eight is a car of "dual personality." It has two distinct power ranges—each highly desirable for its particular purpose.

You can have tremendous power and abundant speed when and where you want it, without the excessive cost in operating the superpowerful car in ordinary driving. These great advantages have never before been offered in combination. They have been available only in two cars of entirely different and opposite types.

The "Loafing" Range

In ordinary driving you get the velvet smoothness, the keen flexibility and the graceful, effortless performance you would naturally expect from a Peerless.

This is the "loafing" range for your every day requirements and your motor is operating on half rations—consuming so little fuel as to put many lesser powered cars to shame—most sixes, even many fours.

The "Sporting" Range

But open the throttle a little wider to release the double poppets.

Now you have a brute of a car of utterly changed character.

With the "sporting" range in action she has the superpower and thundering speed to cope with any emergency, to contend with any of the other master cars of the day.

A ride at the wheel of a Peerless Eight will show you a wider range of performance than you have ever before found in any one car. Let us explain the double power range to you. We will gladly demonstrate.

War May Mean Curtailment of Racing Season

THE imminence of war may lead to a sharp curtailment of the 1917 automobile racing season. Because of the threatening conditions the 500 mile Memorial day event at Indianapolis was declared off on Friday, and other promoters, it is intimated, are considering similar action in one or two cases.

President David F. Reid of the Chicago Speedway said no change is being considered in the races planned for the Maywood course, but James A. Allison, secretary of the Indianapolis organization, declared its decision to be final.

"Racing," he said, "means taking away from the government the services of skilled mechanics whose services can be used by the army to better advantage in time of war than by a speedway corporation as a means of entertainment. Furthermore, many materials and accessories used in racing will become absolute necessities in a time of conflict."

The new Indianapolis plant built for the manufacture of racing cars is to be turned over to the government for the construction of aeroplane motors.

Nearly forty racing dates were scheduled by the American Automobile association in a revised list issued last week. The speedway events in which championship points for the year are to be awarded included the canceled Indianapolis race and the following:

July 4—Omaha.
July 14—Des Moines.
Sept. 3—Cincinnati.
Sept. 15—Providence.
Sept. 29—New York.
Oct. 13—Chicago.

Of the remaining events thirteen are to take place on speedways and a like number are dirt track events or road races. There is also the intercity reliability run, planned in Chicago and to start from Buffalo in July, and a hill climb up Pike's Peak in September. The Elgin road race is not included, though plans for its revival are well under way and Aug. 18 has been officially sanctioned as the date.

The new speedway at Uniontown, Pa., has scheduled a busy season, starting things off on May 10 and planning no less than five major events. Chicago has arranged for only two—the Derby, June 9 and the championship event in October.

Nearly twenty racing cars which have never been shown in the United States before are to be seen in action this year. These include those of the new Hudson team, the reorganized Stutz and Mercer outfits, the new Dusenberg sixteen valve, four cylinder model, and two Fiats and two Sunbeams to be brought from Europe. David F. Reid, president of the Chicago Speedway park association, has just received word that the last difficulties in the way of the Fiats' purchase in Turin, Italy, have been removed, and that the machines are on their way to the United States.

Detroit Submits a Little Code of Motor Manners

THE Detroit Motor club has issued a guide for motorists as to their attitude toward traffic regulations and toward the public. It is called "Detroit's Code of Manners" and is as follows:

"City ordinances are not necessarily repressive. They are meant to be of aid in the general movement of congested traffic. They are helpful to motorists collectively and are of service to the driver individually. Any given automobile, thus, probably would be smashed to pieces every day were it not for the general protection provided by laws primarily the benefit of all.

"Don't, therefore, be in ignorance of traffic regulations.

"Courteous driving provides a definite insurance protection which otherwise cannot be bought. Accidents and wrecks will not descend upon the ordinarily driven automobile. Statistics show that a huge majority of mishaps result from speeding or from various other forms of carelessness or traffic rule violations. No record exists so far of a railway train having left its track to hit a motor car. The fact that automobiles must first get in front of trains to be hit adds emphasis to the deduction that the more careful and mannerly the motorist is the more certain is the atmosphere of protection and safety he surrounds himself with.

"Don't, therefore, be an obstacle in the path of the progress of automobile good driving.

"It is the belief of this organization that any motorist who makes of these suggestions a part of his daily life will voluntarily forego the practice of many other infractions that are common to automobile use, such as glaring headlights, improper parking, unfair conduct on country highways, and so on."

Standard Gauge Army Truck Needed

THERE are at present two gauges for trucks in use in the United States army, the one and a half ton trucks having a different width from the three ton models. The result has been that the wheels of one type destroy the road made by the other.

This was particularly brought out in the recent army expedition into Mexico. The fact that the trucks had different gauges kept the roads in bad condition, and the cutting made by trucks and mule wagons was such that roads were sometimes rendered impassable.

It is planned to remedy this in the specifications planned for the new fiscal year, beginning July 1, and to have all trucks and mule wagons of the same gauge. What this shall be was considered in Washnigton last week at a meeting of the motor transport board of the war department and members of the truck standard division of the Society of Automotive Engineers. As a part of the general preparedness campaign the latter organization for some time has been giving the war department the benefit of expert advice on all subjects pertaining to military motor transportation.

The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

A Boswell for Motorists.

A Chicago manufacturer has perfected a speed measuring device which writes a permanent touring history—the distance traveled, the speed at which each mile was covered, the date, and whether the driving was done by day or at night. It is especially commended to motorists who know darn well they weren't traveling as fast as the constable said and want something in black and white to prove it.

The record is made by a moving needle which leaves a tracing on a paper roll traveling across the face of the instrument. Horizontal rulings on this indicate miles per hour, and vertical lines mark each mile covered. A roll is good for 5,000 miles. The instrument performs the usual functions of a speedometer, and in addition has a dial lock for short circuiting the ignition to baffle car thieves and a device whereby the speed at which the car is driven may be kept below any specified maximum. Connection with the dash lamp circuit provides the day and night recording feature, a needle switching to "Night" when the lamp is turned on.

"Cord" Tubes Now!

The reinforcement of tires with a corded fabric used successfully for several years in the manufacture of casings now has been applied to inner tubes. Heretofore little has been expected of the inner tube beyond serving as a container for the fluid air. Removal of outside resistance, as when the casing is cut or otherwise damaged, has meant that the tube is forced into the weak spot, with a blowout the usual result. The new cord tube, lined with a sea island fabric knit on a double curve, is designed to bridge across such cuts, holding the air pressure by its own strength.

Fire Extinguisher Insurance.

For 25 cents you may now insure your automobile fire extinguisher against theft, provided it is of the particular make which offers this advantage. If the extinguisher disappears, just prove that it's gone, and you get a new one.

Carry It in Your Pocket.

A particularly compact canvas bucket for filling radiators or gas tanks has appeared in a form which, when open, pours like a pitcher, obviating the necessity of using a funnel. Folded or rolled up, it is small enough to be carried readily in one's pocket.

A Versatile Wrench.

Eleven tools are combined in one in a new wrench. There are eight standard wrenches, an alligator wrench, a screwdriver, and a bottle opener, in four separate members, held together by a wing nut and screw. The tool to be used is slid forward and the butt is tightened. The remaining tools form a handle.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

A new National model to be known as the "sport phaeton" has appeared. It is a close coupled four passenger roadster providing as a special feature three dustproof compartments, finished in Circassian walnut, for the storage of touring impedimenta.

W. D. Padelinette, the newly appointed Chicago distributor of the Pilot car, expresses the belief that his machine has one of the best names in the automobile world. "It means something," says Padelinette. The Pilot has been built in Richmond, Ind., for several years, but is new to Chicago.

More than 11,000 employés—90 per cent of the total—had responded to the Firestone Tire and Rubber company's stock distribution plan by becoming stockholders when the books closed last week. The stock was sold at $100 a share, although the market quotation was $145.

Makers of the Elgin are planning additions to their Chicago plant sufficient to treble their present factory space and provide for an output of from 20,000 to 25,000 cars a year.

An Evanston sales and service station for the Woods "dual power" car has been opened at 1017 Davis street.

To show just how light the Marmon really is in proportion to its size several dealers in various parts of the country are displaying touring cars with scales under each wheel. One reports readings of 836 and 802 pounds for the front wheels and 800 and 892 for the rear. The car on the scales was only partly filled with fuel and oil.

The engine of the new Kissel "double six" is described as of the V type, with four blocks of three cylinders each, set opposite at an angle of 60 degrees. Valve in head construction is used, and the makers claim eighty-two brake horsepower.

Fifty Saxons are now being "driven away" daily from the factory at Detroit, Chicago being one of the cities supplied by the overland route. The drives will continue until the freight congestion is relieved.

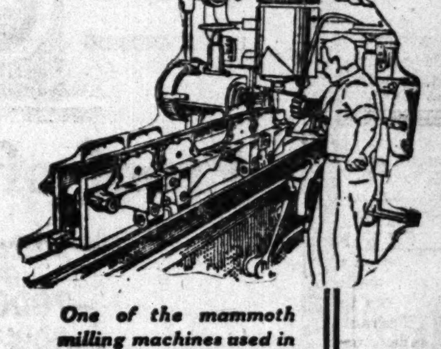
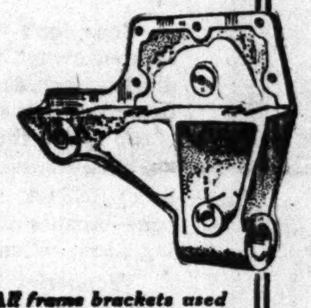
GMC GENERAL MOTORS COMPANY TRUCKS

TRUCK TALK
No. 11



One of the mammoth milling machines used in machining GMC brackets. These machines were especially designed and built for the General Motors Truck Company.



All frame brackets used on GMC trucks are carefully and accurately machined on all surfaces that come in contact with the frame.

Frame

The frame of a truck carries the whole load. In GMC trucks all frames are designed and materials selected to best meet the hardest service conditions.

As an indication of their superior construction consider the frame brackets—for, without question, improperly made and carelessly attached Brackets are the source of much trouble and expense to the truck owner.

All brackets on GMC Trucks are machined on all surfaces which come in contact with the frame. In this way there is close contact at every point and the bracket fits.

We are one of the few manufacturers putting machined brackets on the frame. Without proper machining the brackets cannot be securely attached, and sooner or later they work loose.

On many trucks—many seemingly good trucks, too—the brackets are not machined, but are merely rough ground. When placed against the frame the contact is not close and there are always openings or spaces between the frame and the bracket. As the hot rivets are headed over by the pneumatic hammer, they expand in the hole, and the hot metal is driven into the space between the frame and bracket.

The more the rivets are hammered the more the metal is driven into the spaces. As the number of rivets is increased, the attachment becomes less secure. The fin of metal between the frame and bracket makes a firm attachment impossible, consequently any force exerted on either the frame or the bracket tends to pull one away from the other, and sooner or later—perhaps in only a few months service—the bracket becomes loose and the support is lost.

Although the frame brackets may seem to be an unimportant part of the truck, they are important and do have a bearing on the truck's ability to render service—more than that, they are a mighty good criterion by which to judge the frame and the entire truck construction.

For it's reasonable to believe that the manufacturer thoughtful and thorough enough to spend the time and money to make the frame brackets right, has not overlooked the more important features.

Let us tell you more about GMC Trucks—why they render better service—why they are more durable and cost less to run and to maintain.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

I expect to drive from Logansport, Ind., to Grand Rapids, Mich., within the next week or two and would like to have you furnish me with the best route, together with the distance.

L. A. A., Kramer, Ind.

Drive through Rochester, Plymouth, Lapaz, South Bend, 65.7 miles; Niles, Pokagon, Dowagiac, Paw Paw, Kalamazoo, 69.1 miles; Cooper's Corners, Plainwell, Martin, Bradley, Wayland, Moline, and Cutterville to Grand Rapids, 48.6 miles.

There is a knock in my car (1913 E. M. F., run 9,800 miles). I thought it was in the engine, perhaps a wrist pin, but I have taken the valves out and when I crank the machine this knock is distinct. It hits twice to one full turn of the crank, but I discover that it does not knock when the clutch is disengaged. Can the trouble be in the universal joint, and how can the knock be remedied? How can I dim my gas headlights so they will not shine in the eyes of other drivers I meet on the road? Painting them weakens the power of the lights.

O. H., Wheaton, Ill.

It is hard to make a definite diagnosis without seeing the machine and testing it out. However, from what you say I should judge that the trouble is between the clutch and the transmission. The parts probably have become worn and are loose. If this is the case new bushings should remedy the difficulty. Make a careful inspection of the universal joint and also of the gearset. If you find that a light coat of whiting applied to the lenses makes your driving lights too dim, buy a pair of Warner, Osgood, Prismolite, or similar lenses and put them in your lamps. They give a strong driving light and still do not cause any glare.

I am driving a little Saxon runabout, and am considering the advisability of equipping it with 30x3 wheels. Would you advise this and what would be the effect on the motor? Would the speed of the car be increased?

T. A. K., Watseka, Ill.

Exactly the same question was put recently to the editor of Motor Age. His answer was: "Such a change would be practical. With the same gear ratio in the rear axle the motor would, of course, run slower to drive the car a given distance than it would with the smaller wheels. On good level roads larger wheels would give you more speed, and unless you have a great many hills and bad roads the difference in power would not amount to much. The car should be noticeably easier riding."

What do you consider a good textbook on automobiles? I want something that covers all phases of the construction and operation of a machine, together with useful instructions covering repairs. Where may such a book be obtained?

A. B. C., Cave Rock, Nev.

Dyke's Automobile and Gasoline Engine Encyclopedia has been adopted as an official textbook by the Armour institute of Chicago and is as good as any other work on the subject. It covers most of the points connected with the construction, operation, and repairing of automobiles and internal combustion engines. It may be bought from any dealer in automobile supplies or books or may be obtained by addressing the publisher, A. L. Dyke, St. Louis, Mo. Another excellent book is "Automobile Repairing Made Easy," by Victor W. Page, M. E. This book is published by the Norman W. Henley Publishing company, 132 Nasau street, New York, N. Y.

My car has just been overhauled and two new pistons and leakproof rings put in. Previous to this it used little oil and created hardly any smoke. Now it consumes a great deal more oil and produces considerable smoke. What can be the reason for this?

G. W., Chicago.

Undoubtedly your new pistons were improperly fitted. It also may be that your cylinders have become scored. If this is the case it would account for the use of a large amount of oil and also for the excessive smoking. If the pistons are fitted all right the leakproof rings should prevent most of the oil from getting past the pistons. Try the car a while longer and see if the pistons will not become worked in better. If the trouble continues go to your repairman.

Why is it necessary to equip automobiles with differential gears? It occurs to me that this is a most interesting subject and one which many of your readers would like to know something about.

E. G. Henry, Chicago.

Differential or compensating gears are necessary in order that the rear wheels may revolve at different speeds when the car is turning corners, while at the same time both wheels are being driven by the motor. The gears are automatic and operate according to the resistance of the road against the wheels. There is more resistance to the turning of the inside wheel than there is to the outside wheel, therefore the latter revolves the faster. It is obvious that the outside wheel should travel the faster of the two for the reason that it is obliged to travel a greater distance as the machine swings around turns and curves. In fitting the differential to the axle it is necessary to divide the axle into two pieces. These two pieces are placed end to end, in perfect alignment, with the differential between them. The differential is operated by bevel gears.

When are the annual touring books for this vicinity usually published and which is considered the most complete and authentic?

H. C. McA., Chicago.

There are several road guides on the market, and most of them are placed on sale late in the spring in order to bring the information as near up to date as possible. One of the most complete guides is the Automobile Blue Book, which comprises nine separate volumes for the year 1917. Vol. 4 will cover Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky, while Vol. 5 will include Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Missouri. In addition there will be a book containing routes within a radius of 150 miles of Chicago. I understand these books are to be out about May 1.

Will you please give me what information you can in regard to making a trip from Cedar Rapids to Los Angeles? When is the best time to go and are the roads likely to be rough? How are the grades? Have a seven passenger, four cylinder, 1913 car and will carry three passengers. What trail is the best and where may I obtain maps and road guides? What provisions should be made for carrying us across the desert? I will appreciate a frank expression of your opinion.

L. B., Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Everything considered, the Santa Fe trail is perhaps the best route to Los Angeles, though one might take the Lincoln highway to San Francisco and then go south from there. The southern trip is the more interesting of the two. Drive from Cedar Rapids to Ottumwa and take the Chicago, Kansas City and Gulf highway to Kansas City, at which point pick up the Santa Fe trail and follow it clear through to Los Angeles. Both routes are excellently marked and are easily followed, even without a route book. None of the grades is likely to cause you any trouble. In fact, there are fewer on this route than on the Lincoln highway. The desert country no longer holds any terrors for the motorist, as it is crossed by a good road. When the desert is reached you should have a good supply of water and gasoline, both of which are easily obtained. Any quantity of literature covering this trip, and also a map of the route, may be obtained by addressing the Automobile Club of Southern California, Los Angeles. This organization signboarded the route and does many things to assist the tourist. Lincoln highway information and maps may be obtained by writing to the Lincoln Highway association, Detroit, Mich. I would advise making the trip most any time after June 1.

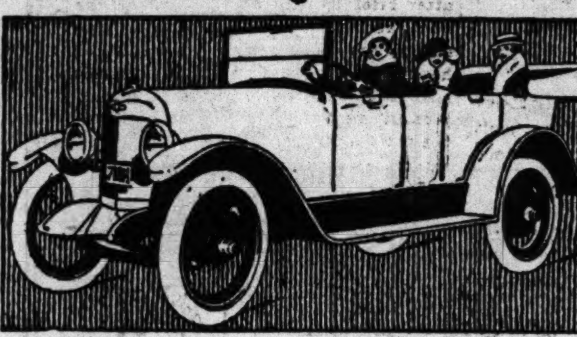
MOLINE KNIGHT

40 H. P. (118-inch wheelbase) $1495



50 H. P. (122-inch wheelbase) $1840

Proof of Low Upkeep

—14 to 16 miles per gallon of "gas" (20 miles is common after 5,000 miles of use)
—7000, 8000 miles and up, on tires
—80% LESS carburetor and ignition trouble
—No expensive valve grinding
—No carbon troubles
—No expense for valve adjusting
—Very slight depreciation
(Because the Moline-Knight motor is BETTER after 60,000 miles of use than even when new!)

You don't find Moline-Knight cars "stored away" these days. The cost of driving, including fuel, tires, repairs and depreciation, is so small that it is nearly as cheap to use them as to have them standing idle.

QUICKLY and SMOOTHLY they run—because of their silent, powerful, sliding sleeve-valve motors.

Wonderful high-gear flexibility—2 to 50 miles an hour. Ability to accelerate on steep grades. More than enough power. Off like an arrow when you "step on 'er."

The "springiest" springs you positively have ever ridden over. Make the car ride like its wheelbase were 10 inches longer.

Any time a Moline-Knight user has to sell he can get almost what he paid for it. Try to buy a used Moline-Knight and prove it for yourself.

Come on down and let us show you what we've got. If you don't say that it's the best buy on the row within hundreds of dollars of its price, the ride is on us.

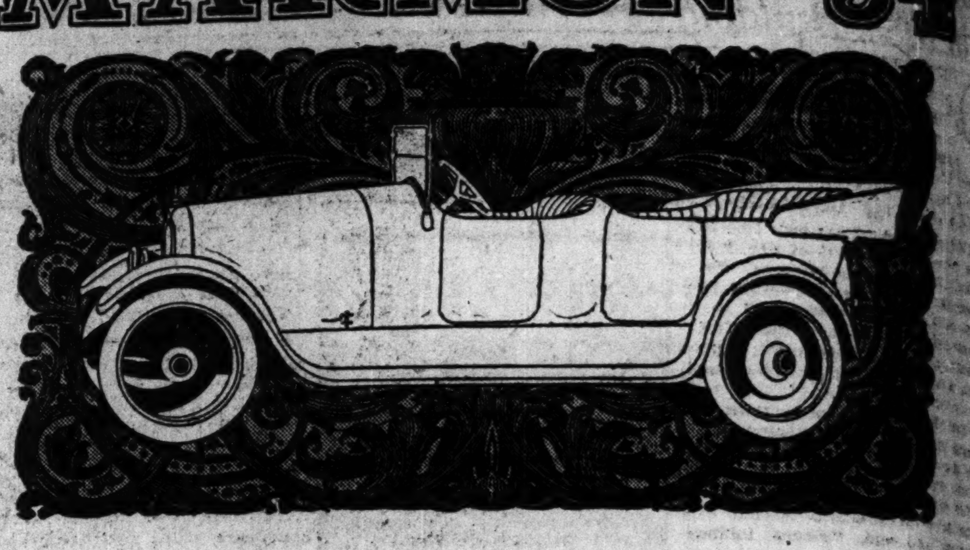
MARMON 34



Beauty More Than Varnish Deep

Though it be clad in the beauty of a thousand stars, yet if it has not truth, it is an abomination. A well proportioned body and a sleek surface may cover, to the eye, a multitude of sins.

The Marmon 34 has the beauty of simplicity, the perfect line, the graceful curve, the delicate balance, and the poise that power gives.

Unadorned, undecorated, without frills or furbelows, the Marmon 34—exquisite in every detail of refinement—is a joy to the beholder.

But lift the hood and gaze into the heart and soul of the car—the engine. Here is where character is disclosed; here are truth and honesty, intelligence and experience.

Examine the bearings, consider the oiling system, count the grease cups, note the rear axle design, challenge the steering device.

Weigh it, test it, examine every detail—the Marmon 34 welcomes microscopic inspection.

Then ride in it, drive it—a quick turn through crowded traffic, a long stretch through open country.

Beauty is truth, truth beauty. In this belief the Marmon 34 is built.

Illinois Township Sets New Record in Road Building

DOWN in Stockland township, Iroquois county, Ill., near the Indiana state line, they are building a six and one-half mile stretch of roadway which may mean big things in the development of paved country roads for motor tourists.

Brick roads cost money—usually from $12,000 a mile up, and mostly up. For this reason brick paving projects have failed frequently in the middle states when the matter of bond issues, taxation, and such has been put up to the voters of the various sections affected.

But now comes Stockland township with a brick road which is being built at a cost of $8,700 a mile, complete. It is the first road of any considerable length to be constructed according to the specifications used and sets a new record in the matter of low cost.

The plan comprises a nine foot monolithic brick strip with a nine foot earth road on each side, the whole making a smooth, well surfaced twenty-seven foot highway. A brick slab having a thickness of only five inches has been approved by the state highway engineer as sufficient for all traffic requirements. A one inch concrete base is spread first and the bricks, when laid, are rolled from side to side instead of lengthwise.

A cement filler is then applied, and the finished pavement "cured" by being covered with a layer of earth.

About half the work was completed last fall before the cold weather set in, and scores of highway officials and road builders from various parts of the United States have inspected the completed portion.

The novelty of the experiment lies in its remarkably low cost, the thin concrete base (a much thicker base is usually installed), and the comparative shallowness of the brick surface. When the road is completed this summer its wearing qualities will be observed closely. If these prove good it is likely that the construction type will be widely used in other parts of the country.

The Voice of the Motorist

Good Roads and License Fees.

[Automobile Editor of The Tribune.]—Picture Illinois with 4,000 miles of straight, broad highways, comparable to the splendid roads of California, and radiating from Chicago direct to every neighbor state, touching every community in the state with more than 2,000 population, and actually opening for the first time the fine, rolling prairies of Illinois to the people of the state. The picture is nearer a reality now than ever in Illinois history. Gov. Lowden and the other state officials have expressed their approval of the plan and the bills are before the present session of the legislature that will make the roads a possibility. After that it will be for the people to say whether they will indorse the movement to pull Illinois out of the mud.

The $60,000,000 which it is proposed to spend during the next twenty-five years in completing the main highways is to come from the motorists in increased license fees. The Meents bill in the house and the Dunlap bill in the senate propose to submit to the voters at the general election of 1918 a plan to build substantial, lasting roads by a 100 per cent increase in license fees. The building of these great arteries is counted on to stimulate the counties in favor of bond issues for the other 12,000 miles of good roads already designated as state aid roads by the boards of county supervisors.

The roads will be built under the direction of the new department of public works and independent of any county aid. The bills specifically state that the [illegible] serial bonds and their interest will have the first lien on the increased auto license fees.

This will necessitate a peculiar knowledge at the general election, for the voters will not only have to express their approval of the plan but will have to vote favorably on a provision in the bill that the motor funds will be used for the purpose promised. The Illinois constitution provides that bonds must be paid for from the general fund, so the election will in effect pledge the faith of the state that these funds, while turned into the general taxation fund, will be used for the construction of the roads planned. The bills also provide that they are not repealable.

The present plans contemplate at least seven great trunk lines out of Chicago, running to the Wisconsin, Iowa, and Indiana state lines. In addition, there will be Illinois' share of the great national roads to be built, the Dixie highway to the south, the Grant highway to the west, and the Old National trail across the southern end of the state. Much remains to be done on these roads.

The increased automobile license will mean less than a single $10 bill to the average individual car owner.

Rapid travel to practically any part of the state on roads as good as the best.

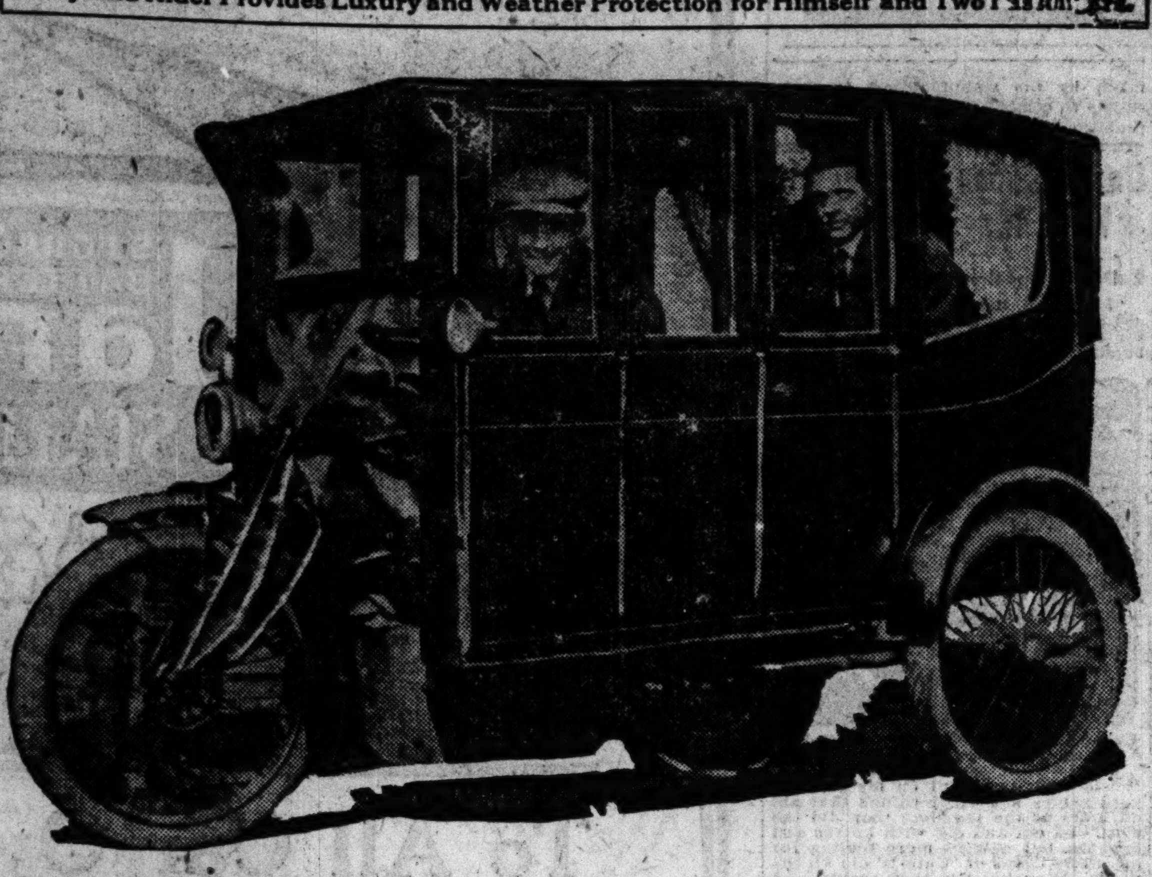
A MOTORCYCLE LIMOUSINE

Maryland Rider Provides Luxury and Weather Protection for Himself and Two Passengers.



Here's the first motorcycle limousine. A Cumberland (Md.) enthusiast built it to prove that the humble motorcycle may easily be made as "classy" an affair as its twelve cylindered big brother of the motor world. An ordinary "rear car" chassis was used as the basis for a body which extends forward beyond the handle bars of the machine, providing protection for the driver as well as two passengers. There is a glass shield in front, and the interior is elaborately upholstered.

Now Is The Time To Buy Your "Six-46"

Let us again urge you to place your order for a Fairfield "Six-46."

Don't wait too long—don't be too sure that you can buy to just as good advantage thirty or sixty days from now.

For the spring season is nearly here and it is certain that we shall not be able to supply more than one-fifth of the demand for this popular car.

Then, also remember that the cost of manufacturing, materials and labor is still soaring.

With the single exception of the Fairfield, every light Six on the market has been increased in price, anywhere from $100 to $250—and more "raises" are undoubtedly coming.

If it were necessary for us to purchase the material for any of our models today, we couldn't attempt to sell them without increasing the price twenty per cent.

So, from every angle, you see, the Fairfield is a "preferred buy" right this minute. By contracting for our supplies more than eight months ago, we have done everything that we possibly could to protect ourselves and you. But in the face of a constantly rising market we may be forced to increase prices proportionately.

From the present outlook, there is no other alternative, for we flatly refuse to compromise on the quality of our cars. We shall continue to use only the best materials no matter how far the commodity prices may advance.

Above all, please understand that this advertisement is written in a sincerely helpful spirit. It is by no means our purpose to "stampede" motor car buyers into early or ill-advised purchases.

We are merely telling you the facts—facts that can be readily substantiated by your banker or any man who is well informed in regard to industrial conditions.

The "Six-46" now costs $1375. At that price we honestly believe that it represents more actual dollar for dollar value than any other motor car on the market.

Wait too long—and you run the risk of paying more.

Place your order now and you can rest assured that you will never regret the decision.

The Check on the Coal Bin

THE hissing, knocking radiator wastes fuel. It is transforming the heat-producing energy of costly coal into merely noise—not warmth.

It is rattling good money into the ash pan. This wanton waste can be stopped—permanently—by the Dunham Radiator Trap (pictured above). This device—a part of the Dunham Vapor Heating System—retains every ounce of heat-giving steam in the radiator, but forces out all noise-making air and water.

But silent radiators and conservation of coal are but two of the advantages of Dunham Heating. There are many, many more—each vital, comfort creating and fuel saving.

They are all explained in our unique booklet—"The 3 H's." Send for it today. There's great profit for you in its cheerful message of heat, health and happiness.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Expert Picks an 'Ideal' Car from American Makes

AN automobile fan down east, who is also a confirmed thirty-third degree football expert, had occasion to visit the New York and Chicago automobile shows. First one exhibit and then another attracted his interest and attention. He liked certain features of one car so well that he left his name and address with the ubiquitous salesman. Then he happened on something else that struck his fancy in another car down the line, and again he let himself be recorded as a "prospect." It happened over and over.

A day or two later he found he might just as well give up his regular work, for all the time he had to devote to it. One after another the salesmen called to emphasize the virtues of the makes they represented. The football expert, who had stored up a bit of technical knowledge of his own, got blue in the face meeting argument with argument.

"Why," he asked himself, "can't I get precisely what I want?"

One day an inspiration dawned. For years the football expert had helped pick "All America elevens" at the end of the season—imaginary teams made up of the best available players for each position, without regard to where they might be found.

"Why not an All America car?" he mused. "If I can't get just what I want, at least I can figure out what it would be like."

He did. The results are set forth in an adjoining column—spread upon the records without shame for all engineerdom to jibe at.

Undoubtedly the All America car has faults a-plenty. Perhaps it couldn't be built, though the expert thinks it could, with certain necessary changes of proportion and measurements. One designer who has seen the specifications snorted: "Huh! It's five years ahead of the industry."

"Time the industry caught up," was the fan's reply to that.

In planning his All America car this man guided himself by the belief that the "ultimate car" will have to be fitted to all driving conditions and be within reach of the pocketbook of the average man who really wants a good automobile. He set down his requirements and his way of meeting them thus:

Moderate price—Under $2,000.

Economical operation—(Kerosene?)—Four cylinder motor.

Operable in any climate—Air cooled.

Smooth running motor—Sixteen valve; balanced crankshaft.

Simple drive for women—Magnetic transmission.

Sure starting anywhere—Special starter.

Here and there the All America designer yielded to the temptation to introduce an idea or two of his own. These included certain devices not yet commonly used, but being developed—such as a special kind of gasoline-kerosene carbureter, a sure fire winter starter, a regular carbon remover, and a new convertible pump.

And so there's the layout. What do you think of it? Will such a car, or something like it, ever be built? If so, when? Expressions of opinion are invited. If any of them are sufficiently interesting the automobile editor will print them.

Motor Notes.

Illinois is by no means at a standstill in the matter of good roads work. William W. Marr, chief state highway engineer, has announced a list comprising about eighty miles of new state aid roads, for which contracts will be up for letting on Wednesday, sealed bids to be received at the state highway commission's office in Springfield until 11 a. m. on that day. The list covers work in sixteen counties and provides for brick, concrete, bituminous, and water bound macadam, gravel, and earth roads.

Driving from El Paso to Deming, N. M., the other day, a fleet of new Studebaker machine gun cars made an average speed of twenty-five miles an hour over what are described as the worst roads in Texas. The trial was part of a comparative test to determine what type is best suited to the needs of the army.

"Going up" note: The prices of six Willys-Overland models will be increased April 1. The light four touring car and roadster will cost $30 more, the "country club" goes to $795, the Willys-Knight four will be $1,395 instead of $1,285, and the two types of light delivery wagons will be considerably more expensive. The big four and light six touring cars will join the advance on May 1.

Nine Kissel trucks left Hartford, Wis., last week for a 1,200 mile "factory drive" to Baltimore. This is one of the longest overland runs undertaken by the manufacturers in their efforts to combat the freight congestion problem.

Corns Loosen Off With Magic "Gets-It"

2 Drops Do the Work, Painlessly.

"I tell you, before I heard of 'Gets-It' I used to try one thing after another for corns. I still had them. I used bandages and they made my toe so big it was murder to put on my shoe. I used salves and other things that ate off more of the toe than they did the corn. I'd cut and dig with knives and scissors, but now no more fooling for me. Two drops of "Gets-It' did all the work. It makes the corn shrivel and get so loose that you can just pick it right off with your fingers!"

Corns Drive You Mad? Try "Gets-It" and They'll Feel Right Off!

There has been nothing new discovered for corns since "Gets-It" was born. It's the new way—the common-sense, simple, sure way.

"Gets-It" is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Best in War—Best in Peace

THIS is assuredly an admitted fact:
The motor truck which will withstand the rigors of military service will also best withstand the wear and tear of commercial use.

The truck which can operate day in and day out over Mexican trails, with excess loads, at high speeds, and remain intact and trouble free from radiator to rear axle, is the truck also which will cut operating costs to the bone in commercial use on Chicago streets.

This is why the new Winther 1½-2ton Military Duty Truck which will shortly be ready for delivery in Chicago, has established standards of motor car efficiency and economy which are so far above those heretofore possible that it may well be said the Winther marks a new era in commercial car building.

Winther
1½-2 Ton Military Duty Truck

NEVER BEFORE has a motor truck or pleasure car been engineered to the nicety of this new Winther. It is the direct result of the American expedition into Mexico, recently completed. The use of millions of dollars worth of the best rated motor trucks produced in America showed clearly in this expedition that in even so small a matter as the clearance between a spring bushing and pin, truck design was wrong—and thousands upon thousands of costly springs were broken as a result.

TO THE LAST minute detail the lessons of the marvelous test of motor hauling have been applied in the production of the new Winther.

ONLY ONE HUNDRED Winther 1½-2 ton trucks are available for Chicago in 1917. The demand is already so great that we suggest your attention at once. This truck will be backed in Chicago by C. V. M. Service—a service as advanced as the truck itself.

INQUIRIES may be addressed to the undersigned with the assurance that you will be annoyed by no salesman's importunities, nor will your mail be cluttered with "literature."

WE ARE READY however, with our engineers to discuss this truck with interested principals and decide whether it can be of service to you.

Deliveries will be made April 1st.

A Monopoly on Battery Quality

Three exclusive Vesta improvements give the Vesta Storage Battery a monopoly on battery superiority and make it unquestionably the most wonderful battery in the world.

VESTA Indestructible Isolater — The Indestructible Isolater positively locks the plates apart and prevents short-circuits. Entirely immune to the attacks of battery acids.

VESTA Impregnated Wooden Mats — The Impregnated Wooden Mats absorb battery acids as freely as ordinary mats and form a perfect path for the current yet prevent "treeing" and its disastrous consequences.

VESTA Titanium — Titanium, a rare mineral, hardens the lead plates, giving them longer life. It precipitates all minerals and impurities in solution and adds vastly to the efficiency of the battery.

All of these double-life giving features are covered by U. S. Basic Patents belonging to the Vesta. They can be used only by the Vesta.

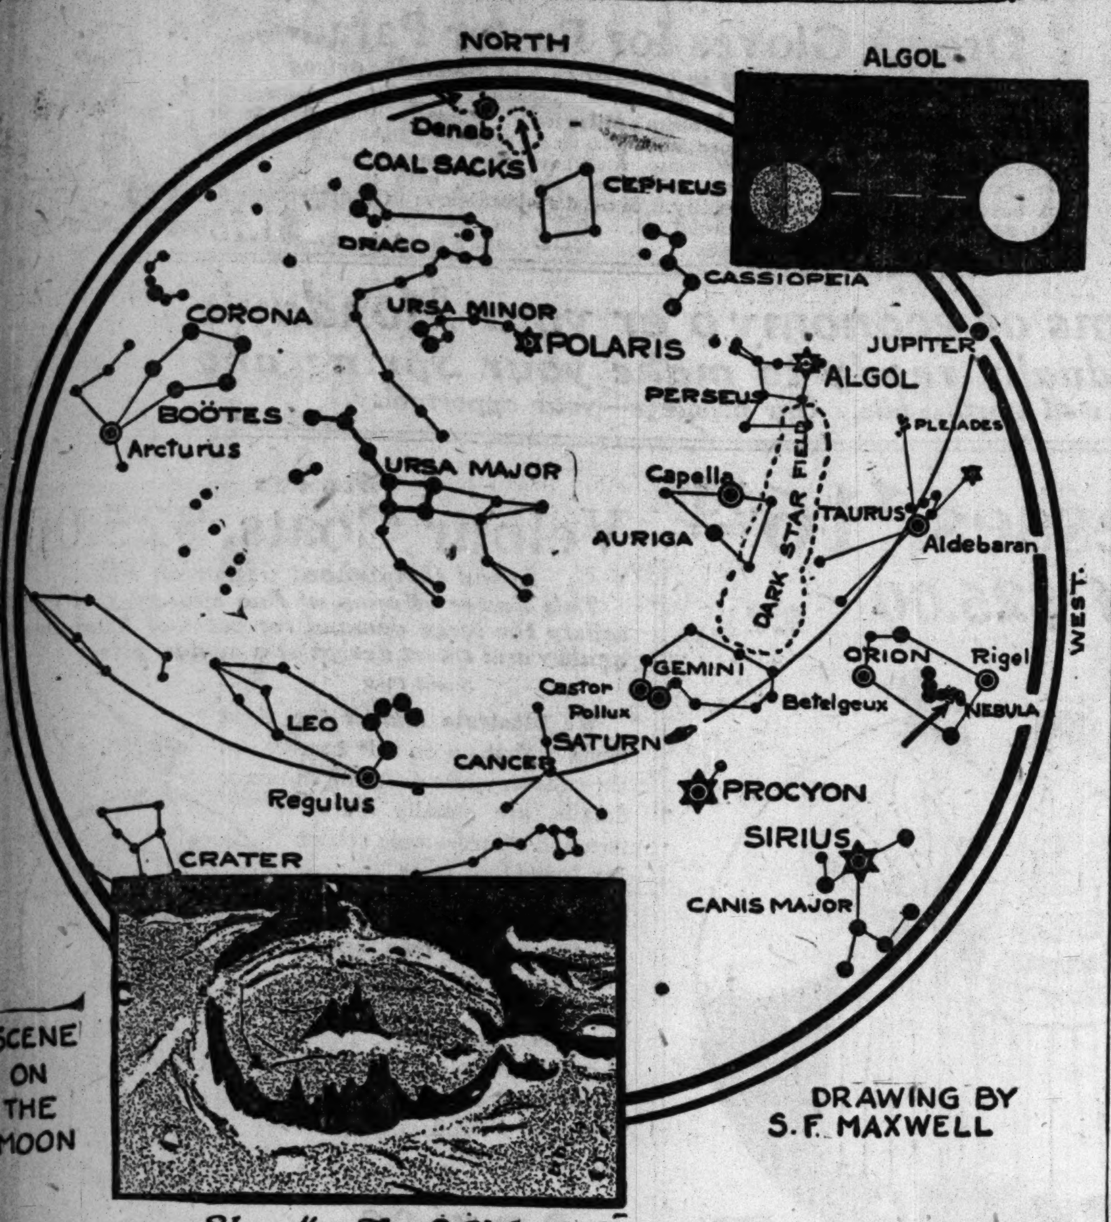
ASTRONOMY



Sky Map For 8 O'clock Tonight

DARK STAR FIELDS ARE INCLOSED IN DOTTED LINES. WELL KNOWN STARS WITH INVISIBLE COMPANIONS ARE INDICATED AS SIX POINTED STARS.

DARK STARS.

IN the sky these evenings are a number of conspicuous or well known stars which have dark companions. Sirius, the most brilliant of all suns visible in these regions, has an invisible attendant. This was discovered through irregularities in the path of Sirius. The only force that could cause an irregularity in movement would be a force of attraction, gravitation, exercised by another mass.

The effect of the force was observed and it was known that a dark sun is in a gravitational relationship to the bright sun. The point emphasized now is that the companion is dark.

Algol, the Winking Demon, has a dark companion. It directly affects the light which comes from the living sun and can be detected in this fashion by the naked eye. It partially eclipses its bright companion and makes itself known by its shadow. Our sun is 866,000 miles in diameter. The dark companion of Algol is 840,000 miles in diameter. Here is a dead sun which in diameter is virtually the equivalent of the star which makes life possible on earth.

Polaris, the pole star, has two dark companions. The Milky Way is filled with dark stars. In the north is Deneb, a star rated as nineteenth in the list of twenty brightest stars. It forms part of the Northern Cross. In the region near Deneb is what is called a coal sack. A coal sack is, seemingly, a casement opening upon infinite void. No stars shine beyond it. It seems to open upon the depths of unlighted infinity.

The coal sack contains dark stars. On the sky map above is defined, within dotted lines, a region known as a dark star area. Near at hand, in our own solar system, we have the familiar dark objects which have been molten and now are cold—the moon, a frozen mass of lava. The planets are either wholly dead or, as in the case of Saturn, part sun, part dead.

These are illustrations of the progress of evolution, or revolution, celestial bodies which have lost their heat, their energy, and their life.

If evolution be revolution, if the circuit is closed, and if inorganic progress goes from the hottest gases to the coldest condition of complex elements, there must be a resurrection of these dead bodies.

It has been observed since 1892 that three dark suns, not far, for stellar distances, from the earth, have struck swarms of smaller bodies and have been brought into heat and energy again under the bombardment. The process of returning them to the nebulous condition of the hottest, simplest gases was begun when they encountered this new force, which would be the force of resurrection.

The process, if these theories be true, is the process of eternity—from nebula to helium stars, to Sirian stars, to solar stars, to orange stars, to red stars, to dark stars, to nebula again.

"Made in U. S. A."

Choose that car which will best serve your needs within your means.

This constitutes true economy in the purchase of an automobile.

There is integrity of value in every one of the cars in the Willys-Overland line,—the most comprehensive line of cars ever built by any one producer.

For most families we think the Light Six at $985 and the Big Four at $850 represent just the right combination of the practical with the luxurious, to result in lasting satisfaction.

But the car in the Willys-Overland line best suited to your needs and your means is the car for you to buy with an eye to true economy.

Each has shared in the economies of our greater production—each is, we believe, the dominant value among cars of its kind.

Let us help you choose the car that for you individually will best exemplify true economy.

Come in and see how much car $850 will buy in the Overland Big Four or $985 in the Overland Light Six.

KEEP YOUR DOG CLEAN—INTERNALLY

The majority of dog ills are caused by stomach or intestinal impurities. Frequently—worms are the trouble.

Dog owners are sometimes puzzled to know what to do for a dog when he very evidently requires attention internally. Here is the method used by many famous breeders of dogs:

Every ten days or two weeks they administer Vermilax Worm Remedy, which serves a many sided purpose. First—It acts as a tonic and general conditioner. Second—It positively removes all worms which may be present in the stomach or intestines and thoroughly cleanses these organs of impurities.

Vermilax is a strictly vegetable preparation—humane—non-prostrating. It won the Gold Medal at San Francisco, 1915. Try it "For Your Dog's Sake."

Vermilax Worm Remedy and others of the famous Vermilax Dog Remedies are sold by Buck & Rayner, 6 stores, Public Drug Co., and other druggists. Also sold by Von Lengerke & Antoine, Kaempfer's Bird Store and Atlantic & Pacific Bird Store. Fuller-Morrisson Company, Wholesale Distributors.

FOR SALE—A HOME OF UNUSUAL VALUE AT TRACY, ON THE RIDGE.
We have for sale the large, commodious home formerly owned by Col. E. L. Roberts, president of the E. L. Roberts Lumber Co. This house was built by him for his home and is one of the best built houses in the city. It was built a number of years ago before the high cost of building materials and could not be duplicated today for one-half more. The house has a large reception hall with fine living rooms on each side. In back of one of the living rooms is a library beautifully paneled and a real private library beautifully lighted and heated. In back of the other living room is the dining room, where a Thanksgiving dinner could be served and no one crowded. The model kitchen and pantries lead off from this. The bedrooms are all large and well lighted. Lot 150x350. Fine elevation on the hill and an east and south exposure. We would be pleased to show this home by appointment and can offer to such a most excellent bargain. Call or write for full particulars.

FOR SALE—WHEATON—
This charming home site was chosen years ago because it is convenient to transportation, located on high ground, and beyond the smoke line of Chicago.
Realizing that while a residence can be built in a very short time, it takes many years to beautify the grounds, a good deal of time and money was devoted with this idea in view. Plantings of thousands of shrubs and trees, both ornamental and fruit, delight the eye.
The buildings consist of a small house, a modern building suitable for a stable or garage, chicken house, etc.
The property has a frontage of 528 feet, extending to a street at each end, and a depth of 333 feet, thereby assuring privacy for all time.
With a modern residence, such as the owner had contemplated, it would be a delightful home.
Interests on the Pacific coast, requiring undivided attention, is the only reason for the willingness to part with it. Price, $13,500.
For further information phone Franklin 3184, or call at 727 N. President-st., Wheaton.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Louisiana.

GROUND FLOOR

The New Orleans Great Northern Railway opens for farm settlement the immense acreage of the great lumber company lands along its lines in Mississippi and Louisiana.

Growing towns, churches, schools, lumber companies, shipbuilding, turpentine distilleries, pine oil, and paper mills have sprung up all along the line of the railroad, but timber being the chief asset, the land itself, regardless of its great agricultural worth, has been carried on the books at a mere nominal value.

As the timber is being cut and the stumps and discarded tree trunks and limbs in the logging field are being ground into pulp for pine oil, turpentine, and the manufacture of paper, an immense acreage of virgin land close in to the railroad, towns, factories, churches, and schools is being left for farm occupation.

Unless the railroad settles these lands with farmers it will fail to provide for a chief source of revenue when the timber is gone, and the railroad, with its future means of support materially at stake, will therefore afford every aid in the matter of prices, terms, and co-operation in obtaining settlers on the land.

Write Walter S. Ayres, industrial commissioner, N. O. G. N. Ry., 864 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., how to obtain first hand a desirable farm out of this great body of cheap virgin land.

WORK FOR YOURSELF

HAVE YOU a job that you are sure of keeping? When times get hard can you hold that job? When you grow old will you still be able to hold it? These are questions every one should ask himself. If you are drifting along aimlessly, do something! Work for yourself!

IF YOU HAD A FARM HOME you would be independent. In good or bad times you would have money coming in. Farming is a profitable business, and farm products can always be sold. You would get all the benefit from your work; now your employer gets much of it. You would be your own boss. Also, farming is the most healthful occupation, and the country is the best place for your family. Moreover, in producing food you are serving the nation, as success in war or prosperity in peace depends largely on the supply of food.

MR. FARM RENTER, too, do you not think it is time to start working for yourself and not for the landlord?

THE FARMERS today are the most prosperous people in the country. They are getting higher prices for their products than ever before. Potatoes are selling for $3 to $4 a bushel, wheat for $1.95 a bushel, and butter for 40 cents a pound. A recent estimate showed that American farmers are worth fifty-eight billion dollars. You should have your share of this!

NOW is the time to act! ANY ONE can get a farm home now by following my plan. I am offering my fine Michigan lands for only $15 to $25 an acre. Terms, $25 to $100 down and $7 to $10 a month for 40 acres, or lower terms for smaller tracts. They are located in Manistee, Mason, Lake, Wexford, Kalkaska, and Antrim Counties, near good markets, towns, and schools. The crops consist of clover, rye, oats, wheat, buckwheat, ninety day corn, vetch, potatoes, beans, and vegetables of all kinds, and the country is noted for its apples, pears, plums, cherries, and other fruit. Cattle, hogs, sheep, and poultry thrive here. I employ agricultural advisers to help new settlers and to show them the best methods of farming for our district.

EXCURSION SEASON opens Tuesday, March 27th. PRIVATE CARS. Round trip from Chicago, including meals, berth, and automobile trip over the lands, $12.95.

WRITE for a full description of these lands, and I will send you free my 72 page booklet, illustrated with 115 photographic views, together with a large map. Or you are welcome to call for the literature and see samples of 1916 crops and stereopticon views. Office open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, near the Oklahoma line, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs, and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate first comers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

A Rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

AUTOMOBILE SUPPLY BUSINESS—A PROSperous, long established business in Kansas City is seldom on the market, but this is the exception. Your thorough investigation of the automobile supply business, and this one in particular, will convince you of the rare opportunity. You are dealing with the owner, who is retiring on account of personal reasons. The business is at its height of prosperity, with possibilities increasing each year and becoming more permanent as the number of automobiles in use increases, and for this reason all correspondence must be handled confidentially. For past five years the profits have averaged $20,000 net annually, besides a $6,000 salary on a capitalization of $50,000. Our credit and reputation are rated at the highest and the stock is complete, having personally attended to the buying, thus eliminating surplus, antiquated stock. This is an unusual opportunity if you want to get into a busy organization that is showing extraordinary returns on a legitimate, established business. Only replies from parties able and desiring a legitimate business are solicited. Will require about $60,000 cash or secured payments. Book accounts need not be included. Will give my personal services up to one year if desired to help buyer get familiar with the business, in which case will guarantee profit. Here is an opportunity to build a business for yourself that will bring an income of from $15,000 to $50,000 a year, on a plan that is being received with enthusiasm by merchants, bankers, and manufacturers everywhere.

It requires at least $1,000 for merchandise, depending upon the amount of territory you can cover.

Your earnings are limited only by your own ability. If you are a good executive you can hire salesmen, and thus double, triple, or quadruple your earnings.

The men behind this proposition are men of ability, standing, and means.

If you can measure up to this write us fully about yourself to make us want an interview with you.

WHAT CAN I SELL BY MAIL?

I am now in the mail order liquor business, with 50,000 satisfied customers, but practically will be forced out of business July 1, when North Dakota, South Dakota, and Iowa go "bone dry" by virtue of the Reed amendment to the Postal Appropriation bill, passed by the last congress. What can I sell to my 50,000 customers, to whom my name is as well known as the mail order names of the large mail order houses?

Suggestions are solicited in the hope that correspondence may lead to mutual profit. If you have merchandise to sell, which can be sold by mail, or if you have a line or business which my name, trade mark, and prestige might help, write me a letter. If you are an EXPERT WITH IDEAS FOR SALE, write me, as I am in the market for Ideas and Information. Can offer employment and opportunity to the right man. Address L., care of Northwestern Advertising Agency, St. Paul, Minn.
